4 - CRUISE

FIRST WORD

Halloween! It has got to be my favorite holiday. What a great excuse to dress up and get crazy. This year, I've decided to go out as a ghost ... one that no one can see, that is. Boy, am I going to have a good time. Just think of all the things I can get away with.

First I'll fly over to P's and taste their witches brew and linger among the leather. Then I'll zip to the Annex and catch one of their special production numbers and stop by the Conference Room and see if Frank has on you know what.

Flying over to Texas should be a trip and maybe I'll find myself a Knight in Black Leather or maybe even two! Now, I've got to wing it all the way back to Midtown and show the boys at the Club Baths my BUN-kins (If they're interested) and go by the Callus to see if Earl is really going to be dressed like a bunny. The Armory promises lots of Fantasies fulfilled and I may even be forced to do a number (How 'bout "Me and My Shadow"?). If I get hungry I can slip into the Prince George for a scrumptious dinner and enjoy live entertainment to boot. Now I'll be ready to slide into Backstreet and scare a few Dragons in their Dungeons. After that madness I'll have to stop by the Peachtree Disco and dance a bit and go directly to the Land of Oz, Bulldogs that is. Maybe even Dorothy will be there and Toto, too!

All this flying will sure work up a hunger, so I'll have to stop at Weesa's and get a bite and give Carolyn and Sandy a scare. Now, to the Answer to catch a fabulous show and have a cocktail or two. Next, I just have to stop by the Cove and take advantage of their 2 for 1 specials all night. Crazy Ray'z is next, but OPPSI, their party is on Sunday with Alice and all her wonders. The New Order is next with a very special show at 9:30 and costume contest at 10.

Now it's on to the Great Gay Way, Cheshire Bridge Road. First I'll stop at Numbers and see R.C. Cola and all the gang resurrect stars from the past. The girls at the Sportspage promise lots of surprises and a costume contest too. Now, just for old times sake, I think I'll stop by the old Sweet Gum Head and give those "Real Girls" on stage a real scare.

Arney's is having Kartoon Krazies and I'm sure to win as Casper the Friendly Ghost. Then I'll fly through the top of Sensations' tent and see what Ernesto, Lily and John are up to and then to the Locker Room for tricks and treats.

About now, I'll be feeling very glamorous, so I'll zip to the Pharr Library for "Hurray for Hollywood" and try to win five hundred big ones. Then, it's on to Limelight to enter their Castle of Madness and then I'll be off to Connections to pull a couple of strings (G-Strings, that is) right before flying down to the Uptown to haunt the crowd. Wow, what an evening!

Now remember, as you fly around from place to place this Halloween, be careful. The roads and streets will be a lot busier than the skies I'll be flying. Have a good time and don't do anything a friendly ghost wouldn't do!

THE PURSUIT OF D.B. COOPER Polygram Picture

On Thanksgiving Eve 1971, a nondescript 22 year old man boarded Northwest Airlines Flight 305 in Portland, Oregon. He called himself D.B. Cooper though his real name was J.R. Meade. Soon after the plane took off, he passed a note to the stewardess demanding $200,000 in cash.

His demands were promptly met and when the plane landed in Seattle, the money was delivered along with four parachutes he requested. After the other passengers were allowed to leave, Cooper ordered the pilot to fly him to Mexico.

Somewhere over the southwest Washington timberland, Cooper bailed out of the 727 at an altitude of 10,000 feet wearing a suit and tie and probably a great big smile. He was never heard from again.

It was an act of such daring that it captured the imagination of the entire country making D.B. Cooper a national folk hero. Although a decade passed since this audacious feat took place, "D.B. Cooper" fan clubs are still very much in existence.

Cooper was the subject of one of the most intensive manhunts in American history, yet he appears to have gotten clean away. Thousands of police, the F.B.I. and the military all failed to find him, but his former Green Beret instructor Bill Gruen, working for the Insurance Company, decides to track him down single-handedly. He is as clever in his pursuit as Meade is at evasion and the antics of these two headstrong characters are the core of the rollicking, freewheeling action/adventure/comedy.

Based on the best-selling novel FREE FALL by J.D. Reed, which was inspired by the Cooper legend, PolyGram Pictures' "The Pursuit of D.B. Cooper" brings to the screen an intriguing tale of mystery, suspense, and excitement revolving around three main characters: the crafty culprit D.B. Cooper, played by Treat Williams; his feisty wife performed by Kathryn Harrold who more than spices up the chase, and Robert Duvall as the resourceful pursuer Bill Gruen.

Michael Taylor and Daniel Wigutow, producers of "The Pursuit of D.B. Cooper," their second effort, were both involved in all aspects of the film from its conception through its distribution. Their first effort was "Last Embrace."

Jeffrey Alan Fiskin, was the screenwriter for the film, which was directed by Roger Spottiswoode with Peter Guber and Jon Peters Co-managing Directors.

Friday & Saturday Shows 11:00 - 1:30 - 3:30

Dear Cruise:

I would like to voice my views on an incident that took place Wednesday night, October 7th, at one of our local bars and hope you will print this for everyone to see.

The incident was a contest final. The winners from previous contests on Wednesday nights were to compete for a final grand prize. There were five contests prior to this final. This means there should have been five finalists. There were not. There were eight, and one that did not show. Two of these eight finalists were not even in the preliminary contests. So why were they in the final? And why were there eight instead of five? I followed this contest closely and believe I know what I am talking about. I talked with one of the judges after the contests and he confirmed that two of the contestants were not in the preliminary contests. I thought this was going to be a fair and honest contest. I see now that I was wrong. I am shocked, disappointed and very angry. I will not partake in another contest of this sort and I wonder if the other contestants and the audience knew the contest was rigged.

DJ in Stone Mountain

Dear Editor:

Your recent coverage outlining the NGTF response to the "Family Protection Act" and the Fundamentalist/New Right Lobbies in general continues to graphically illustrate a glaring flaw.

Quite rightly the Task Force is gathering the considerable body of gay supportive resources in social science research, legal and political fields. However, the Moral Majority and its cohorts are ultimately little concerned with these. The foundation of their opposition to Gay/Lesbian self-actualization rests on homophobic bigotry hidden behind a TV Gospel hucksterism.

Where were representatives from the growing ranks of sympathetic religious bodies at the press conference? Even more crucial, why were outspoken champions of the Gay/Lesbian communities from an evangelical heritage such as former presidential candidate John Anderson, Dr. James S. Tinney, and Dr. Virginia Mollenkott not included?

Surely even the naive realize that such bridgebuilders and pro-gay evangelical organizations are proving the most effective in reaching those most easily manipulated by Fundamentalist-New Right distortions.

The failure to risk dialogue with the real majority of thinking evangelicals by a radically secularized subculture coupled with religious liberal elitism can only perpetuate the current non-advance of Lesbian/Gay dreams. Such honest dialogue would effectively break the back of the "Falwell lie" but the gay status quo seems unwilling to pay the price of facing its own "Biblephobia."

Sincerely

Open Letter to the LGT Community:
An hour or so ago, I was refused admission to the Club Baths (76 4th St.). Now ostensibly, this was because I did not have a membership or the $15 fee to purchase a membership on the spot. However, due to the treatment I received, I feel that it was basically for another reason. Now since I'm a transvestite, I wear makeup almost all the time. The person working the door told me that even if I got in I would have to wash my face because I "couldn't walk around like that." I was further told upon leaving, "... and when you come back, don't come in drag," at which point I said, "maybe I won't come back!" Shocking as this may seem, the door-person had the audacity to add, "We don't care if you come back!" Now as a member in good standing with the LGT community in general, and First Tuesday Association, I feel that such rules and treatment are quite wrong. In addition, I feel that it is emotionally cruel and damaging, financially stupid, discriminatory legally, unfair and oppressive, and against all good and intelligent principles. Now the Club Baths (or Club Atlanta as they call themselves now) could have accepted me but they didn't. Therefore, I would simply like to say that it is high time that all gay establishments here learn to recognize and accept their own kind. I have freely supported all gay businesses, political organizations, and individuals in Atlanta for over three years. Now I may be a very feminine sort of guy but I'm still a gay man and the Club Baths are for gay men. Discrimination, judgment and competition are all negative and evil forces in my book and do not have to exist within the gay community. If this infighting and back-stabbing continues within our business system and community, then we'll all have to prepare ourselves to suffer greatly. All the various LGT bars, restaurants, discos, retail stores, and baths exist for a reason and have a right to continue to exist undisturbed by anyone. But if it is permitted that we "come down" on our own people, then you can forget about any unity, solidarity, compassion, forgiveness or understanding among ourselves. The LGT Community of Atlanta, as well as elsewhere, will always have its hands full in dealing with the problems and rigidities the right-wing "straights" cause. Let's not create problems among ourselves. I feel that transvestites (or drag queens) should be permitted to patronize baths anywhere, since practically all of us are, afterall, gay men, and these are the people for whom the baths were created.

SPECTACULAR PRODUCTION NUMBERS HIGHLIGHT THE 46TH EDITION OF ICE FOLLIES AND HOLIDAY ON ICE COMBINED SHOWS

A kaleidoscope of sounds, sights and sensations add magic to the wonder of the all-new Ice Follies and Holiday On Ice combined shows. Extravagant production numbers, featuring the very best figure skating in the world, abound with romance, mystery and adventure in this lavish family entertainment attraction.

Produced by Irvin Feld and Kenneth Feld, the exciting Ice Follies and Holiday On Ice Combined Shows opens in Atlanta at the Omni on Tuesday, November 3rd for 9 performances through Sunday, November 8th.

In the spectacular opening sequence, "Rainbow On Ice," a host of precision skaters perform the exacting and demanding "pinwheel" while Australian Champions, Peter and Elizabeth Cain, display their beautiful and exciting pair skating talents. The lavishly costumed skating cast performs to the strains of such colorful tunes as "Black Magic," "Yellow Brick Road" and "Somewhere Over The Rainbow."

The luxury and elegance of a Parisian evening are recreated when the cast gathers for the ice world's social event of the year — "Le Grand Bal de Paris - 1890." Hosted by the 1980 World Ice Dance Champions, Christina Regoczy and Andras Sallay, beautifully adorned ladies are escorted to the grand ball by handsome and gallant gentlemen, and all skate to the beautiful Merry Widow Waltz.

The arena is magically transformed into King Neptune's domain in the adventurous and romantic "Fantasy of the Deep." Newcomer Allen Schramm portrays a menacing undersea spirit, while German National Pair Champions, Almut Lehmann and Herbert Wiesinger, skate amidst lobsters, seahorses, goldfish and a lovable octopus.

Marching to such glorious tunes as "76 Trombones," "America the Beautiful" and

ART AT THE LIBRARY

The most original Halloween art in the city is now on display in the entrance hall of the Pharr Library. They are a part of permanent display of drawings by Atlanta's leading cartoonist Dug Figley.

The cartoons cover a wide range of subjects from the traditional witches to dancers at a fancy dress ball to fairy tale characters in very non-traditional poses.

The Halloween cartoons are only one in a long series of displays of Dug's work to be exhibited on a revolving basis at the Library. A new display will be presented each month.

Matted copies of all the cartoons displayed are available for purchase by placing an order at the front desk. Greeting cards made from several of the drawings, now on sale in stores throughout the country, are also on sale at the Library.

THE FESTIVAL SINGERS OF ATLANTA

THE FESTIVAL OF ATLANTA SINGERS OF ATLANTA, a new a capella choral group making its debut this season under the direction of J. Marcus Ritchie, presents its first concert Sunday evening, Nov. 8, at 8:00pm, at St. Anne's Episcopal Church.

The twenty-four voice group rehearses and performs with one concept in mind: to interpret both the sacred and secular a cappella literature with as much authenticity as possible. This concept is particularly true of the music of the Renaissance and Baroque eras. St. Anne's church has been chosen because of its reverberant acoustics which approximate that of many fine churches and cathedrals in Europe where the music originated.

Ritchie is well known to Atlanta's musical audiences as the former Organist and Master of the Choirs at St. Philip's Episcopal Cathedral and has conducted masterclasses and workshops throughout the nation under the management of Arts Image, Ltd.

For the group's first Atlanta performance, Ritchie has chosen a program which will begin with the TE DEUM from the 13th century Play of Daniel, sung to the ringing of bells. Featured works will be the double choir MAGNIFICAT and the VENI SANCTE SPIRITUS for four choirs by Palestrina. Motets by Gesualdo and Victoria will be other examples from the Late Renaissance. Contemporary compositions will be represented by two works of Daniel Pinkham, British composers Kenneth Leighton, Sebastian Forbes, and Gerald Finzi, and Poulenc's EXULTATE DEO for eight parts and the FOUR PETITES PRIERES DE SAINT FRANCOIS D'ASSISI for men's voices.

The concert is free and open to the public. For more information telephone 758-8429.

SEVEN OUT OF EIGHT AIN'T BAD

Imagine how I felt! I had such a simple task: to write two articles about the upcoming Mental Health Symposium and give a short synopsis about eight of the sixteen workshops in each one. Well, I blew it! Last week my article on the first eight workshops discussed only seven of the sixteen. After all, though, seven out of eight ain't bad, and besides, that means you still have nine more workshops to read about and get acquainted with.

"Faeries are Magikal Beings" is the first; and with a name like that for openers, you can't help but want to read on. "Faeries are Magikal Beings" will explore the movement in the gay male community toward a positive integration of politics, lifestyle and spirituality. The result of the movement is indeed a sort of Magick which links us to our gay past and provides a bridge to our future together. To learn more about this special kind of Magick, sign up!

"Same Sex Couples: What It Takes to Make It Together" will explore the coupling process among gay men and women. It will be divided into two parts; the first to explore issues, pressures, problems and resolutions, while the second half will draw on the resources of several gay male and lesbian couples who are "making it" and incorporate a panel discussion to discuss perspectives on coupling.

Related to "Same Sex Couples" but unique to men is "Man and Man: Gay Male Couples" which will explore "the dynamics, the difficulties, the delights, the differences, and the decisions involved in men loving and living with men." ... sounds delectable doesn't it?

"How Much is Much? An Intervention When Needed" will be a presentation and discussion about alcohol and how to tell when a loved one is in trouble with drinking. It will focus on how to intervene and get someone to believe they need help as well as exploring ways of arousing the support of friends, family and lovers for person needing help.

If you are one of those weight conscious folks, you should probably take a look at "Fat or Thin: Feeling Good About Ourselves." This workshop will explore eating, fatness, and thinness in an effort to get us to feel good about ourselves in the weight department as well as exploring how weight affects our self-image.

"Developing a Positive Self-Concept" seeks to do just what the title implies. It will explore new ways of perceiving the self and generate exercises to practice at home in order to improve feelings about one's self.

Another dynamite workshop will explore being alone. Titled "Coping with Being Alone," this workshop will explore those times of aloneness and how to not only cope with them but also how to make them truly positive times of fulfillment. Are you alone right now and dealing with it? If so, you might want to look into this workshop. And if you aren't alone, how do you react when you are? The possibilities of this workshop are phenomenal.

"Internal Medicine and the Gay Patient: What Every Gay Male Should Know" is an informational workshop offering much needed answers to gay male health related issues. It will look at special concerns for the gay man and would be an excellent time to have your health related question answered.

The next (and ninth) workshop is one everyone of us can relate to because at some point in all our lives we all experience this one. Its called "Gays Searching for Love" and will cover "Liking-disliking, falling in and out of love, and loving and hating." It will experiment with creative ways of getting to know each other and help us to know what we want and ask for it instead of frustrating ourselves by sending out the wrong messages.

Well, there they are. Sixteen workshops to choose from on a variety of topics designed especially for you and lead by Mental Health Professionals. And for twenty dollars (if you preregister) you not only get to pick two of the two hour workshops to participate in, you also get to join us for coffee in the morning, lunch (vegetarian or non-vegetarian) in the afternoon and Pici in the evening. Now, how could you afford not to join us?

Registration forms are available at the Atlanta Gay Center and should be available all around town soon. for further information, call the Center at 876-5372 or contact Susan Martin at 261-0701. Meanwhile, mark your calendar and reserve Saturday, November 14th for this year's symposium. "Gay in the 80's" is one event you don't want to miss. See You There!

— Michael Green, PR Director
Atlanta Gay Center

WELCOME TO OUR NIGHTMARE

On Friday, October 30, 1981, plan on coming to the Atlanta Gay Center for an evening of fun and fright. Part of the evening festivities include a Boris Karloff film from a private collection, all sorts of Halloween goodies from our kitchen, and various other TRICKS and treats.

The doors open at 8:00 pm, so dig out your Tarzan or Vampira outfits and come on down for a good time.

POLITICAL LANDSCAPE

Backstreet D.J., Joey, did the unthinkable last Friday — at midnight, with the floor jammed with dancers, he stopped the music for mayoral candidate Sidney Marcus. Marcus pressed into the crowded disco for over an hour accompanied by his daughter Susan and about 20 supporters. Marcus and his supporters also visited Bulldog & Co., The Armory, Crazy Ray's, The Pharr Library, The Uptown and The Cove Friday night.

"I'm so happy I can't stand it," said one Marcus supporter. "They (Backstreet owner Carmine Vera and his staff) gave us the red carpet treatment, stopped the music while he (Marcus) worked the crowd, and presented him with an extremely generous check.

"We were halfway down the stairs to the disco when Sidney was introduced as 'the next mayor of Atlanta,'" he said. "The crowd went crazy, absolutely crazy. The crowd cheered as Sidney circulated, and the lights flashed and the music stopped. Three or four people stared right through him or refused to shake his hand, but everyone else gave him a warm reception."

Marcus' rival, Andrew Young, did not actively campaign in the gay community the final weekend before their October 27 showdown. Both candidates had advertising in the gay press, however.

This election we are seeing the growing political clout of Atlanta's gay community. Candidates for mayor, city council and school board positions have plunged into our businesses and bars seeking our votes, our money, our expertise and our concerns. In a close contest a relatively small portion of the electorate can provide the margin of victory. The Marcus-Young and Sweet-Pitts contests were probably both decided by a few thousand votes.

John Sweet seemed to have across the board support of the gay community while Sidney Marcus had a lopsided degree of support from gays over Andrew Young going into the election. Regardless of who won what, we are all winners because this year, as never before, the gay community has been recognized by Atlanta's political candidates. The question: is did we decide the elections?

Dear Mom,

Dear Mom,

I know, I know! Last week's letter was a little depressing, but what did you expect. I really missed Roxie. I'm a little worried cause I'm getting so involved with her so quickly, but I think I can handle it. I just hope she can.

She got back this weekend and you wouldn't believe it. It wasn't just a show she was in. It was a contest and she got first place. She is now Miss Nashville. I told you she was pretty and talented. I can hardly believe it myself. She says she wants to be Miss Tennessee. I didn't know you could be in contests from other states. It makes me wonder how many of the girls in the Miss America Contest are really from the states they represent. You know, I wonder if she'll go on to try for Miss America. She could take it you know. She's more talented and more intelligent than any of the girls I've ever seen on that show. She's probably prettier too.

We went to a show Monday night at a place called the Answer. Mom, it was the most fantastic show I've ever seen. Of course I haven't seen many since I've been up here, but it has to be one of the best in town. They had the prettiest girls, even though a couple were a little flat chested and one was quite big. She's good looking though. Real classy. They had some men in this show too, which didn't impress me too much, but I guess the girls in the audience like it, and besides, they needed them on a couple of the songs, and they were good.

Four of these guys did The Oakridge Boys' song Elvira. They really pissed. (Don't get mad. That's an expression I just learned up here that means they were really good. At least I think that's what Bruce told me.) I could have sworn, though, I had seen them somewhere before. They almost reminded me a little of a couple of the girls in the show. Maybe they've got a couple of brother and sister teams?

Bruce and I went out shopping for Halloween costumes a couple of days ago. I know it sounds childish, but he says Halloween is a big event around here and that everyone dresses up for it. I thought I had given it up with bubble gum and trick-or-treat. He convinced me that it would be a lot of fun, though, and in a way I can't wait to do it. He's going to take me to a big do they have at the Armory. You know, the place where we went to see the Falcon game. I haven't been able to go back since and can't wait to see what it like on a regular night. But I digress, I guess. Bruce says that all the time. I don't really know exactly what it means but I figure it means to get off the track or something.

He (Bruce, that is) told me he was going to go "butch" (that means he's going to be a he-man. You know like a football player or something.) this year and that he wanted me to go dressed like a woman. I told him no way! But he said that a lot of the guys up here do it. Even Tom and Jerry will probably be in dresses and make-up for Halloween. I asked Roxie what she thought, and she was hysterical. She couldn't believe that Bruce had asked me, but she thinks it's a good idea. She's going to be out of town again for Halloween but she wants me to dress up before she goes so she can see me. She said I needed to practice walking in heels anyway. I don't see what can be so hard about that though. But I guess I should trust her. I mean, she's been wearing them a lot longer than I have. I'm really nervous about the whole thing. I mean what if there's a car accident or something?

I guess I should tell you what I got. We went to a place called Value Village and picked up some great looking things real cheap. I got this long blue dress with shiny things all over it. It fits alright but I still feel real uncomfortable in it. I was worried I was going to have to shave, but Bruce said may chest hair and all would make the costume look a lot funnier. He said it's what they call "camp drag." It reminded me a little of that cheerleader at the Armory. You know, the one I though had the hairy chest.

Well, I got to go now Roxie's going to be over in a little while and help me out learning how to put on make-up and all. Don't think I'm turning queer or anything. It's all in fun.

Love you so much and tell Pop hi.
