Police harassment continues

Bar harassment by Dallas police has quietly appeared once again. A series of police cars pulled up at Sassi's on the second night of the Miss Gay Dallas Pageant, and several officers entered the bar. A Metro Times representative on the scene recognized one officer as having also showed up the night of the Ms. Gay Dallas Pageant.

Two of the officers removed an apparently sober patron from the bar and stood with him on the sidewalk for a number of minutes. Some other patrons who had come outside for fresh air or to see what the officers were doing were told that they would be arrested for loitering if they did not go back inside at once.

At one point, car 688 backed down the one-way street several car lengths for no obvious reason, an offense which would have brought a ticket to a civilian doing the same thing.

Sassi's employees told Metro Times that officers have been in and out of the bar an excessive number of times recently, looking for any excuse to accuse the bar of a violation. (One possible problem with which patrons can be of assistance is individuals who use the wrong restroom. Complaints were made by officers who learned that women were using the men's restroom.)

Metro Times reminds bargoers that the purpose of the police in these instances is to intimidate those present. We also remind you that public intoxication is against the law and urge you to know your limit and stick to it. If you are sober and appear respectful to the police, the odds are that you will not be troubled.

Metro Times is asking for an investigation into this matter and will report on the results at a later date. We will not tolerate deliberate harassment and abuse of community members as such by our supposed protectors.

Low turnout for Bar awards

The Longhorn Bar Awards held at the Blackstone Hotel as a fundraiser to help meet expenses of the Fort Worth Imperial Court's Coronation (just three days later) at the Hyatt Regency was a prime example of what "Progress Through Unity" is not about.

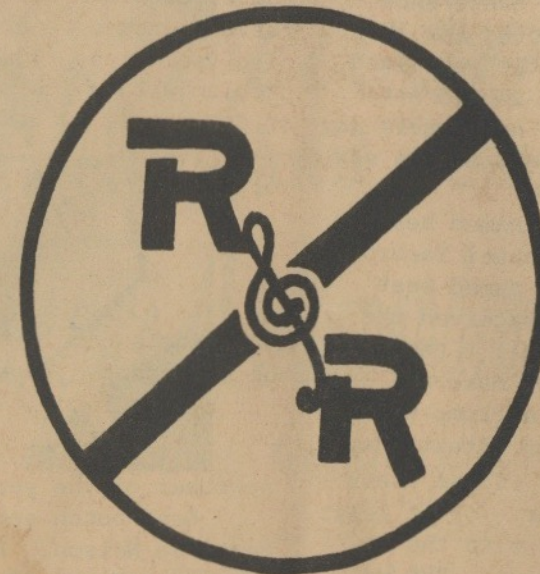

The Awards offer a chance for the gay population of Fort Worth in general to express their feelings and to give an honest sampling of what they really think is best, if members of the community decided to take advantage of the opportunity. In the past, when the Awards were given in bars, the patrons of that bar would use their presence and voting clout to swing the vote so that that bar would win most votes. In an effort to compensate, this year the elections moved to a hotel.

However, because the event is court-sponsored, a majority of the approximately 60 people in attendance were members or friends of the court, which makes its unofficial home at the Downtowner. There were a few representatives of other bars, including Ray Hill of South Jennings fame, Chuck Richey of the Krazy Kowboy, and C.B. of the Powder Puff.

The same rule applies here as has applied in regular elections: If you didn't vote, don't complain. We personally observed the counting of the votes, and the only imbalance we saw was in who chose to attend.

"You wanna scoop?", one young woman shrilled as she hastily walked out. "This is nothing but a popularity contest for the Downtowner." We must disagree. Nor would the placing of ballot boxes at various bars in advance have been an answer, since nothing would have prevented stuffing and multiple vote-casting.

The Downtowner was chosen as best girls' bar, best dance/show bar, Ft. Worth all around bar, and even best new bar of the year (and we must agree that it should not have been nominated - new owners may make changes, but do not make a new bar).

Joe Whitlock was named best costume designer. Michael Yarbrough of the Downtowner was named best D.J. of the year and received the award for waiter as well. Pat Wyatt received the award for make-up artist, while Gypse La Frump was named best out-of-town entertainer.

Voters named the 651 as their favorite afternoon bar - or at least that's what we heard, with the Lumber Company runner-up. But we were told that we have it backward, so take your choice. The Lumber Company's Kevin was the favorite male dancer.

Beaver was named both as best fem entertainer and as best bar manager (Downtowner) and tied with Raina Lea for personality of the year. Raina was named disco entertainer. Michelle Lynne took top honors in the country & Western category, while Jacki Jorj was picked for comedy entertainer. Top entertainer honors went to Tasha Kohl, while Aretha Wells is the newcomer of the year.

Best butch entertainer was Betty Jo Nelson. Favorite bar owner was Vicky (Downtowner), while best bartender was Don (Mother) of the Krazy Kowboy. The event of the year was Coronation '81, sponsored by the court. The three non-court functions nominated all were held at the Lumber Company.

The Landing was chosen best Dallas bar.

In a last minute write-in vote, those present selected their favorite publication, choosing - by a narrow margin, we understand - TWT. As no representative was present, the award was accepted for them by Raina Lea.

Pageants held

It hasn't been such a long time since Dallas lesbians began to take up the example of gay men and give lip sync shows, some while dressed as men and some in female attire.

A year ago, "Papa" Joe Moran, owner of the Miss Gay Dallas and Miss Gay Texas Pageants, started a Ms. Gay Dallas Pageant for women as women. A contest for women who impersonate men is planned later.

The Ms. Gay Dallas Pageant and the contestants have come a long way in the past year. It was soon apparent that those who entered had picked up a lot of the best (and worst) that the men had to offer, although full fledged production numbers such as have been seen in past contests are as yet to come to Ms. Gay Dallas.

The lovely Shai Carrington, the only black woman entering the contest, was crowned Ms. Gay Dallas after singing along with a record. Shai, along with runners-up Robin and Pat, did guest spots at Miss Gay Dallas the two following nights, and Shai confided that she was more nervous as a guest than when she was competing herself.

Miss Gay Dallas - for female impersonators - was two nights in length this year and drew in female impersonators from as far away as Denton. Edye Gregory was named Miss Congeniality, and Mahogany, Ann Marr and Trudy Tyler were among finalists chosen.

Second runner-up was Leigh Shannon, and judges broke a tie for first place based on number of actual points received to name Bobbie Holiday first runner-up and Dion Martel the new Miss Gay Dallas.

LEO: Did you dream it, or did it really happen? Is it real, or an illusion? This could be a confusing time, except that you're enjoying it too much. Let your imagination run riot. Creat reality out of fantasy.

VIRGO: If you're a loner, forget it. If it's solitude you're looking for, there won't be much to be found. This is a time for being with others; the needs, pleasures, and responsibilities of friendship is what this time is about.

LIBRA: You and your lover have things to work out, and this is the time to do it. All parts of your relationship are open for examination. Lots of talking and listening will go a long way toward making important decisions.

SCORPIO: Don't be so concerned about where you're going that you miss out on where you are. Take pleasure in simply doing what you're doing. The future is a find place to visit, but the present is the place to be.

SAGITTARIUS: Time to be a team player. You learn that in being part of a group; being able to work with others doesn't diminish your individuality. You're a star in the midst of other stars, shining your own special light.

CAPRICORN: You've got something to explain to authority figures, and though you're pushed to do it, you're in no mood for compromise or denial. If you're firm, but not angry, you'll be heard. Try dignity - not denunciation.

AQUARIUS: If you weren't so smart, you might be arrogant. In sex, it's nice to tell someone where to put it and how you want it done, but in other areas, being an example rather than a dictator works much better.

PISCES: Sex of an intense and exciting kind combined with playfulness and a need for simple pleasure can sharpen your sense of timing. The right touch at the right moment does wonders. Seeing the humor in a serious situation can add to the fun.

ARIES: You want what you want, and that's all there is to it. With a little bit of imagination, you may get the material things. If you can control your need for control, you may have your emotional needs filled, too.

TAURUS: Somebody's got you by the horns. Normally, you wouldn't mind that too much, but right now you have something important to prove. Show and tell what's in your mind and heart.

GEMINI: When an old love shows up out of nowhere, you'll know what to do and how to do it. You're sure enough of yourself to know the decisions you make will be the right ones.

CANCER: Someone older, who could have a very powerful influence in your life, attracts you. There's a feeling of beginnings in the air. New things are within reach; reach out!

18. Jennifer Foxx was crowned by own own Lady Shawn.

19. They're all real.

20. (d) - as reported in our previous issue.

HOW TO SCORE YOURSELF: 18 or more correct - you obviously had to cheat; 15 or more - incredibly good; when can we get together?; 10-15 - surprisingly well versed in gay history, and we're proud of you; 9 or less - you're in the majority, but we hope you won't stay.

Like we said, it was a tough quiz. Give yourself a pat on the back for even attempting it.

See, one of the guys at work gets Forum magazine, and being the healthy, red-blooded American Lesbian I am, I like to leaf through it till I get to the good parts. You know, the letters. Especially the ones where these nubile young things are having a slumber party and teaching each other how to kiss their boyfriends when suddenly (hee-hee! Hooray for our side!) their boyfriends aren't much the point anymore... (I remember that stuff. It tends to separate the dykes from the dilettantes, doesn't it?) On my way to the good stuff this time was an article that caught my eye - "Can Gays Be Spies?"

You have to laugh. Anyone who's fooled around a little on her own (or someone else's) lover knows that not only can gays be spies, most of us are. This being neither here nor there, what the article dealt with was the burning issue of whether you or I can trickety-trot down to the corner CIA office and pass the security check for a life-style of toppling foreign governments for fun and profit.

According to Forum, and the boys at Langley, Virginia, the answer is a firm nyet. Current CIA hiring guidelines are as follows: "A pattern of recurrent adult homosexual conduct can be expected to lead to an adverse determination of any applicant based, in large part, on undue risks that the individual, either directly or through sexual partners, may be exposed through pressure by hostile intelligence agencies."

if the Russkies find out, the CIA thinks you'll give them bomb secrets not to tattle to Mama.

Since government logic generally describes a mathematically perfect circle anyway, I'm not shocked; but it's mildly perturbing to realize that a couple of things have yet to dawn on these colossal ninnies. First of all, it doesn't take a doctorate in covert operations to discern that waving a willing female-type counterspy in front of Mr. Macho Heterosexual Agent is just as likely to result in a compromise of national security through "pressure by hostile intelligence agencies"...in fact that's probably more likely to happen, given our relative numbers...and the only way to eliminate sex - straight or gay - as bait is to elicit all our professional snoops. I'm sure that will do wonders for recruiting.

The second hit-em-between-the-eyeballs is that if society as a whole weren't so ridiculously tight about others' private sex lives, blackmail wouldn't be a factor anyway, for anybody. What scares most people about being dragged out of the closet, next to causing Mom and Dad heart attacks, is loss of livelihood, and by threatening that to gay spies alone, the CIA deprives itself of a tremendous pool of talent.

Well, what if you want to do your snooping closer to home? The FBI isn't quite so specific (it may be J. Edgar Hoover was a closet case after all) but Forum talked to an FBI press rep. Special agent Ed Gooderham wasn't keen on being pinned down, labelling homosexuality as a "significant" factor in the hiring process, and adding that, if it's the only one, the G-men will sign you up anyway.

But it was a sing-song of "no comments" when Gooderham was queried as to whether the Bureau had ever hired or fired someone for being gay.

Then Forum, bless their little

Two book reviews

To the Cleveland Station, by Carol Anne Douglas. Naiad Press, Inc., Box 10543, Tallahassee, FL 32302. Paperback, $6.95.

An out-of-town paper which got around to printing a review on this book before we did commented that the publisher had an off dal when she decided to publish this book. We have to agree.

We read chapter one, introducing Brenda Anne Dougherty, and saw it as a delightfully funny essay in which the writer was not afraid to poke fun at herself. If Douglas wants to be funny, she can be, and we wish she had stuck to what she does best.

The story this book relates may not be a familiar one to the lesbian world, but it is one which gay men know and hate. Simply put, it is the story of an unequal love affair - on the one hand, Brenda, sincere and anxious to fall in love for love's sake, and on the other, Andy, selfish, taking, and as full of lies as a crocodile's mouth is full of teeth.

Brenda plays babe in the woods. An avowed lesbian feminist, she not only is married to her hubby (who knows her dilemma), but still lives with him. And, so far as another woman is concerned, Brenda is... the same of it all...a virgin! And not too happy about it.

Andy is a habitual liar whom we spotted as such almost at once, but Brenda (and seemingly Carol as well) never seem to recognize the type. We were amazed and appalled at Douglas' ability to describe Andy so accurately yet not know her for the despicable person she was. We can only suppose that Douglas at one time met a prototype and fell in love and never survived.

interest, aside from the humorous first chapter, was the fact that this is the first interracial love affair between women we can recall having read.

If you order it, add a dollar or so for postage. Personally, we have seen much better from Naiad and hope to see much more.

The Age Taboo: Gay Male Sexuality, Power and Consent, edited by Daniel Tsang. Alyson Publications, Box 2783, Boston, Mass. 02208. Paperback, $5.95.

The question of where the age of consent really lies and whether laws should prohibit sexual contact between children and adults has in recent years become more of a sticky wicket. When we first came out, back when S&M was still in the closet, the gay community (and even more so the lesbian community) was fast to discredit and disclaim any man who preferred underage partners as a pervert, not really gay, just sick.

More recently, both women and men have come to look with a great deal more tolerance on this once dark side of sexual behavior. We approached this book with willing mind, knowing that gay youth can and often does seduce older men into relationships rather than the other way around and knowing that it is grossly unfair for the victim-of a seduction to be further victimized by society.

Unfortunately, after wading through essay after essay from a host of private individuals and even Kate Millett, we came away feeling disappointed. There are books we have seen which are written to tell outsiders why one feels a certain way, and there are books which are written to exchange ideas with the others inside a movement or way of philosophy. This book, we felt, is one for insiders. If you approach it as one who is actively supportive of relations between disparate age groups, you may gain from the book. If, as we did, you approach from the outside, be prepared to end up as empty as you came.

We'd enjoy reading a really constructive commentary on man-boy love (although we prefer them over thirty, personally), but this isn't it, in our humble opinion.

METRO MISCELLANEY

Welcome back to Metro MiscellaneY, friends and neighbors.

There'll be some changes made: The Fitzhugh North, which recently changed hands, has added new faces on their staff. A.C., whom many will remember fondly from down the street at the Eighth Day, is the new show director. And the new deejay is Lee, who was lured away from the Texas Territory.

We understand that there's a live band on hand Sunday evenings at the Wild Crowd Saloon, and they still have the original steakout to tantalize your taste buds.

Congratulations to Dale at the Crew's Inn, where they're having an anniversary bash while we have to be out working at delivering these papers.

And across the street, catch some favorite classic movies when the Frat House has movie night. We don't have the titles, so call to find out. (We'll try to know next time.)

Around the corner at the R&R Clubs, Roger and his crew are working their fingers to the bone in a frenzied effort to get the place open for you to enjoy. You can, he tells us, definitely expect the long-awaited grand opening to take place in August. Watch for his ad announcing the big moment.

Did we mention that we ran into the beautiful young woman who graced the cover of our third issue - way back in 1980? When we chatted with her a few weeks ago, she was deejaying at the High Country. They call her Dee because nobody can remember her name. (But they can't Delbert at the Hidden Door was telling us - tongue in cheek, of course - that the bar's image is being destroyed. It seems that his clientele are as much doctors and lawyers and ministers and executives in their suits and ties as they are hot leathermen. (Personally, we saw one of those executives, and we thought he was as hot as any leatherman...nothing personal, guys, but leather does nothing for us.) Delbert was working Saturday mornings last we heard, so drop by and say hello to a friendly, concerned member of the community...who just happens to be a very hot guy.

Would you believe we have a tidbit from Corpus Christi, too? Dena Kaye returns to the friendly little city August 2 to sing her heart out at the Odd Couple. She says she had a really good time on her last visit.

Our spies inform us that they may have another totally unexpected treat for Corpus soon, so big we're not even going to mention any names so we won't look any more like a fool if we're wrong.

We barely believe it ourself, but - are you ready for this? - in a very short time this paper will be heading to possibly as many as four more cities? And one of them isn't even in Texas!

We're sitting on a hot piece of gossip which should be coming through almost any time now that will knock your socks off. Don't miss a single issue, 'cause this one's a lulu!

Three cheers! We're thrilled to be rid of the pool hall over on Cedar Springs, and happy to see a Half-Price Bookstore in its place. In case you never guessed, we're rather fond of the printed word.

The heat's finally got to our old friend Mama at Adam's. She's dropped her prices...which weren't high to begin with. Inflation-fighters, take note. And the gang at Adam's said goodbye to Ed, the light man...and adartist...and general friend in time of need... a couple of weekends back. Not that Ed is leaving - it's just that he's so good at his daytime job that he no longer has time to help out at the bar. But he's a nice guy, and Mama quite possibly might never have made it without his help.

R. J. Fink, known for his extravaganzas such as the Miss Gay Southwest Pageant, threw a bash at his penthouse the other day after the Miss Gay Dallas Pageant, which his contestant won. However, he had planned the party anyway. We never saw so many drag queens in one place outside a dressing room or off a stage in all our born days. And a few non-drags, too, of course. We were rubbing elbows with the likes of Naomi Sims (as crazy off the stage as on) and Hot Chocolate and Tiffany Ariagus. (Okay, if she didn't want her name misspelled, why didn't she call herself Smith?) (Of course, there's already a Tiffany Jones - maybe then they could do a double bill, "Alias Smith and Jones", or something....)

If you still haven't called to volunteer your services to help make the National Leadership Conference a success, there's still time - it's set for August 13-15. DGA's number is 528-4233. You'll probably have to talk to an answering service, but they seldom bite.

Welcome to the Conference of Independent Christians, meeting in Dallas July 22-25. We've been asked to hold a workshop for the group. The public can take part in the conference, too, if they like - registration is just $10.00. (Worship services, of course, are free.) That's at 4402 Roseland, just off Ross between Peak and Carroll.

And now, folks, we're hitting the big time! One of our new advertisers also advertises on TV. Lisa Hobelmann, with whom we chatted by phone several times recently, has opened a strictly legit school to train masseurs and masseuses, and we think she'll rub you the right way. In fact, she has the only licensed school of massage in the entire state of Texas. So, if you happen to be in the market for a new career, give Lisa a call.

We hear that the unsinkable Molly Brown has nothing on the unstoppable Dena Kaye. Dena, so we understand, had 'em packed into the Wild Crowd Saloon like sardines in the can last Saturday night when - horror of horrors! - the electricity took a coffee break for about half an hour.

That's right...no lights...no sound...no air conditioning! So our heroine pulls her chair in a bit closer, grabs a guitar, has a few friends hold candles while our old pal Larry ("Dolly") fans her with a copy of some gay publication which just happened to still be on hand...and sings her heart out for the duration of the blackout until things return to normal. That's what they call a trooper! And we call her audience a loyal group - despite the stuffy atmosphere one must expect when the air conditioning isn't on in July in Dallas, the crowd stayed close to not miss a single note.

One more kiss, and then goodbye - La Nuit Chaude invites persons who would like to have a table at their next bash to Uptown Dallas (2911 Routh at Cedar Springs) this Sunday, 1-3 P.M.
Au revoir.

FT. WORTH MISCELLANEY

It's rodeo time in Reno!

The Krazy Kowboy will be sending a mob to the Reno National Gay Rodeo the first weekend in August. They'll be having a big Blast-off party and country style dance with special beer prices all night on July 24.

Mark, the night bartender, and Bruce are quite a thing these days.

How would you like to be the peanut butter between those two pieces of bread?

{When did we start a culinary column? Editor.}

Joe Whitlock is the proud winner of the Great Tricycle Race between the Downtowner and the Krazy Kowboy held recently.

Last Sunday the Krazy Kowboy had a hugh barbecue with all the trimmings (yum yum).

Last Saturday night the Lumber Company entertained all the visiting courts of the United States. The courts were in town for the Fort Worth coronation, which was held at the Hyatt Regency. Jackie Jorj is the new emperor, and Carlotta is the new empress, while Betty Jo and Martha the Beaver were named new Grand Duke and Duchess.

The Cobra Woman tells us to look for a new theme party coming up August 1. We were at the Lumber Company Friday night and were both charmed and entralled by the piano genius of Don Reasons. Don's there every night 5 till 9.

Cobra Woman also informed us that the Come Along Inn may turn into another Dirty Sally's and made it a point to tell me I couldn't throw my old sticky underwear on the ceiling. Whereas I proceeded to explain to her where all her poison went. When you get to be her age, you tend to drool a lot, so unfortunately she lost most of her poison on her shirt front.

The 651 Club is starting up another "semester" of their Country and Western dance lessons on Monday nights with those two fun guys, Chip 'n' Dale.

Here's something that's rather serious. We've all been reading about the Hepatitis B that has stricken our community. You can now be tested by Hepta Ltd. to see if you need the new vaccine for your protection. The new test can take the worry out of being close and save you the expense of having the series of shots...and they'll even take the price of the test off your shots if you need to have the vaccination. Head for the Lumber Company July 29 and 30, 7-10 P.M., July 31 (5-10 P.M.) and August 1 (3-8 P.M.). Please take advantage of this opportunity. The cost of the test is only $7, much less than an office call to your doctor and about the same as seven cocktails you could do without...or, if you can't do without, have a few while you're there for the test. If you can't do without the cocktails, you really need the test, as hepatitis sufferers aren't allowed to drink!

Birthday time! Last Saturday night was C.B.'s birthday party at the Powder Puff...the previous Monday was Mitch's birthday party at the Corral (which was a rousing success)...and Thursday night was Frank (Come Along Inn)'s birthday fete held at the Krazy Kowboy. Happy Birthday to you all.

Wilma Faye of the Other Place has been spotted quite a bit lately at TLC, where husband and husbandette Richard and Larry are still entertaining Ft. Worth's finest.

The Corral's leather shoppe is reported to be doing landslide business.

Have you ever seen a sermon preached in leather regalia? If you haven't, that rare opportunity will be yours during the revival at New Being Community Church from August 5 through August 8. Chet Rice will be the speaker at each of the four services in the revival.

Roy would like to thank the entertainers for his other half's birthday bask - LaTonya Regay, Tika Marie, and (of course) Raina Lea.

In closing, have you heard the latest saying in Congress?

"Promise them anything, but give them our page."
So long for now.
