AROUND TOWN

The Macon Society wishes to extend an invitation to those in Atlanta who share their feelings concerning Ms. Bryant to come to Macon and join in the activities. To reach Central City Park travel south on I-75, then east on I-16 and exit at the Coliseum. Take a right, go over the bridge and turn left at the second red light. This is Walnut Street and it deadends into the park. If the weather is nice you may want to bring a picnic lunch and your camera. The park is a beautiful old place with a "Round House", Antique Locomotives, a foot bridge and a large Gazebo.

For more information write the Macon SIR at 434 Cotton Avenue, Macon, Ga. 31201 or call Johnny Fambro at (912) 746-9193. Donations will also be appreciated.

MACON GAY'S PLAN ANITA BRYANT BOYCOTT AND MARCH

Anita Bryant, the bible-spouting homophobe is coming to the Macon Coliseum this Saturday, December 9 to present a Concert and Macon gays are planning a reception for her.

The Macon Society For Individual Rights has announced the following activities: The day will start with an Orange Juice Breakfast to emphasize the fact that the Macon gays do not oppose Ms. Bryant's right to work. Then a rally is planned at 3 PM in Central City Park. It will continue until approximately 6 PM. From the park the participants will march to the Macon Coliseum and picket the area along Coliseum Drive from 6:30 until 8 PM.

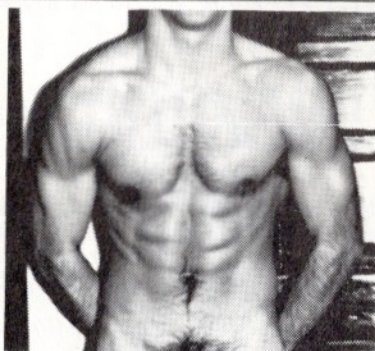

MIKE MOON WINS MR. LEVI-LEATHER CONTEST

There are contests, pageants, competitions, etc., but none can compare when it comes to pure macho with that displayed this past November 24th at P's. The occasion was the 2nd Annual Mr. Levi-Leather Contest. With competition in categories such as "Leather" instead of evening wear; "Shorts" instead of Swim-wear, and "Levi" instead of talent . . . it was a visual delight for the squeezing-room-only crowd.

STRIP CONTEST AT ANIMALS

A small weathered sign beckons the curious; what goes on inside a bar called ANIMALS? On Wednesday evenings, starting PROMPTLY at 11 p.m., a herd of anxious young men strut their stuff up and down a "phallic" stage, amidst taunts of "take it off ... take it off!!" And take it off they do, piece by piece, occasionally getting some help from eager members of the audience with boots, socks, etc. Finally, it's just the animal and his jock strap, or posing pouch, or whatever they have to keep the family jewels warm, grunting, groaning, pushing, pulling, teasing, tantalizing those frothy mouthed and glassy-eyed voyeurs.

The object of all this carrying on is to receive votes from the audience in the form of tickets. When a customer comes in he receives a ticket and then another ticket each time he purchases a drink, so it's quite possible to have 10 or more tickets by the end of the contest. And what those hot performers want is for you to give them your tickets. After all the votes have been collected, two members of the audience are selected at random to count the ballots and the performer that has the most wins the $100 first prize. $50 goes to the first runner-up for his efforts.

For some of the winners, it means a chance to become a regular member of the cast of ANIMALS BURLESQUE REVUE, who under the direction of Robert (?) Applewhite, present some of the most erotic live entertainment to be found in Atlanta. They are especially adept at presenting dramatizations of your favorite and most secret fantasies. There isn't much I CAN say in this publication about their performances. Simply put: you have to see it for yourself. Do it tonight and become an ANIMAL.

"WHEN YOU NEED A FRIEND"

I Cover The Dryfront

by Rascal Davis

The Broadway production of The Wiz is now at The Fox.

Still another cult is making the news. This one is older than most non-denominational sects, it's followers are not easily identified. They don't shave their heads and wear orange caftans or commit mass suicide at the drop of a hat. This cult has followed the legend of a small girl's search for, and realization of, all the happiness to be found right in your own back yard. They made a super star of Judy Garland and recognized Margaret Hamilton long before she was pushing Maxwell House Coffee. Ruby slippers are worshipped rather than Krishna and the journey to Nirvanha is as simple as following the yellow brick road. The cult has been divided into sub-sects and created demi-gods and have given way to Broadway musicals, a new disco album and a 30 million dollar movie to be released later this month.

The road to Oz has been heavily trafficked since L. Frank Baum first laid the yellow brick pavement in 1899. The constant turnover has provided healthy business for the favorite truck stops along the way; Scarecrow's Shanty, Tin Man's Diner and the Lion's Lair. The death toll hasn't increased. Even on holidays, the only two lives claimed on I-YBR are two evil witches. And, of course, everyone's favorite tour gal is still Dorothy. But don't be deceived. Nothing remains unchanged. Not even the wonderful land of Oz.

If you ease on down Peachtree Street to the Fox Theater, you'll find a born-again version of the mighty tale. The Wiz, playing through December 16, is the first of three Broadway musicals scheduled to stop in Atlanta this winter. The project, spearheaded by Gerald Rafshoon, Jessie Hill, Bob Malina and Michael Parver, is a risky test being made in this area. For a long time now, Atlanta has been overlooked whenever the big-wigs in New York were booking the national tours of hit Broadway shows, while decisions to play Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, San Francisco and L.A. are taken for granted. No one has ever looked to the South as being a lucrative market for first-rate entertainment. Even though the Metropolitan Opera has always included Atlanta in their touring season for over twenty-five years.

Grumbling in the market place, letters to the Editors and our city's very arts-conscious government officials have finally taken it to heart to bring in shows everyone hears about, for Southerners to see without making us travel North. It is another step in establishing Atlanta as the arts and entertainment capitol of the Southeast. If response is strong and tickets sell to these three shows (including Chapter Two and A Chorus Line in addition to The Wiz) we can look forward to seeing top rate tours of current Broadway shows every season.

If opening night reaction can be read as any indication, then who needs Broadway — we have Peachtree! The audience rose as one to celebrate the dynamics that had passed before their eyes. For any who has not made it to New York in the past few years to see The Wiz or haven't heard the million-selling original cast album or read the rave reviews that have heralded the show since it opened, this is an all-black, disco version of The Wizard of Oz. The star of the show is still Dorothy, played in this production by Renee Harris.

Ms. Harris displays remarkable energy and possesses an incredibly powerful voice for such a small young woman. Hardly standing still for a moment, she is at once the innocent seeker, the benevolent chum, the courageous witch-slayer and the cunning discoverer of the Wiz' mortality Though she came into the show with virtually no stage experience, she commands the stage from her first appearance. Spry; and loveable as she is, she is almost upstaged by Vivian Bannell as Appaperele, the "atta-girl" good witch of the South. She comes on as camp and comical as any witch has ever been allowed to be. Her characterization as a bungling, vaudeville-type magician takes, perhaps, the most liberties in this new translation and instantly wins over the house. Whether she's choking from the smoke at her entrance or fondling the musclemen who escort her sister, Glinda, she's a loveable old witch, obviously patterned after Pearl Bailey.

The list of fine performances continues to include Ron Taylor as the Lion; Carolyn Miller in the role of Evillene, the wicked witch of the West; Clyde-Jacques Barrett, the Tinman and, of course, Kamal as the Wiz himself.

It's wonderful to see a show play the Fox that is as professionally staged as played as this. Though at times the performers were hard to hear and there were moments when the timing could have been lost or scenes that were less defined in their contributions to the plot than others, the pacing is slick, moving right over the places that might get bogged down. The costumes, by Geoffrey Holder, are a true sight to behold and the dancing (as well as the dancers) are exciting and well defined. There is never an instant in the production that loses the attention of the audience. If you'd decided not to attend this live performance and hold out, instead, for the Diana Ross movie version of the same name (opening December 22) I urge you not to. Nothing is as compelling or fun to watch as a show, live on stage. And this is a finely wrought instrument of entertainment.

Now, about the movie version of the same name. At the time of this writing I had not yet seen it, so don't quote me. But I will relay what I have heard from those who attended prior screenings and what I've surmised from devouring the advance press and listening to the soundtrack. The same name is about all they've kept from the stage version. Dorothy is no longer young, no longer lives in Kansas, no longer is swept away to some enchanted land to be beguiled by fair munchkins. No, Diana Ross is a considerably older

Dorothy, now teaching hoodlums in Harlem. Her yellow brick road leads no further than across the Brooklyn Bridge, through Poppy Alley (at 8th Avenue) into the 1939 World's Fair Pavilion in Queens. Not a rainbow in sight.

But, it makes no never-mind. Good or bad as the move may be, there is considerable wiz-dom involved in the cult growing around L. Frank Baum's old tale.

CRUISE MARKET PLACE

BAHOU CONTAINER

A true indication of the quality of the food is the fact that most all of the employees eat there daily. Shown enjoying lunch are, left to right, David Leonard, Joni Littleton, and Javier Martin.

A true adventure in dining awaits those who have not yet tried the Bill of Fare at the Bahou Container Mediterranean Restaurant & Bar, located in Lenox Square behind Davison's.

Now reopened after three months of extensive remodelling, inside and out, by a host of artists and architects, owner Fuad Bahou now presents Sunday Brunch from 11-3; Sunday Dinner from 5-11; Lunch Monday through Saturday is from 11 'til 5 and Dinner is from 5 'til 11, and on Friday and Saturday the Dinner Hour is extended until midnight with late night hours in the bar.

Although the decor of the indoor/outdoor bar and dining area are in themselves enough to bring you back, it is the quality and freshness of the food which will have you raving to your friends. The food can be classified as "intercontinental" with specialties from all over the world and features nothing but fresh produce, meats, & pastries. Each meal is prepared from scratch, in individual skillets, when ordered. Nothing is prepared in advance. And as mentioned before, there are no frozen or canned goods used.

Manager Sara Homquist proudly proclaims that the food at the Bahou Container is the finest to be found in Atlanta, even at twice the price. And the prices are very reasonable, with the single most expensive item $20 for two.

The paintings which grace both levels of the restaurant were all done by the owner, Fuad Bahou, who is an art professor at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville. The interior design has been the target of myriad compliments and will be featured in an upcoming issue of INTERIORS MAGAZINE.

THE BAHOU CONTAINER, in Atlanta and Knoxville, is a superior restaurant dedicated to offering only the freshest and most wholesome foods in the most aesthetic manner. It is the "Bahou Belief" that good quality foods are the essential elements of our beings - physically and spiritually. To quote Prof. Bahou, "Our body is an incorporated body; we are what we eat."
