Main Stage Season

The Center of Attractions!

The following six play slots have been announced:

(1) LITTLE MARY SUNSHINE by Rick Besoyan — DTC presents a frothy, fun-filled evening of musical theater. This delightful spoof of the operetta world of Jeanette McDonald and Nelson Eddy has rousing choruses, naive heroines and stalwart baritones.

(2) TALLEY'S FOLLY by Lanford Wilson — Winner of the Pulitzer Prize and New York Drama Critics' Circle Award as best play, Talley's Folly is a romantic comedy filled with humor and hope. It's the heartwarming story of small-town Sally Talley and her middle-aged Jewish suitor.

(3) PEER GYNT by Henrik Ibsen, Production concept & adaptation by Paul Baker — One of Ibsen's greatest plays, Peer Gynt is the tale of a man's devious search for his identity through a lifelong escape from reality and responsibility. Peer's dramatic journey will explode on the Main Stage in this provocative new production.

(4) A LESSON FROM ALOES by Athol Fugard — The 1980 Broadway debut was proclaimed one of the major dramatic events of the season. Fugard gives us an explosive drama about three victims of repression struggling to survive in a hostile environment.

(5) "Triple Play Premiere" — For the first time since Preston Jones' A Texas Trilogy, DTC will present the American premiere of three exceptional new plays in alternating repertory. Subscribers will see the play that falls on their performance date, and those who wish to see the other two plays will receive priority treatment when ordering tickets. Plays and performance dates to be announced.

(6) And ONE of these FOUR:

• AMADEUS by Peter Shaffer — Winner of 5 Tony Awards, including "Best Play", this ingenious work is based on a rivalry between Mozart and minor composer Salieri.

• ABSENT FRIENDS by Alan Ayckbourn — A hit from London, this bittersweet comedy presents six friends who are kept together by a strange mixture of business, cross-marital and emotional ties.

• THE DRESSER by Ronald Harwood — A huge success on Broadway and London's West End, this behind-the-scenes story of an aging actor and his gossipy dresser portrays the sacrifices and rewards of theater life.

• AH WILDERNESS! by Eugene O'Neill — This tender tale of a rebellious adolescent in the throes of passion is O'Neill's marvelous, nostalgic comedy that's been a favorite since 1933.

Strike Force: IGBO loves Dallas

Reported by Pat Bryant
Photos: Harper Bryant

The 1982 IGBO tournament held in Dallas Memorial Day weekend was a complete success. This year's tournament was not only the largest gay bowling event ever held, but also the largest single gay sporting event ever held, according to IGBO president Tom Hack. Only six cities were involved when IGBO was formed; now there are 25 cities, including Denver, Houston, Dallas, New York, Toronto, Seattle, Minneapolis, San Antonio, Chicago, Atlanta, Milwaukee, Honolulu, Baltimore, New Orleans, Corpus Christi... to name a few.

Last year's tournament was held in Houston, with Houston's CBC Steamrollers the top team. This year's competition took place at the Bronco Bowl, with a Sunday awards banquet at the Dunfey Hotel...and a host of bar-sponsored beer busts and other events over the weekend. Entertainment at the banquet was provided by the Oak Lawn Symphonic Band, singer Al Brewer, and singer/composer Wm. Sean.

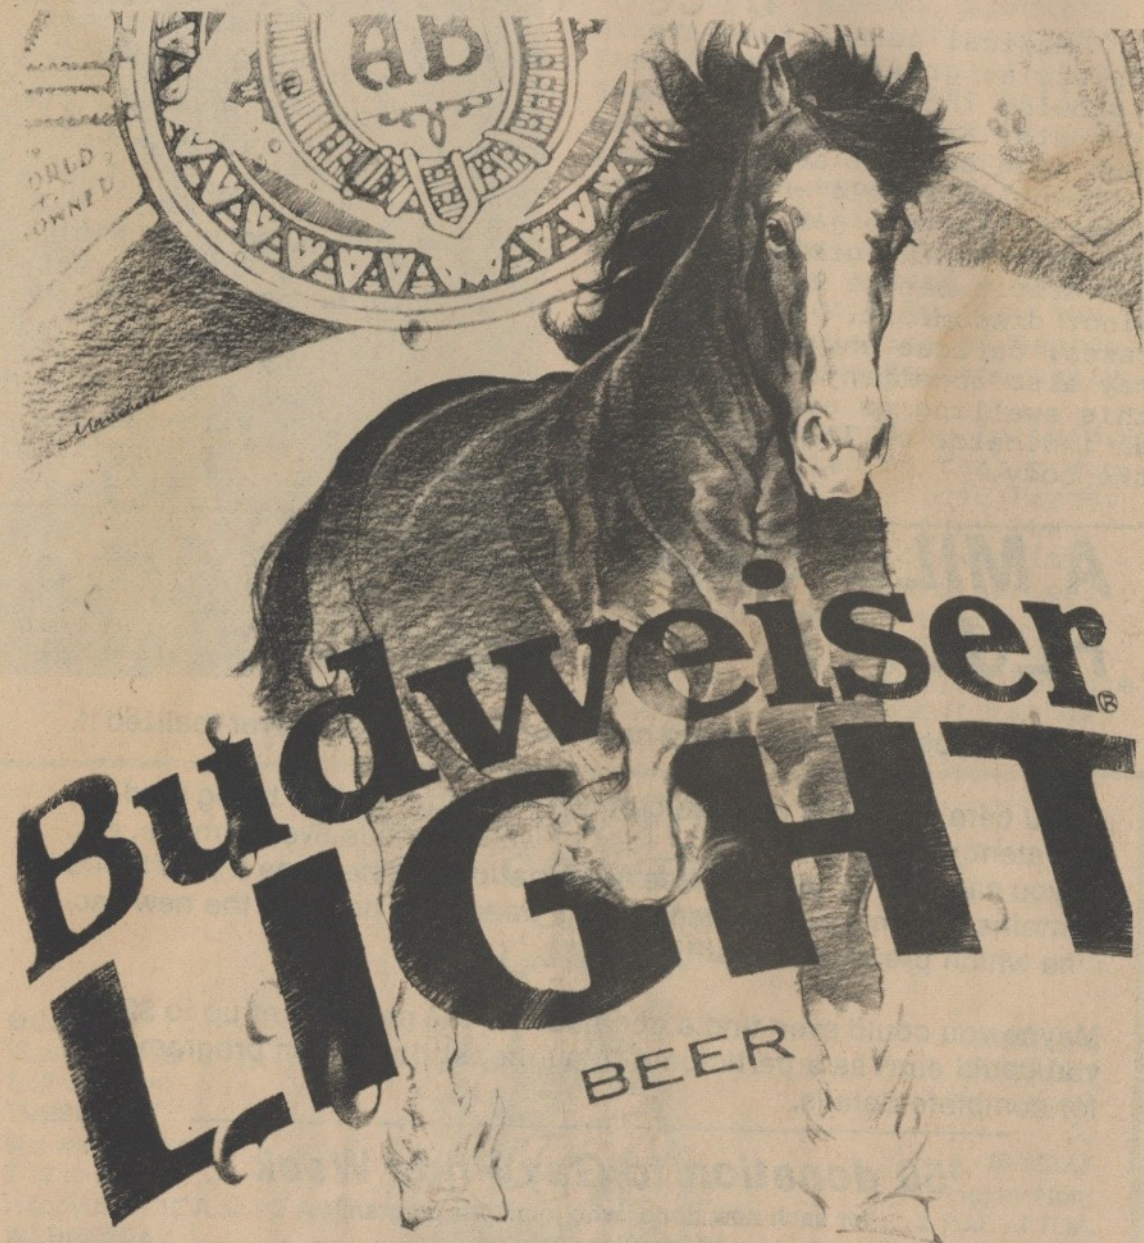

The top award for all events team was a team with three Houston men and one from Phoenix. In team awards, the Roundup Saloon walked away with second place. Dallasite Charles Rushing placed second in all events (single). And Charles Acrea of Dallas won top honors for high game handicap.

Next year's tournament site will be Chicago.

Worthy of the King of Beers.

There's a tradition at Anheuser-Busch. A tradition that says never be satisfied until you've achieved the best. Now, out of this tradition, comes a light beer worthy of the King of Beers. One with a clean, distinctive taste. Budweiser Light.

It took time. Patience. And a quest for quality that led to the proud list of ingredients and the Beechwood Aging process made famous by the King of Beers.

We know the best never comes easy. That's why there's nothing else like it.

Another gay disease?

Medical authorities are expressing growing concern in a growing incidence of lymphadenopathy among gay males. The condition doesn't seem anything alarming in itself - the lymph nodes behind the jaw and under the ear, in the groin and in the armpit become swollen with minor discomfort. In some cases, fatigue and weight loss may also accompany. However, this swelling is usually only an indicator of infection in the body.

Reports of malignancies (cancer) of the lymph nodes are now also being reported, it has been learned. Known as non-Hodgkins lymphoma, it can be fatal.

A local physician, citing possible links between swollen lymph nodes and Kaposi's sarcoma (another cancer) and the other new gay diseases, urged anyone suffering such a situation to contact a knowledgeable doctor familiar with the new gay diseases if the condition lasts two weeks or more.

A MILD CASE OF THE FLU...?

...Or maybe not...you could have had hepatitis and never realized it.

If you care what this disease can do to another human being (and it's prevalent among gay men) — loss of work, serious liver damage, etc. — you can help by taking a free examination to determine if your blood contains the antigens so desperately needed to produce the new vaccine which prevents Hepatitis B.

Maybe you could even find a good use for the payment of up to $2,600 you could earn as a participant in our hepatitis antigen program. Call for complete details.

NGTF leader to visit

Lucia Valeska, Executive Director of the National Gay Task Force (NGTF), will be a grand marshal in the Dallas Gay Pride Parade June 20 and the guest of honor June 22 at a reception sponsored by the Dallas Gay Alliance and Dallas Gay Pride Week Association. She will also attend a Denton fundraiser for GLAD (Gay and Lesbian Association of Denton) June 21 and the Houston rally on June 25.

NGTF, according to information supplied by that group, convinced the American Psychiatric Association that they should remove homosexuality from their list of disorders, persuaded the FCC to require broadcasters to address gay concerns, and arranged for the introduction of the first gay rights bill in Congress.

Dallasite has narrow escape

A 31-year-old Dallas man received a good scare the other day in the course of cruising a local motel.

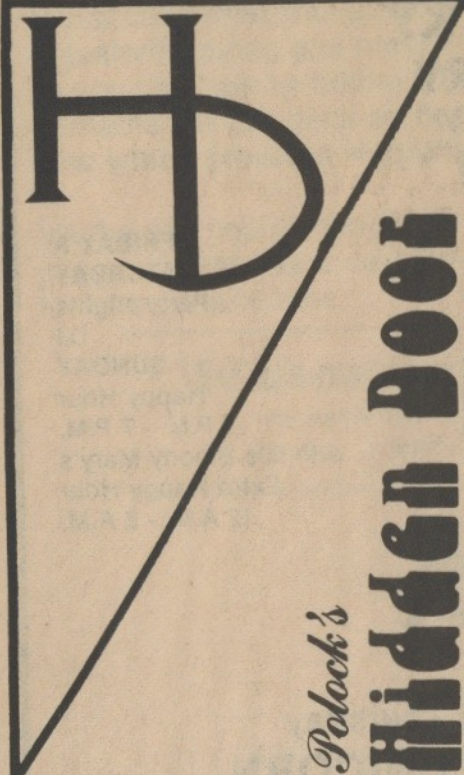

It all began when he was approached by an attractive man whom he felt was too good to be true, who invited him to visit his motel room. He told the local man that he was in town from Indiana with associates who were in another room. Once in the room, he quickly took the opportunity to strip and to ask the local man to do the same after a series of nervous "You're not a cop, are you?" questions.

The local man began to get a feeling that something was not quite right. His host's eyes seemed dilated (a single edge razor blade lying loose on a table may have been used earlier to cut lines of cocaine) and ill at ease. When the man from Indiana asked for him to hand over his watch, he did so, but when he asked the local man to turn around, his suspicions grew. When the Indiana man reached for his suitcase, the local man - fearing a weapon - bolted for the door, leaving the Indiana man trapped inside due to his state of nudity. The local man repeatedly asked for his watch back, then ran to his car, leaving the watch behind.

Although the loss of the watch was the only negative result of the incident, Metro Times reminds our readers that there are several unsolved gay homicides on the books and urges caution in picking up strangers. The life you save may be your own.

The victim also warned that exhaustion or impaired thinking from drugs or drink may lead one to take dangerous risks, as was the case with him.

MS. CELLANEY

Every six weeks or so, to fulfill filial obligations, I shove my dirty laundry in the back of my car and drive deep into East Texas to visit my parents. Invariably my father and I get into "debates" on these visits...usually related to such juicy ongoing issues as the origins of the Vietnam War, or who really wanted to see John Kennedy dead, or why he should have voted for Ed Clark in 1980. Sometimes they're just friendly discussions, sometimes minor wars, but occasionally one of the skirmishes centers on the issue of gay rights.

Now, my parents know. Sort of. At the time of my separation from my husband, he politely leaked to them that one of the reasons for our parting of the ways had to do with "something she'd rather tell you herself".

Well, she tried.

The consensus was - if you are a lesbian, which we don't believe, we don't want to know about it. Period. End of conversation. We know, but we don't want to know, for sure.

Not that it was the first time the subject had come up. Even when I was starring in "The Happy Heterosexual" (a situation comedy, at best) we'd get into heated exchanges on civil liberties which usually concluded with my father's statement that he didn't mind "homosexuals" as long as they didn't "flaunt it". (As near as I could make out, that was something like not minding blacks as long as they all wore white makeup.)

Nothing, then or now, could boil my blood more quickly. The separate-but-equal hypocrisy of it infuriated me, especially coming from my own flesh-and-blood father, even when I had the respectability of a "Mrs." in front of my name. And once at the breakfast table (we always started bright and early), I jumped up and thrust my wedding ring into his startled face and challenged, "See this? Know what it means?"

"It means you're married."

"It means I sleep with a man. Pure and simple." The badge of an already-shaky heterosexual identity. "That's flaunting it, papa."

My father is a brilliant man, but that was more than he could swallow. No impassioned pleading, no irrefutable logic - that billboards and TV spots and a host of cultural assumptions all flaunt straightness to the exclusion of anything else - could crack half a century of conviction that being what you are is fine if you're straight, flaunting if you're not. I only wish that, when I was growing up, someone had felt safe enough to "flaunt it".

And it's no safer now than it was then. Several weeks ago I talked with Dick Hickman of the Dallas Police Association about complaints of selective enforcement of liquor laws against gay bars and their patrons in Oak Lawn. His answer in a nutshell: As long as Section 21.06 is on the books in Texas, you're a criminal. If you don't like it, go down to Austin and change it. If you don't want to get caught - for that or something else - don't flaunt it.

Well, I'm afraid I do flaunt it, in some minor but significant ways.

I wear another gold band on my left hand now. It doesn't look much different from the one I flashed defiantly to my father but it means something different. It means I love another woman... pure and simple. She wears one, too. And that little bit of re-defining tradition is my small way of flaunting it.

Books: Lesbianism yesterday

Journey to Fulfillment; A World Without Men; and Return to Lesbos; by Valerie Taylor. Paperback, $3.95 each. Naiad Press.

Several issues ago we gave our high praise to Valerie Taylor for Prism, a novel about two older women in love. Now we give notice that Taylor is available to enjoy in a three volume set of reprints from Volute, a Naiad imprint.

The three books in this series all deal with a central character named Erika Frohmann. Separately, the books remain independent. Together, they take Erika from age 16 to age 30.

Originally published almost 20 years ago, Erika's story begins in Europe just after her rescue from a German camp by American troops. Having been a sexual plaything of the Nazi soldiers, Erika hates men and, rescued, retains her feelings. The first volume finds her in the process of discovering her sexual nature while rebelling against being pushed into social and sexual corners.

The second volume considers a serious problem...alcoholism. Erika meets Kate and falls in love, fighting to dry Kate out and bring her to a productive lifestyle. This may be the best book of the three.

Between volume two and volume three, Kate is killed in an accident, and in the last volume Erika is again alone. In a small town about an hour away from Chicago, Erika meets Frances Ollenfield, married and miserable, who launches an all out attack on the defensive "I'll never fall in love again" Erika to win her affections and bring her back to the world of the living.

Return to Lesbos also has a gay male, Vince, who plays an overgrown Cupid to the women, but the character is not really developed.

Taylor is not a great in the writing field, but she is an enjoyable storyteller, and she is able to bring home her message, whether it be the aloneness of a refugee in a new country or the senseless craving of an alcoholic which makes her

Gay media meet

From far and near they came to Denver. Over 70 members of the gay media (and gays who work for straight media) were on hand for the annual convention of the Gay Press Association, held at Denver's Holiday Inn Downtown. Overcoming such small frustrations as elevator buttons which failed to light, surly restaurant help who, besides being slow, refused to bring the requested silverware, an attempt to overbill for meeting rooms, and an oversight which originally left convention activities off a lobby bulletin board, the small group finally knocked down to the serious business of making a change of serious impact in the way gay news is presently being handled by existing gay papers.

At present, most gay news travels from city to city as papers trade copies regularly. This means a story breaking in Washington, D.C., today, may be in print in two weeks, reach Dallas in another week, and be printed locally in another two weeks.

Under the proposed plan, the basis for which is already in place, the Washington Blade go out and buy a bottle, even in the knowledge that it will hurt the woman she loves.

If you are interested in a look at the lesbian novels of yesterday or would just enjoy some direct writing which a good reader can polish off in a sitting, we enjoyed these and recommend them.

If - as is probably the case - you don't find them in a local store, send payment to The Naiad Press, PO Box 10543, Tallahassee, FL 32302. Add 15% to your order for two or more books, 75¢ for only one book, for postage and handling.

would put the story onto their own small computer locally, forward it to the main terminal in New York City, and publish it at their usual time. Metro Times would contact the computer in New York and pull the story off for local publication... in some cases even sooner than it appears in the originating paper!

Success of the wire news service depends upon the degree of cooperation provided by each local paper, of course; but GPA President Joe DiSabato, who was instrumental in forming the group in New York last year, is thoroughly sold on the idea. By 1992, according to DiSabato, you will be able to get your local and national gay news without a trip to your neighborhood bar. Instead, he says, you will get it...and your morning straight paper...off your own home computer terminal.

In regular business, the group rejected a motion to rename the organization to make it the International Lesbian and Gay Press Association. TWT Dallas representative Richard Rogers was re-elected to his at-large position on the board of directors, while Club Bath chain founder Jack Campbell was chosen as the new director from the Southern Region of the organization. The Southern Region, which includes Texas, will hold a regional meeting in November in Atlanta, Georgia.

The GPA re-elected its president, vice-president, and treasurer; secretary Phil Nash, who organized the Denver meeting, chose to not run for office due to the heavy workload and his personal commitments.

Denver: Rocky Mountain high

For years we had heard how the altitude of Denver would make us short of breath and give us nosebleed if we walked more than two blocks without a stop for rest. While this may be the case for some people, we are happy to state that we had no such problems. In fact, we walked twenty blocks on our first afternoon there, with one brief stop to sit on a bus stop bench...but not due to the thin air, which we never noticed.

In fact, flying in on our plane we kept looking for the mountains and never saw them until we had landed. They are there, and they are beautiful, to be sure. Haze covered them for the duration of our stay, we're sorry to say.

We checked out only three local gay businesses; after all, we were there to work. The Crypt is a bookstore which has an impressive assortment in a tiny location, with many items discounted in price. We also were guests at a barbeque at a bar called Charlie's (but John is the owner). While (John's lover drove us over by Mercedes

(our first), we got to the line for serving too late to get any meat...and the only friendly natives we saw were the owner and his lover.

Other bars which came with good recommendations were the Foxhole and David's. This is hearsay, so don't hold us to it, please.

We should also note that Denver bars are not centralized as in Dallas, so if you plan an exhaustive grand tour, we would advise you check the weekend specials at Travel-Car or some other rental agency. There are plenty of low rates around, so don't take the first one you're quoted.

And then there's the world famous Ballpark. For those of you who have not heard of this fabled paradise, it's the tubs.

We waited to check into the Ballpark until after the business of the convention was behind us. The first thing we noticed was the large number of truly gorgeous young men there to drive one up the wall with mad desire. The Ballpark has three stories of men and fun, with the focal point the famous waterfall which sprays from the top story to the floor beneath, falling into a whirlpool bath made more interesting by its own private cavern opening up behind the falls. The walls of this wet area are cleverly done to simulate cave walls, and a small labyrinth has been built into the steam room. The water in the showers has been pre-set at a comfortable temperature to spare sudden hot and cold water upon the unwary.

There is also a small dance floor with live DJ, an exercise area near an old truck cab, and a large screen TV room where television was only a small part of the fare...there were also a number of interesting video tape shows which had our attention early in the morning.

Regrettably, we spent too much of our time...and money... in the snack and video game area. Fortunately, there was a good view of one of the two locker areas.

We place the Ballpark on our personal list of "not to be missed" spots in Denver, a city which is beautiful and deserves to be seen.

Travelers take note: If you disregard our advice to get a car, either use Zone Taxi (in Denver, Zone is cheaper than Yellow) or even the bus, which drops its prices in mid-day but discontinues service earlier than Dallas buses.

A nice place to visit...

METRO MISCELLANEY

What's the news across the Metroplex? We'll tell!

Besides Gay Pride Week, there's the Silver Spurs' June 11-13 anniversary celebration.

The Golden Unicorn is now officially welcome, and it's class. Nice video games, too.

The new Nutkraker has a good potential, with live shows adding to the fun this month. It's had quite a face-lift. It was the scene of a $1300+ fundraiser for Eugene the great, the star of the Gene & Company show, who tried a trick on her motorcycle and broke her leg in two places. Ouch! Unmentionable Rita is sending us a thank you note to publish for friends who helped out. Get well soon!

Our good friend John Fay at Club Dallas has asked us to save you some money with a couple of alerts: First, if your membership is going to expire soon, renew it by midnight June 14, when the price goes up to $15 annual or $10 for six months.

That's also your last chance to buy a discount card - if the limited supply lasts that long. You can use them after that, but they won't be on sale after that.

These are the prices to go into effect June 15: $7 for a locker, $10 for one of the private dressing areas, $14 for a deluxe dressing area, and $18 for one of the plush new executive dressing areas. The Wednesday night locker special - a favorite among the cognozenti - goes to $3.

Our new photographer, Harper Bryant, paid a visit to Fantasy in White and got a shot of the hot dance floor action at the Oak Lawn Transfer/Alcatraz.

Congratulations to Mike Smiley, the new Mr. Dallas... we took this photo in person. Wonder why... It was a fundraiser for THRF and Gay Pride Week.

The People's Sovereign Court of Dallas and the Fort Worth Court raised over $1000 for Gay Pride Week Sunday at the Texas Territory. Wow!

If you've noticed, there have been posters all over town for candidates for Emperor and Empress. The contest is getting hot and heavy.

Meanwhile, Raina's Gay Day & Picnic planned for June 19th is coming along. Various bars have donated 10 kegs of beer for a wild 'n' crazy beer bust at Forest Park. Don't miss it!

We hear the Dallas Gay Alliance has been informed and will be attending Fort Worth's 1st Gay Pride Day & Picnic. (Editor's note: All 500-plus will be attending? Better get an extra keg of beer!)

Tasha Kohl (Miss Gay Fort Worth, former Miss Gay Dallas, former Miss Gay Southwest, and second runner-up to Miss Gay America) just got back from a sensational show in St. Louis. We also hear Lynn Christopher is recovering after being assaulted last Tuesday night. (Editor's note: Must be - we saw her in the TCGA benefit on Monday night, where she accused us of not speaking to her...too much hair in her ears, poor thing couldn't hear, no doubt.) And Raina Lea (who, we hear, was stewardess on the Hindenburg) just made a successful tour in Houston. We hear that she spent 2 days and nights at the 2306. They'll be sending her a complimentary sling to hang in her kitchen (?)...it's closer to the Crisco, you know.

Monty at the Other Place lost another boy friend.

The "Cobra Woman" - Buddy of Jennings St. - has informed us they have been coordinating a gay pride week here in Fort Worth, starting Saturday, June 26th and running through July 3rd. Look for barbecues, street dances and a host of other fun activities during this week. We'll have more details for you later.

The Lumber Company is now having a piano bar every week night from 5 until 8 P.M. (Ye publisher caught it Monday, and it seemed to be something the guys were really enjoying...you couldn't see the piano for the men.) Thursday is their night in Mexico, featuring $1 tequila drinks with guacamole. We found out the Cobra Woman makes the guacamole himself...then we noticed last Thursday that his feet were a little green....

Lou over at the 651 will be throwing a big Birthday Bash on June 14th at that establishment. Fort Worth's gay honky tonk, the Come Along Inn, is drawing in the cowboys with their Tuesday night pool tournament.

The next big theme party at the TLC has been set for July 3rd, but there's still no word on what it'll be. Danny the daytime bartender at TLC recently had his mother at the bar, where I noticed her checking out a very nice belt buckle being worn by one of our more hunky men.

The Krazy Kowboy had some beautiful new male dancers two Sundays ago (and still have, they tell us). We understand the action was so hot on the dance floor it triggered a little action in the audience.

The Split Image has closed its doors after years of being in business, we understand.

Your friendly neighborhood publisher escaped with his life after T.J. at the Other Place mixed a hurricane for him when said publisher was in town to cover the Mr. and Ms. (Not MRS.) Gay Pride Week Fort (not FORTH) Worth contest benefitting the Tarrant County Gay Alliance. {You wouldn't believe how many people mentioned that set of errors to us...and we weren't the ones who made the error!} Fort Worth had as many competing as Houston. Winners were Cheryl Sherwood and Larry Leutwyler; runners up were Monty Purdon and Fancy Rae La Dawn.

Congratulations, by the way, to the new officers of TCGA - Amy Coleman, the newly elected president; Greg Wooten, vice president; Lester Van Huss, secretary; and Rev. B. J. Yother, treasurer.

That's all the news that's fit to print...so until next issue, adios.
