EDITOR'S NOTE

This issue marks a distinct turn in the eight-year history of Eclipse. Four years ago, the magazine expanded from its New Orleans base to include Atlanta and Houston. Now, Houston is on our mind.

Flip through the pages, and you'll quickly understand our new approach: local, local, local. The best features of the old Eclipse mixed with new ones, wrapped together in a package that's easier to digest and carry in your back pocket on nights out in the gayborhood.

But we haven't forgotten the past. We've kept our most popular features — including "Bitch Session," horoscopes and our cartoons — and combined them with easier-to-read bar event listings and a map to find your way. There's also "After Dark" (page 23), the place to find "Need Wood," classifieds and services to satisfy your carnal cravings.

We're proud of the new Eclipse and hope that it offers you an improved guide to your nightlife in the Bayou City. Let us know your reaction by e-mailing editor@eclipse-mag.com.

What is up with all these multi-screen-named, AOL-addicted freaks screaming they can't find a relationship or a decent date? How about stepping out from behind the screen and letting us see who you really are?

If you bitch about other people's bitches, isn't that still bitching?

To the little punk we opened our home up to because you had nowhere to go. Finding you and my boyfriend was the ultimate birthday gift. Well, go ahead and take full advantage of him now, because I'm through with the lying bastard!

To the person who wants to know if any guys are not on meds: Sometimes it's necessary to be on meds, either for HIV or mental health. I'd rather a guy be on meds than be dying or going postal.

People told me it is harder to find a top than a bottom. I think it is harder to find a good bottom than a good top.

Yes I have a foot fetish, and yes, that's why I pack dramamine for the beach. I've already started doing my daily breathing exercises, as the season be startin' up very soon.

They're called spandex, not 'expand-ex.' Try some sweatpants.

I don't care how good-looking or hot you are. You still need to shower before we have sex.

"Boy" doesn't have an "i" and "girl" doesn't have a "u." Stop making us all look like a bunch of illiterate twinks.

Why why why do we go to gay bars, only to see nothing but videos of female singers like Christina Aguilera Lil Kim? I'm so sick of looking at tits and toe!

Did you ever notice the people who complain about how terrible a bar is are the people who go there every night?

People say you can never meet any-one worthwhile in a bar, and yet most couples I know met in bars. I wonder what they're saying about their boyfriends — "Hey, look what I got stuck with"?

You know what I miss the most about not being in a relationship? Friendship, companionship, passion and — oh yeah — love.

Tipping is not a reward for being cute or having a great body; it's a form of gratitude for showing great service. If I have to earn my commission, you've got to earn your tip.

What you are about to read are real bitches, sent in by real readers, about gay life's little annoyances, and the big ones, too.
So what's your bitch?

Sometimes I feel like only obnoxious jerks are made to feel welcome in a club. If that's the case, why would I want to go there?

It sucks when you go to the park for a good piece of ass and it's Senior Citizen Day.

To the person who bitched about so-called "drag queens": There is a difference between a "drag queen" and an "illusionist." It takes a real man to look good as a male and as a female. You should try it — you wouldn't even need to tape your piece, it wouldn't show anyway.

To all the little queens who give me dirty looks when I walk into the club: If I make you uncomfortable, bite me! Be careful though, because you just might lose your teeth.

Am I the only gay male who watches Australian rules football on TV? These guys are hot!

It's a bitch when you hit 40 and nobody wants you.

I'm sick and tired of hot guys acting all flirtzy and into me but when they come over to my place, they are crashing from their last bit of K or crystal and can't get it up and are freaking out and paranoid. I'm going to start giving out the phone number to the local detox clinic instead of my own.

I do want to see a guy's pits! These guys who feel it necessary to shave down their armpit hair or carve it down to a stupid patch look totally ridiculous.

Isn't it funny how the 30-year-old bartender claims to be 24 years old in his escort ad? Time for an update!

Call me crazy, but I've found the best thing about being in a committed relationship is that I can feel safe being emotionally vulnerable with my partner. Having unprotected sex is much farther down the list.

Yes, you do have a huge chest, shoul-ders, back, arms, legs and butt. But what's with the bubble gut?

Put your used gym clothes in your locker when you go take a shower. Nobody wants to see your skanky grundies on the floor.

Is it too much to ask for bartenders to wipe all the dripping water off of our water bottles! Don't most of us tip well enough?

To the guy who blamed someone else for his getting crabs: It's your fault. You chose to have sex with him. Take responsibility for your actions.

Get rid of the bush and enjoy it; why pick it out of your teeth?

Gay sailor brings drama

DJ Limey, aka Kevin England, is one of the newest stars of Houston's club scene. With his residency at Club 'O,' this local hero craftily teases audiences with his progressive house beats showcasing his own unique style to the club's diverse crowd.

The turntable hunk is an intern at Power 97.5FM after recently graduating from the University of Houston. We caught up with him as he prepares to help 'O' the next big thing.

eclipse: How did you end up in Houston?

Limey: I am 23, and I am originally from outside of Philadelphia. I grew up in Wilmington, Del.

I came down to Texas because I wanted to be in the merchant marines, so I trained at Texas A&M Maritime Academy to become a ship captain. While in training, I decided it was not for me.

I did not want to be stuck on sea and it did not really fit with my gay lifestyle. I enrolled in University of Houston and got a degree in Audio Production.

by Arjan Timmermans eclipse: What does the name "Limey" mean?

Limey: Well, I heard about that term in the marines. It is a slang name for a British sailor. Since my last name is "England," I thought it would be an appropriate name.

eclipse: Tell me more about your residency at "O."

Limey: The club has been open since early March, and it is going really well. I play the 18+ nights at "O," which is the audience that I am looking for, because they are there for music that sounds good instead of dancing to stuff that is popular.

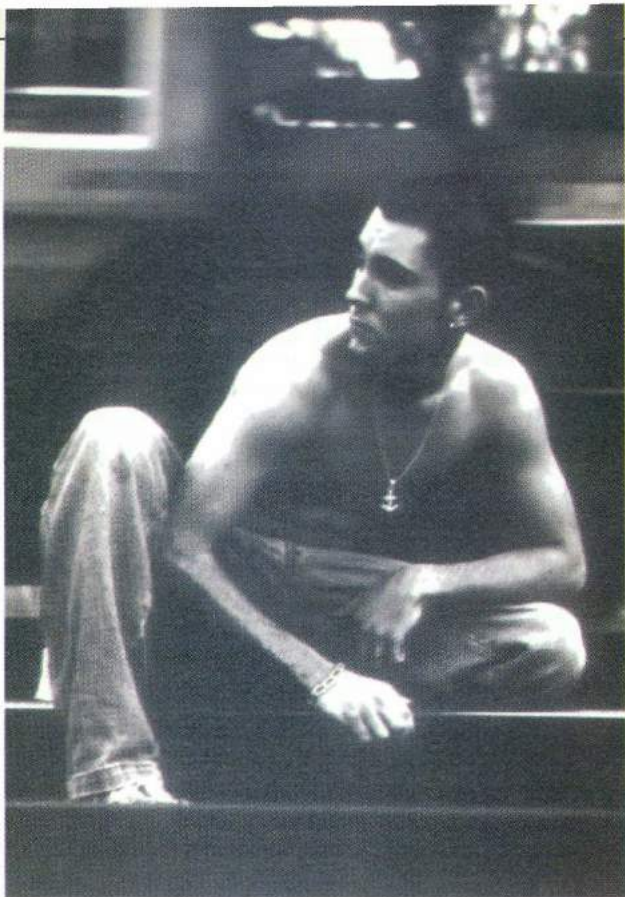

I spin on Thursday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday. I also help out with the Calendar Boy Contest on Thursdays, which is so much fun. A lot of booty music!

eclipse: You claim that you bring drama to the dance floor. How do you do that?

Limey: Oh yeah, I love some good drama! If you are working a big crowd and you are working them down to the floor, and then you stop the music, what you get is a lot of staring faces.

eclipse: Isn't that a bit cocky?

Limey: Wait, let me finish. Then the crowd starts cheering, and then I drop the fiercest house beat you can imagine. You get this enormous rush of drama. Right now, I am dropping Oakenfold's remix of Madonna's "American Life" at moments like that. It is incredible.

DJ Limey, aka Kevin England

eclipse: Do you have any other new releases that you like to play?

Limey: There is plenty of good stuff out there right now — both vinyl and digital. There is so much good music you can find online and mix up. I like stuff from Thunderpuss to DJ Guido, and remixes from popular artists with a nice driving base to it.

eclipse: How would you describe your style?

Limey: I would call it electro-house with lots of vocals and breaks.

eclipse: Who inspires your work?

Limey: I am a big fan of some DJs from Dallas, such as Ronny Bruno from BJ's. He totally changed the way I play music and has inspired me to try new things.

I am also a big fan of DJ Chris Sill who plays at Rich's. Others that I like, but are not gay, are Chris Cox from Thunderpuss and DJ Guido.

eclipse: Where would you like to be in 5 years from now?

Limey: I really would like to be an on-air talent for a radio station. DJ Tracy Young also made her start on radio.

I would like to hold a residency at a large venue at some big city. I'd like to be out of Houston in 5 years as well. This is great city, but by then, it will be time to move on.

eclipse: Any word for your fans at O?

Limey: I would like them to know that I am always playing for them and not for me. I also want to thank my boyfriend Brian who has been so supportive and encouraging of everything I do and strive for.

Saturn, the planet of whips and chains, enters Cancer after a two-year trawl through Gemini. Some things fall nicely into place, and new challenges bubble to the fore.

ARIES (MARCH 21 - APRIL 20)

Relatives really don't understand you. Unspoken issues are shouted. It may be one thing after another at home, but it is an excellent time to clear debris and dump garbage.

TAURUS (APRIL 21 - MAY 21)

You may think that it is best to keep your pearls of wisdom to yourself as Saturn moves into Cancer. You are apt to feel that they do not measure up, but you will soon find that you measure up admirably.

GEMINI (MAY 22 - JUNE 21)

Saturn leaves your sign, and you regain your considerable charisma. Unfortunately, you also begin to feel that you don't have enough dough to make biscuits. Examine the bottom line.

CANCER (JUNE 22 - JULY 23)

Saturn enters your sign, and you get a chance to show the world what you can do. Saturn says do your homework before you strut. Once you learn what you need, you succeed beyond your wildest dreams.

LEO (JULY 24 - AUG. 23)

You feel low-level stress as Saturn cruises in Cancer. The secret is to work on your karma by volunteering for a worthy cause. You may not be recognized by mere mortals, but a few gods are taking notes.

VIRGO (AUG. 24 - SEPT. 23)

You take stock of certain friendships with Saturn in Cancer. Saturn helps release you from your chains of deception — but not without a few life lessons. Avoid loneliness by seeking new associations.

LIBRA (SEPT. 24 - OCT. 23)

Saturn heats up Cancer and makes even your strongest professional efforts fall a bit short. You should use the next two years to consolidate your corporate power and hone your skills.

SCORPIO (OCT. 24 - NOV. 22)

Saturn in Cancer puts a crimp in travel plans, but this is no time to play it safe. Saturn may constrain but gives no respect to cowards. Hoist your flag and wave it.

SAGITTARIUS (NOV. 23 - DEC. 22)

You feel a bit more like a damp dishrag than a hottie when Saturn enters Cancer, so learn from it. Self reflection helps hone dull edges.

CAPRICORN (DEC. 23 - JAN. 20)

You need to reassess what you want in a partnership. You go through versions of the same song and dance before Saturn teaches you to lambada.

AQUARIUS (JAN. 21 - FEB. 19)

You will never work harder with less payoff than while Saturn trolls through Cancer. But before you resign yourself to misery, sweat equity puts you at top of the heap.

PISCES (FEB. 20 - MARCH 20)

Creativity will be more perspiration than inspiration while sour Saturn dredges through Cancer. You want to soar with the eagles, but prepare to ride the subway with the rest of us. You'll laugh along the way if you don't take yourself too seriously.

Hey Woody!

I don't like bars, so the way I meet people — or rather try to meet people — is online through ads. I'm 48, very healthy, active, good looking and blessed to look 35.

When I place an ad with my true age, I get no responses. Absolutely zero. If I lie and place the exact same ad and picture only this time saying I'm 35, I get lots of responses.

The real me gets me zip, and the dishonest me gets plenty of play. I'm at a loss as to how to proceed. Even people my own age don't respond to my 48-year-old ads, but they respond to my 35-year-old ads. I think the whole gay community is screwed up.

I don't want to start a relationship where the first thing I say is dishonest. I don't even want a one-night stand if

by Woody Miller

I have to be dishonest to get it. But I also don't want to be without sex for extended periods of time. What should I do?

—Truth or Dare?

Dear Truth:

I have to acknowledge your honesty, integrity and self-respect. And your stupidity. For writing to me, I mean.

I dedicated my book to a friend by thanking him for "teaching me how to lie about my age." Man, did you write the wrong guy.

But I understand your dilemma. Gay men have a phobia about age. Whatever you say after 40 they hear as a communicable disease. So if you say "I'm 43," they hear "forty-leprosy." They're more afraid of catching age than AIDS.

You should understand the difference between harmless and harmful lying. You're acting as if all lies are equal. They're not. It's impossible to live in a world where no lying is allowed.

Preserving relationships means knowing when to say, "No, honey, those jeans don't make you look fat," instead of "No honey, those jeans don't make you look fat. Your fat makes you look fat."

You've equated lying about your age with, say, lying about your HIV status or your marital status. Age is a state of mind, anyway.

So what if you feed people the fantasy that they're responding to a 35-year-old? You might actually end up teaching them it's possible to fall in love with someone despite an initial resistance to their age.

You could also learn to omit your age from your ad. If someone asks your age, tell him that age is unimportant and that the two of you would just end up catego-rizing each other before you could learn the really important stuff — like what it's like to have hot, steamy sex together.

Hey Woody!

I spent the night with a guy, but we didn't do anything because we were too drunk. We had all our clothes off and spooned, but that was it.

Now I've got this itch on my waist, my groin and my butt, along with short, wavy lines on the skin and dozens of itchy bumps. How could this be an STD if we didn't have sex?

— Itching to know

Dear itching:

You've probably got a skin-mite infection called scabies. You don't have to have sex to get it, just prolonged skin contact.

The mites are like boyfriends — they burrow just under the surface of the skin and annoy the hell out of you. Female mites lay eggs that hatch in a few days.

Your doctor will prescribe something to kill the mites and corticosteroid ointments to relieve the itching.

I hope this teaches you a lesson. If you're going to catch something from a trick, at least have the decency to have sex with him.

EDITOR'S NOTE

It's late June and it's time to sink our cowboy boot heels into Pride, Pride, Pride.

Check out the nightlife calendar (Page 10) for the pumped-up activities that Houston clubs plan to rock us through the 25th year of Pride. Watch next week's Eclipse for a complete rundown of the busiest gay weekend all year and details on the infamous Houston nighttime Pride parade.

New this week is "Behind the Scene," a one-on-one Q&A with one of the many movers and shakers in Houston's bar scene. (Page 8) This week we talk to Miss Southern Comfort, who's seen each week at various clubs and fund-raisers in the Bayou City. We'll be getting the lowdown from more folks from all different walks of life in upcoming issues, Enjoy the new Eclipse as your guide to nightlife in the Bayou City. As always, send comments, questions and speeches our way via editor@eclipse-mag.com.

BEHIND THE SCENE

Name: Miss Southern Comfort
a.k.a. Darryl Smith

Do people recognize you out of drag?

The on-stage female version of Darryl Smith is Miss Southern Comfort — diamond tiara and earrings, perfectly manicured nails and all. When not performing, Smith is incognito in a polo shirt, jeans and baseball cap. Just try to pick him out of a crowd. "Very seldom do they recognize me out of drag. I love it," Smith says. "The whole point is the illusion of being a female."

Interview by Penny Weaver

How long have you been out and about in the Houston scene?

Smith started doing drag on April 24, 1998 — a very specific date, he says, because a friend dragged him onstage to try female impersonation for the first time at Church of the Neon Cactus. The rest is history.

Where can people see you perform?

Tuesday nights at Meteor, Smith goes female to help host Drag Bingo. He also appears as Miss Southern Comfort at regular Royal, Sovereign & Imperial Court for the Single Star of Houston, Inc. (R.S.I.C.S.S.) benefit shows.

Rate the Houston scene?

It's fun, Smith says, although sometimes the community is divided and he is disappointed to see that. But overall, gay Houstonians know how to come out after dark and have fun. A little sincerity can add depth to the partying too. "You do have people who are willing to break down the wall and see who you are," Smith says.

What's in your nitelife crystal ball?

Becoming the first black Miss TGRA (Texas Gay Rodeo Association) is a goal for Smith. Off stage, he is working on his second bachelor's degree. He also works behind the scenes to help friends with their own drag performances.

Where can you find the hottest men?

Try a Texas A&M game, Smith says. Football, anyone?

Dating expert Jim Sullivan offers practical tips for meeting the right guy

The toughest piece of advice author Jim Sullivan offers: Refrain from sex until the fourth date. The gay dating guru pulled from his 25 years as a counselor and dating coach to offer a guide to finding the boyfriend you've always wanted.

But be careful: His approach in "Boyfriend 101" requires hard work, some discipline (fourth date, remember), introspection and a willingness to put yourself out there and circulate. He'll explain the difference between flirting and cruising, show you where to meet guys and how to watch for red flags.

Some of Sullivan's top tips from his recently-released dating guide:

Avoid the myths of dating. Those include all the good guys are taken, dating is easy, everyone in a relationship is happy, you have to look like Tom Cruise to get a date, I can't deal with rejection, dating is not fun, and successful people have an easier time dating.

Where to meet guys. Think big, smart and new — and beyond gar bars and clubs. The Internet is OK, but don't succumb to the addiction.

Know how to sell yourself and put up the For Sale sign in your local grocery store, coffee shop, gallery opening, gym or gay fund-raiser.

Dating protocols. Let your hair down and be ready to acknowledge another person's special-ness without forgetting your own. Overcome first-date phobia, and don't have a wandering eye while you're on one. Learn how not to blow the conversation. Know it's OK to call your date afterwards to let him know it went well. And the first key to being a successful gay dater? No sex for the first three dates. Too much sex too fast can be an impediment to intimacy.

Learn the no-no's. Don't judge purely on externals. Don't monopolize the conversation. Don't promise something and not follow through. Don't let moods rule you. Don't rush the relationship. Do not bad-mouth other people, including the ex. Never ask, "Do you love me?"

Understand the secrets to romance. Be attentive. Allow your sense of humor to come forth. Buy him flowers. Give each other a full-body massage. Buy a romantic card and mail it to him. Give him a wake-up call in the morning. Share a peanut-butter-and-jelly sandwich.

ABOUT THE COVER

Publishing house Bruno Gmunder can really do no wrong. Kobi Israel's 'Views' is further evidence. The all-photo book is a recreation of Israel's fantasies exploring the homoerotic nature of the military. It's a tender — and erotic — journey. <http://info@brunogmunder.com>

Basinger goes Wilde

Kim Basinger will soon be going where the Wilde things are. The Academy Award winner is headed to Europe this August to shoot a film based on "Lady Windermere's Fan," the first hit of gay playwright Oscar Wilde.

Retitled "A Good Woman" — that was the play's original title and, besides, who wants to see a movie about a lady's fan? — the comedy of manners about marital infidelity was moved from its original setting of London in the 1890s to New York and the French Riviera in the 1930s.

Joseph Fiennes from "Shakespeare in Love" co-stars along with Scarlett Johansson ("Ghost World") and Tom Wilkinson ("In the Bedroom"). Shockingly, Rupert Everett and Colin Firth aren't among the cast members.

Doubly 'Jinks'-ed

Openly gay Oscar winners Dan Jinks and Bruce Cohen ("American

by Romeo San Vicente

Beauty") are producing again. But this time, they're leaving modern suburbia for the world of 19th-century theater.

Jinks and Cohen are working on "The Rivals," a drama written by Robin Swicord ("Little Women") about the real-life rivalry between two stage divas, Sarah Bernhardt and Eleonora Duse.

The older, more established Bernhardt and the younger, more cutting-edge Duse became obsessed with one another and competed both on stage and off. Steven Spielberg is thinking about directing the project, but he's still working out his schedule.

In the meantime, the busy producers are getting ready to shoot "The Forgotten," a thriller starring Julianne Moore.

Kim Basinger will star in a film adaptation of Oscar Wilde's first play.

The "Right" Stuff for Hollywood

He called Anita Hill "a little bit nutty and a little bit slutty," and now controversial journalist David Brock may just get his own nutty story told on screen. Brock's 2002 memoir, "Blinded by the Right," documented his transformation from closeted and conservative attacker of people like Hill and Bill Clinton to openly gay and liberal attacker of the right wing.

The book's film rights were snapped up by scribe David Hayter ("X-Men," "X2"), who'll act as producer with screenwriting duties assigned to Dan Rosen, creator of the 1995 indie comedy "The Last Supper."

Right now, the project has no official home, but here's hoping some Velvet Mafia development exec knows a good gossip political story when he or she hears one — and doesn't leave out the slutty parts, like the story of Internet columnist Matt Drudge allegedly hitting on Brock.

Mutchnick Gets 'Stone'-d

Out TV producer Max Mutchnick and his straight colleague, David Kohan — the guys who created some little-watched show called "Will & Grace" — have a new series for CBS. This time the talented pair has come up with "The Stones," a sitcom about a brother (Jay Baruchel of "The Rules of Attraction") and sister (Lindsay Sloane of "The In-Laws") who are still living at home even though they're adults.

Judith Light makes her sit-com return in 'The Stones.'

At a 25th-anniversary dinner for the siblings' parents, mom (Judith Light) and dad (Robert Klein) tell their very surprised kids that they're splitting up — but still plan on living together in the same house. "The Stones" premieres on Wednesdays in the fall.

Romeo San Vicente would live at home, too, if Judith Light would be his mom. He can be reached care of this publication or at Write2Romeo@yahoo.com.

Will Joseph Fiennes play it straight in 'A Good Woman,' the film adaptation of a play by the very gay Oscar Wilde?

You play everytime I leave town and for some strange reason you think I have no idea. Sadly, you think you are covering your trail, but all you do is make it that much more obvious. Remember, what goes around comes around.

For those boys in the gym who cling together in your little Vitamin S world: All those muscles and all that time at the gym simply point to your inability to deal with the rest of life. The shriveled testes and mood swings aren't helping you overcome whatever you are running from.

What is up with all these multi-screen named, AOL-addicted freaks screaming they can't find a relationship or a decent date? How about stepping out from behind the screen and let us see who you really are?

I am tired of assholes who lead people on. If you are still in love with your ex, don't mess around with other people's emotions. There is nothing worse than being a rebound guy.

Point of clarification, folks: A slut will give it away anytime, anyplace, anybody (trust me, I know). A "whore" will do the same, but you will need a Visa, Amex, Mastercard or cash in exchange.

Just because I'm liberal doesn't mean I'm blind. I will fight for equal rights and fundamental fairness, but that doesn't translate to equal access to my bedroom.

Why is it that our favorite bartender can't say two words to us without somebody accusing him of flirting or making fools out of us? He's just being friendly!

I'm a male flight attendant who's very masculine and very gay. So are all my friends who are male flight attendants. The reason this guy doesn't see us is because he doesn't realize we're gay, and we don't have time for bitchy sissies like him.

If you're interested in me, introduce yourself. Don't just hang around me without saying one single word to me.

So many gay men in this city are so hateful and with such low self-esteem, it makes me wish they would go back to burning gay men at the stake.

How much more fucking "space" do you need?

Where's the gay Goth scene in this town? There seems to be a niche for everyone but folks like me.

To all you guys who have sex with-out a condom: If you really love somebody, you would use a condom. I'm tired of seeing all my friends die of AIDS. The only way we're going to stop this is if we work together.

If it weren't for liberal activists (including feminists), gays wouldn't have nearly as many privileges as they do today. So why do today's faggots think it's OK to be totally apolitical? Wake the fuck up, and fight for your rights.

To the faggot that said he was a straight man who has sex with men: Buy a clue! Men having sex with men = homosexual.

To the guy (you know who you are) who said that he wanted to date: First of all, get over your ex; he is not coming back. Second, you might think it is cute to make a date and then not show up or call, but this is not cute! It is poor home training.

What's up with the sex ads in which HIV-negative guys who like to bareback insist that their partners be HIV-negative, too? Like guys are really going to tell them the truth about their HIV status. Dream on!

I am so tired in reading massage ads that tell us about themselves but don't offer a price. You've got a product; give us a price! Even VWs do that!

There is more to life than shopping every single weekend for the latest clothes to wear to your your favorite club...

Take a chance getting to know someone outside the bedroom, and you might find who you're looking for.

To the 37-year-old complaining about younger guys: Being 25 does not mean I am a baby, nor am I looking for that security. I just want to have fun with a like-minded guy. I do not want a daddy, I already have a biological one.

Just because I say I want to date and get to know you better doesn't mean I want to register china patterns or have your U-Haul backing up in my driveway. Take a chance getting to know someone outside the bedroom, and you might find who and what you are looking for.

I am so tired of the countless number of gay men whose lives revolve around circuit parties, designer clothing and the gym. There is more to life than shopping every single weekend for the latest clothes to wear at your favorite club, not to mention the attitude that the whole world revolves around them.

This is to the person who said gay guys from small towns have small minds. I'm from a small town in northern Montana, and I don't think I have a small mind. I'm very responsible, attractive, nice and easy to deal with. You're probably the one with a small mind for you to say something like that.

Why is it that straight people call gay lovers names like partners or companions? It sounds like they're in business or a nursing home. They're lovers!

To the person who said gay guys from small towns have small minds: Gay guys from large cities have small penises.

When you're in line at the grocery store and you've just put your stuff on the belt, it's your responsibility to put the separator at the end of your order, not mine. And, hey you cashiers, it'd be really nice if you'd push those order separators to the beginning of the belt rather than being lazy asses.

NEED WOOD?

How an opening can save a relationship

Hey Woody!

I just saw Barbara Walters interview Hillary Clinton about the whole Monica Lewinsky drama. What do you think of Hillary? Do you think she's a feminist doormat or a woman who's learned to forgive?

— Confused

Dear Confused:

The question isn't whether she's a masochistic wife or a forgiving Christian. It's whether she has an open marriage.

The press has no problems writing about thongs and cigars in the oval office, but it gets oddly uptight at the thought of unconventional matrimony.

That's because their readers — mainstream America — do not believe it's possible to be in a deeply loving, committed relationship and still have sex with other people.

But many gay men do. And that's a fundamental difference between gay and straight perceptions of the Clinton scandals.

That's not to say that gay men aspire to relationships as porous as cheesecloth, but a good portion of them have been in relationships that allowed them, with certain rules, to wander. Many know it's possible to be emotionally committed and sexually unfaithful.

by Woody Miller

Most of the letters I've gotten since Hillary's book blitzkrieg have come from men who caught their partners cheating. Like Hillary's critics and fans, they think they only have two choices: Break up or learn to forgive.

But there's a third choice. A choice that Bill and Hillary may have exercised, but for political survival, could never admit: Allowing sex outside the marriage.

Is it possible to have a successful marriage with that kind of framework? Yes.

But first you have to ask yourself this question: Can you look into his eyes and whisper "I love you; I want us to be together for the rest of our lives," and then bang the new guy at the gym without diminishing the love for your partner?

It is here, in this question, where you'll get the full explosion of contradictory human responses.

Compare the public uproar over Bill Clinton's affairs and this indelicate fact: Kinsey's study showed that adultery occurs in 50-80 percent of all marriages.

That was in the 1950s. Imagine what it is now. Imagine what it is for gay men.

So why do we attempt something that seems universally impossible? Because it can often lead to the attainment of something unique, a level of love, commitment and unity that may not be achievable otherwise.

Need Wood? Ask woody how to spice up your sex life. E-mail him at woody@menpigs.cc.

I say "may" because I'm an agnostic on the answer. I don't believe monogamy is an immutable moral law precisely because society says it is.

Society has been wrong on almost everything when it comes to sex and love. What society has said is fake, dangerous and sick — homosexuality and interracial love come to mind — I often experience as genuine, safe and healthy.

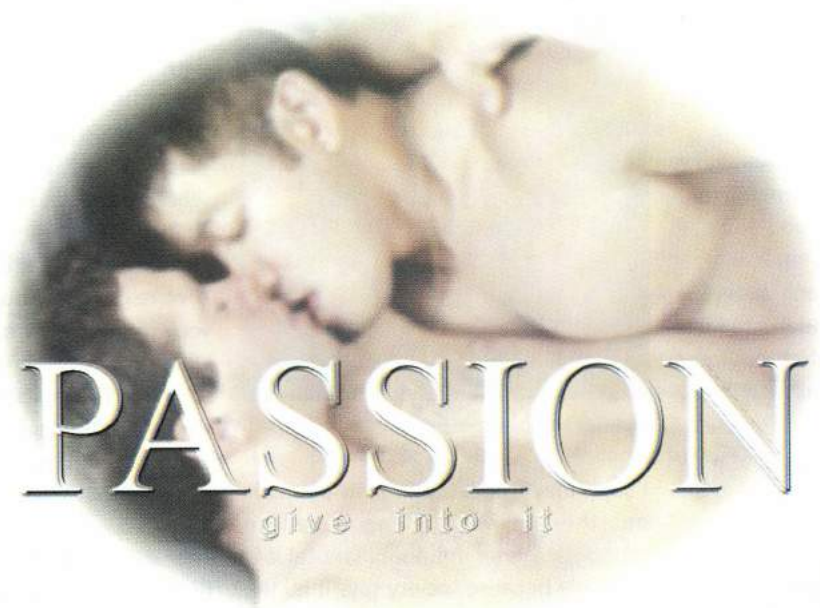

I'm a Hillary-lover and a Bush-hater. And that's why I want to leave you with this joke:

George Bush has a heart attack and dies. He immediately goes to hell, where the devil is waiting for him.

"I don't know what to do," says the devil. "You're on my list, but I have no room for you. You definitely have to stay here, so I'll tell you what I'm going to do. Believe it or not I've got some folks here who weren't quite as bad as you. I'll let one of them go, but you have to take their place. I'll even let you decide who leaves."

The devil opens the first door and Bush sees Bill Clinton, lying on the floor with his arms tied behind his head, and his legs spread-eagled. Bent over him is Monica Lewinsky performing oral sex. Bush looks in disbelief and finally says, "Yeah, I can handle this."

The devil smiles and says, "OK, Monica, you're free to go."
