A Junior reunion

Circuit's star DJ
Junior Vasquez reunited with injured pup

chat

A recent incident involving superstar DJ Junior Vasquez proves that even the glitziest personalities on the party circuit can have a heart.

In mid-July, Junior was walking his Jack Russell terrier, Griffin, when the dog accidentally slipped his leash in Chelsea, ran into traffic and was struck. The injured dog limped away and Junior and pals looked high and low for the poor fellow, but in vain.

Devastated, Junior contacted gossip mover and shaker Cindy Adams of the New York Post — herself a dog lover and owner of a Yorkie — and asked her to write about the incident. Adams promptly inserted an item into her well-read column.

But no luck. On a trip to Italy, Adams said she telephoned back two weeks after the item ran and an assistant informed her they'd heard nothing about Vasquez's dog. In Naples, Adams happened by a square where homeless dogs were being offered for a contribution to a local animal shelter. Heartened by the animals' plight, Adams petted and cooed over everything from mutts to a Labrador Retriever. But ultimately she had to say no.

A little saddened, Adams

returned to her hotel only to have a message from her assistant back home — Junior's dog had just been located. In Pennsylvania, of all places. Seems on the day Griffin was hit, a Pennsylvania man was visiting Chelsea and came upon the injured dog. He cuddled and cleaned the shivering Griffin, then fed him and began searching for his parent. Unable to locate its owner — the dog had lost its collar and hence its ID tag — the man hadn't the heart to leave the injured pup in the street, so he took him home and nursed him back to health.

Unbelievably, a month later the man came across an old New York Post, an sifting through the newspaper, he came across Adams' very column where the item about Vasquez's dog appeared. Putting two and two together, he realized the dog he had rescued from Chelsea Street was Junior's, leading to a happy reunion for Vasquez and his beloved Griffin.

Q's normally not too excited about stories that have a happy ending, but in this case we're happy that Junior was reunited with his now-fully-recovered pet.

This story doesn't have a happy ending. In fact, it doesn't have an ending at all. It's the never-ending escapades of First Daughter and primer partier Jenna Bush. Seems Jenna's bound and determined to give her parents joint coronaries — and a communal headache for the White House, where beleaguered presidential PR types are asking themselves, "What next?"

Jenna's been in Southern California all summer, where she's interning at a television production company. Besides, what better place to escape all that nastiness about underage drinking in Austin, which landed her probation and a community service commitment.

And where better else to party? According to the National Enquirer, Jenna and six of her pals rented a $429-a-night suite at a posh hotel in La Jolla, California, where they spent a libidinous weekend. One observer saw the septet at poolside, and Jenna was reportedly slamming "down Bloody Marys before the group decided to switch to wine. The next evening, the group strolled down the town's main drag, wine bottle and plastic cups in tow, drinking openly, the Enquirer reports.

Then a few days later, Jenna and twin sis Barbara attended a swanky Beverly Hills party. "Jenna was drinking, and so was Barbara," photographer Raul Roa reported, one of the few willing to go on the record about the presidential daughters' escapades. Roa was there because he had been commissioned by the host to take photographs at the event that included celebrities like Pete Sampras, Snoop Doggy Dogg and The Rock.

But eventually a fight broke out involving about 10 men, and Secret Service agents had to hustle Jenna and Barbara upstairs before police arrived.

A Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission staffer told the Enquirer that Jenna better watch it during her Southern California sojourn. According to the staff, California takes its underage drinking laws much more seriously than Texas, where Jenna got off with a minor slap on the wrist for that incident at Chuy's restaurant in Austin. "She'll be arrested if she gets charged," the staffer said, indicating that Jenna would be in for a good deal more punishment than the few hours' community service she was handed by a friendly Texas judge earlier this year.

A bender of another sort has gotten Grammy-winner Macy Gray a little publicity of the negative kind when the striking six-foot-tall singer, on tour with the Dave Matthews Band, realized her personal stash was running short. She hopped in her limo and ordered her driver to find her a dealer so she could score some pot. The driver went to a nearby park, spotted some bloodshot-eyed frat kids and told them Macy needed a dime bag.

But what was supposed to be a discreet drug buy turned into a celebrity romp. "I got tagged," Gray said, as people suddenly appeared from everywhere, dragging out cameras and video recorders.

That's not the only incident giving Gray's keepers at Sony Recordings gas. The Sony Suits had plenty more to worry about when they opened the pages of the September issue of Details magazine, where Gray told the interviewer, "I'm a big fan of being out of your mind sometimes. You can have a lot of revelations."

The Afro'd superstar also said she'd like to take a trip to Jupiter someday — the planet, not the town in Florida. Here on earth, she's having a little trouble remembering that a Grammy-winning starlet whose first record sold 7 million copies can't just traipse down to the local park for an innocent and anonymous drug buy.

What is it about Madonna? Since the beginning of her career, the Material Mom has been notably skilled at keeping her name in lights.

Now some new publicity has dropped down like pennies from heaven. Seems a Naples, Fla., woman taking part in a radio station's outrageous stunt contest decided to play Lady Godiva. Wearing only pasties and a G-string, the woman mounted a horse and cantered past a crowd at a local park. While the G-strings remained in place, the G-string broke, leading one offended mom whose small children witnessed the event to call police. The woman got her two tickets to Madonna's Drowned World constabularies arrived, she got another kind of ticket — for indecent exposure.

And looks like the Material Mom has a Material Daughter on her hands. Madonna recently told Germany's Bild magazine that she wants her 4-year-old daughter, Lourdes, to be the best-dressed kid on the planet. It's a good thing Madonna's concert tour is selling out around the globe. According to the German mag, just like her celebrity mother, Lola, as M calls her daughter, also has expensive tastes. Madonna has spent $50,000 so far this year on Lourdes' wardrobe, dressing the tot in designer fashions from the likes of Jean Paul Gaultier, Dolce & Gabbana and Stella McCartney. At least the kid has taste!

While Madonna is selling out her concerts, the Jacksons are apparently having trouble in that department. A recent check of Ticketmaster.com shows that the cheaper seats for the two Jackson Family Reunion concerts in Madison Square Garden were pretty much taken. But the expensive seats down front and along the near sides — ranging from $800 to $2500 per ticket — are largely unsold.

Ultimately, one insider said, the record companies may be forced to plop down quite a fortune to buy those seats so their stars won't be embarrassed by playing to less than a full house.

Europe's rags are all aflutter about a possible romance between local princess Carlotta, who just turned 15, and Britain's hunky Prince William. From the perspective of royal protocol, it's an imminently suitable match. Since her mother, Princess Caroline, married Prince Ernst of Hanover last year, Carlota is not a distant in-law of William. The Hanover connection also gives her more legitimacy than does her title from the tiny principality of Monaco.

Perhaps more important from William's perspective, the budding princess is an absolute beauty. Although she got a naval ring for her recent birthday, she apparently hasn't inherited the wild streak that belongs to her mother, who's constantly embarrassed her royal dad.

Meantime, Carlotta is said to have plans to start spending lots of time in London, where her stepfather maintains a stately home. Hmmm.

Bits & Pieces

Sean Hayes, the Emmy-nominated Jack on Will & Grace, helped a gunshot victim by taking off his shirt and holding it against the bullet wound until paramedics arrived. According to Hayes' publicist, the actor was driving alone when he noticed the victim, Courtney Cunningham, lying in the street and pulled over to help. According to the publicist, Hayes called 911, alerted neighbors and took off his shirt and pressed it against the wound to stop the bleeding. After police and paramedics arrived, he gave them a brief statement and then left. The man was treated for a leg wound at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center and released.

A federal judge has ruled that there is no evidence that openly-gay Survivor winner Richard Hatch was falsely arrested last year for abusing his nine-year-old son — a charge that was later dropped. The ruling came in a suit Hatch filed claiming he was improperly arrested by Middletown, R.I., police. According to the boy, Hatch forced him to awaken in the early morning hours and go on long runs to reduce his weight, and got rough with him when he pooped out. A separate privacy suit Hatch filed over police releasing a statement from his son as well as a mug shot will be allowed to proceed.

Sinead O'Connor, who last year "came out" as a lesbian but then ruined the planned Watopolava gay music tour this summer, has married a man, British reporter Nick Sommerlad, 27. The nuptials reportedly were held in Ireland three weeks ago. The gay music tour, organized by the Pet Shop Boys' Neil Tennant and scheduled to hit Dallas, Houston and San Antonio, was cancelled when organizers couldn't find another big name to replace O'Connor, who said at the time she was canceling because of unstated personal reasons. Now we know.

Director Kevin Smith's Jay and Silent Bob Strike Back, opening today nationwide, has been condemned by the Gay and Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation as one "big gay joke." GLAAD entertainment director Scott Seemin wrote Smith: "All [the film's] references to gay men reinforce them as objects of acceptable ridicule and dehumanization." An unruffled Smith, who posted the letter on his Web site, fired back: "I'm not sorry, because I didn't make the jokes at the expense of the gay community." According to the director, making Jay and Silent Bob and the other mental midgets in the film so leery of gay people is a way of making fun "of a mindset that exists in our culture."

According to New York's gay gossip maven Michael Musto, porn star Kyle Bradford, who's smitten with Tom Cruise, created a new Web site that thanked people for "cruisin' by." But he quickly changed the terminology to "stopping by." Don't wanna be next to get slapped by a multimillion dollar lawsuit from Cruise, who's grown especially skittish about rumors of homosexuality since his high-profile divorce from Nicole.

Musto also reports that The Opposite of Sex creator Don Roos' long-time boyfriend is none other than All Over the Guy writer-costar Dan Bucatinsky. The source? Bucatinsky himself!

Dance music performer Kevin Aviance apparently has it in for that other drag diva, RuPaul. Kevin's people are deluging certain reporters with publicity releases denigrating RuPaul as tired and passé and promoting Aviance as the more captivating alternative. Meow!

Hunky MTV host Carson Daly has been hired to host NBC's revived late-night talk show, Late. Daly, the hottie of MTV's Total Request Live video music countdown show, will continue his MTV duties when he takes on his NBC gig next year.

Who was really responsible for ushering Pearl Harbor star Ben Affleck into rehab? None other than Charlie Sheen, who was once known as a Hollywood bad boy for his own excessive partying. According to the National Enquirer, Sheen reportedly took one look at the hard-living Affleck — who'd reportedly just come crashing down from a marathon binge of booze, gambling and cocaine — and convinced him to enter the same facility he went for rehab, Promises in Malibu.

A buffed body is a better body

Most of us head to the gym just to look good, but regular exercise has untold benefits in keeping us healthy and happy

fitness

by michael kasten

Michael Kasten is a certified fitness instructor and writer based in Fort Lauderdale. His column appears weekly in Qtxas. He also writes for Men's Fitness and Exercise for Men Only. He may be reached by e-mail at Mkworkout@aol.com.

We all know just how important it is to exercise daily if we want to look and feel good. Many of us just do it because everyone else does. Some of us haul our asses to the gym every day so that we can "keep up with the Joneses," so to speak. We need to look as good as the next buffed boy. And no matter what city in the United States you travel to, gay men as a group will ultimately have the best bodies by far. Much has been theorized that when Marky Mark was pinned up over Times Square in New York City selling Calvin Klein underwear, the "gay body revolution" began. Since the early 1980's at least one thing has been quite clear — gay men work hard on making their bodies look good, and straight men have followed the same course.

But even though you may be pumping it hard at the gym because you want to stand out at the bar tonight, exercise has many wonderful effects on the body that you probably never even thought about.

A number of studies have indicated that regular exercise, even of moderate intensity, reduces the risk of colon cancer, and any cancer related to obesity. A number of other studies have suggested that vigorous exercise offers a 10-to-70 percent reduction in the risk of breast cancer for women and prostate cancer in men.

Several studies are now underway to measure the effects of exercise on people living with cancer and dealing with chemotherapy. Preliminary results of those studies suggest that exercise has a positive physical, mental and emotional effect and can lessen the negative side effects of chemotherapy, reducing the side effects of nausea and fatigue.

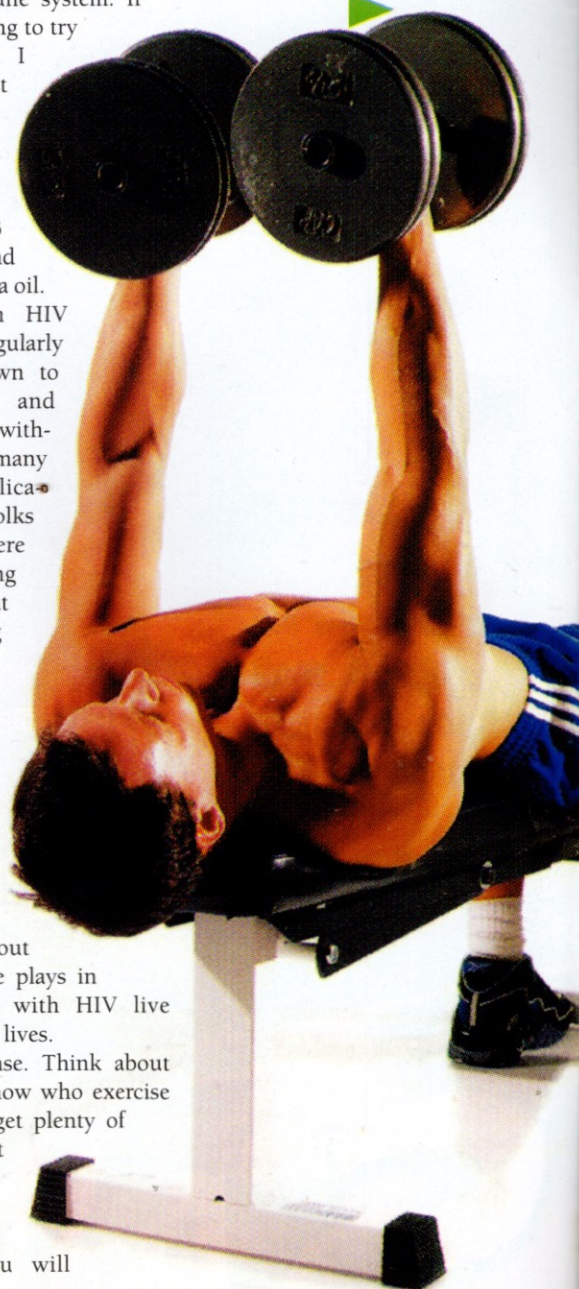

So far, no controlled studies have been conducted to measure the effects of exercise on our immune systems. In people who have colds, exercise has had no effect on the duration and severity of the infection. We should all avoid strenuous activity when we have fevers. High-intensity activity seems to suppress the immune system. Some highly trained athletes report being susceptible to colds right after a strenuous event. Furthermore, very low fat diets, like the Adkins Diet, tend to stress the immune system. If you are ever going to try that diet (and I advise against it for various reasons), make sure to supplement your diet with omega-3 fatty acids found in fish and canola oil.

People with HIV who exercise regularly have been shown to live longer and healthier lives, without suffering as many medical complications as unfit folks experience. There are studies going on right now that are following people with AIDS who have been diagnosed for over 15 years. These patients are still aerobically and physically active and are being tracked to find out the role exercise plays in helping people with HIV live longer, healthier lives.

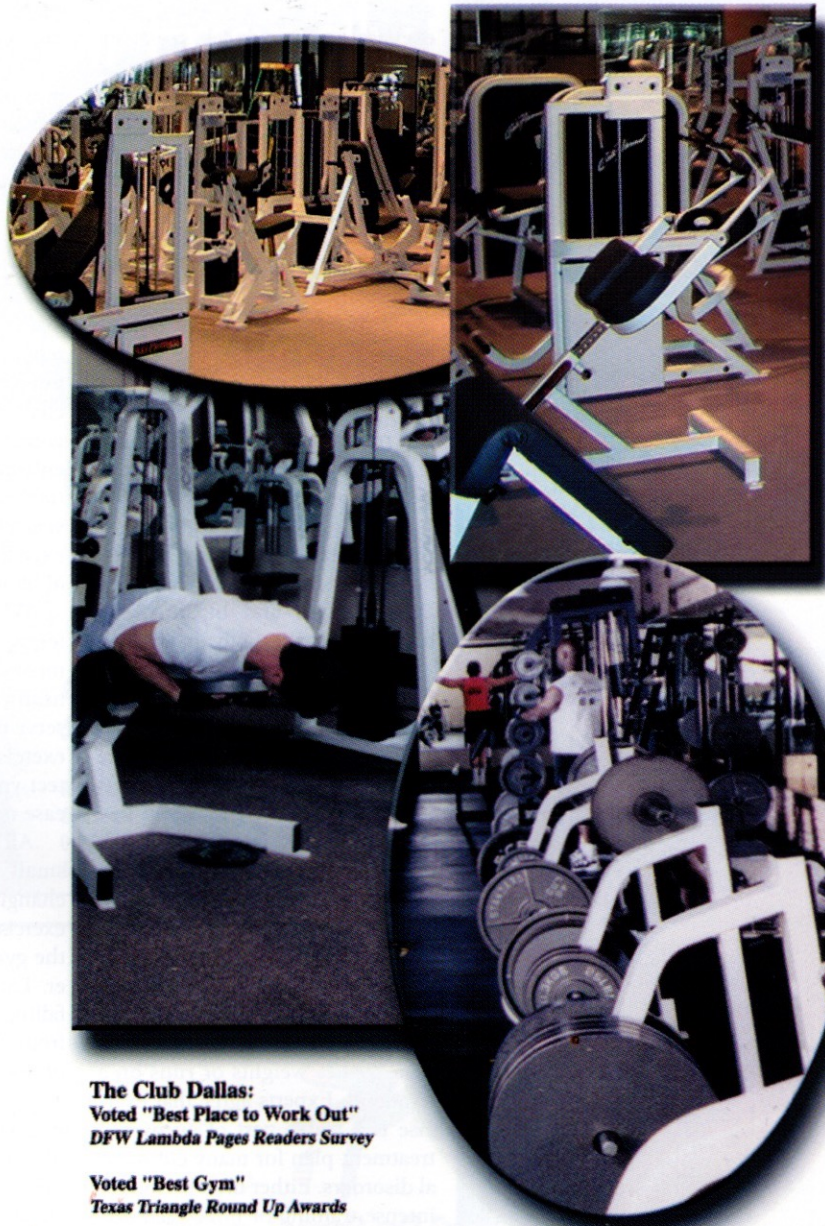

It makes sense. Think about the guys you know who exercise daily, eat well, get plenty of sleep, don't drink alcohol and don't take recreational drugs, and you will probably see a person who has had a history of good health and one that looks good, too. Then look at HIV positive folks who are habitual drinkers and partiers and you see people who have more problematic medical histories. In this instance, a history of daily moderate exercise and a healthy lifestyle definitely extends and enhances life.

People with central nervous system diseases can benefit from exercise as it reduces spasticity and muscle atrophy. Parkinson's and Alzheimer's disease sufferers can all benefit from light to moderate exercise. In addition to the physical benefits of exercise, the psychological pluses help manage the illness. Exercise machines and aquatic activity are really useful to these folks. People who suffer from neuropathy induced by either diabetes or some of the drugs they are taking benefit from daily exercise. Arthritis sufferers can reduce the pain and agony of joint stiffness by daily doses of physical activity, too.

Athletes often complain of gastrointestinal distress when performing endurance exercises. Diarrhea, gas and bloating can occur when the body is stressed way beyond its normal limits. Experts suggest, however, that moderate exercise might reduce some intestinal disorders like ulcers, irritable bowel syndrome, indigestion and diverticulosis. In a study published last year, the risk of ulcers in men was lowered by moderate exercise. Older folks who exercise may also have a lower risk for gastrointestinal bleeding.

The psychological effects of exercise are well-known to anyone who pushes weights or runs on a treadmill. Experts agree that exercise is a viable part of an overall treatment plan for many emotional disorders. Either brief periods of intense training or prolonged aerobic workouts can raise the levels of certain chemicals in the brain such as endorphins, adrenaline, serotonin and dopamine.

Rhythmic aerobic exercise like running walking, stair climbing, and step aerobics help reduce stress and anxiety. And as we all know very well, weight loss and muscle tone can boost self-esteem. In 1999, a review of many different studies found that exercise advances the treatment of clinical depression and anxiety, enhances moods and improves self-esteem. Some other studies suggest that exercise is just as effective in relieving depression in some patients as some of the antidepressant chemical agents (such as Paxil and others). Some experts suggest that exercise may even be better at maintaining normal mood over time.

Getting people into an exercise program and then having them stay in it are the key factors to improving their mental health and continue to be a challenge for the givers and takers of professional help. Aerobic exercise is also linked to improved mental vigor, including reaction time, acuity and math skills. Many studies report that older people who are physically fit respond to mental challenges just as quickly to unfit young adults. Exercise may even enhance creativity and imagination. A study published earlier this year reported that older folks who exercise regularly had lower rates of mental deterioration.

Whether you are currently suffering from a specific medical ailment or just concerned about your health in general, make sure to serve up a good healthy amount of exercise each day. It can help protect you and keep you free of disease now and in the future.

All you need to do is make that small commitment to begin changing your life today. Start an exercise program. Head on over to the gym and hire a personal trainer. Eat a healthy diet. Don't start falling into the diet trap. Stay away from diets that make you eat lots of one kind of food and nothing of another. Get plenty of sleep. Let your body get the rest it needs and deserves (7 to 9 hours seems to be the magic numbers for most). Drink less alcohol. Be careful the next time you pull up to the bar and ask for a double. Experts agree that one glass of wine per night is acceptable in a healthy lifestyle. And don't take recreational drugs. First of all, you do not know what you are taking unless you have manufactured the stuff yourself. Second, party drugs do damage to your mind and your body, a known fact. They may even contribute to the aging process, so stay away.

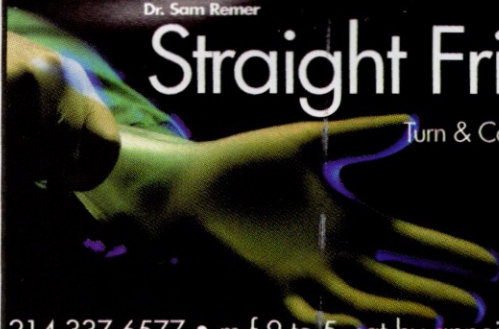

Armed with good information, all of us can make healthy choices for a better life today and the future. As always, I wish you the best in your quest for the best for yourself!

need a reason to get out of the horrific Texas heat? How about 170 reasons? Better yet, how about 170 gay, homo, queer, lesbian, drag-o-rific, dramatic, sexy, funny, provocative reasons? Then you're living in the right state.

Our beautiful capital city is now host to the largest gay and lesbian film fest in the entire Southwest, the 14th edition of The Austin Gay & Lesbian International Film Festival (aGLIFF). And even though you could watch one film every day for nearly six months and never see the same credits roll twice, the festival is more conveniently concentrated into two weeks of celluloid bliss, beginning today and concluding on September 6.

Another great feature of aGLIFF, which most festivals do not offer, is multiple screenings of select films, making it far easier to catch that one special flick you're dying to see.

As always with our festival coverage, there are far too many entries to review individually, so based on what films I've already seen — or which I have a very keen psychic sense about — I proudly present a few films you won't want to miss. So grab my hand and follow me into the theater for a really good time.

Opening night offers a sneak peak at one of those rare gay films that is actually going to have a fairly wide release rather than being tucked away at an art house's 20-seat theater for a limited one-week engagement. That film is All Over the Guy (catch the full Qtexas review next week, when the film is scheduled to begin opening at theaters in major Texas cities). This romantic comedy from writer/producer/star Dan Bucatinsky also features Richard Ruccolo, the dreamy stud from ABC's Two Guys and a Girl, and a bevy of other notable celebrities including Lisa Kudrow, Christina Ricci, Andrea Martin, Doris Roberts and Joanna Kerns. Bucatinsky will also be attending the screening, which is followed by the Opening Night Gala at the GSD&M complex.

Notable films joining All Over in the comedy category include 10 Attitudes, starring gay comic Jason Stuart; a collection of funny lesbian shorts, Amazing

Amazons; another collection of comedy shorts, Gay Giggles; the ultra-campy Boys of Cellblock Q; the quiet charmer Big Eden; and this year's greatest gay film, Hedwig and the Angry Inch. Whether prompting you to sing along or spew Dr. Pepper and Milk Duds on the people in front of you, these films guarantee a good time."

But if you need to watch something a little more intellectual than those causing projectile concession treats, then this year's lineup of 16 documentaries about various aspects of the gay experience should give your TV a rest from its PBS habit. The remarkable Scout's Honor tackles the anti-gay policies of the Boy Scouts of America through a very unlikely hero. True-Hearted Vixens delves into the world of the Women's Professional Football League, proving again that everyone on the planet is more athletic than poor little me. Another top pick, as well as one of the standouts at the Sundance Film Festival, is Southern Comfort, which tells the tale of Robert Eads, a female-to-male transsexual living in small Georgia town — a fate I wouldn't wish on anyone.

For those wanting to use aGLIFF as a temporary travel agent, there are plenty of foreign films full of sexy people with exotic accents. Nico and Dani

(Spain) has been on screens around the state, but this tender coming-of-age story is always a best bet. Burnt Money (Argentina) is described as a "steamy, high-octane crime drama that's like a gay Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid crossed with Bonnie and Clyde." And perhaps you've heard the story of Iron Ladies (Thailand) circulating the news channels recently. This daring true story follows a gay/transvestite volleyball team who makes it to the national finals, beating all odds and expectations.

Obviously, there are plenty of other worthwhile films, but the previous lists should give you a good starting point. This week's complete schedule listing is included for handy reference, but if you want to check out photos, reviews, synopses and more of each and every entry, then log on to www.agliff.org.

Country crooner turned dance-hit queen K.T. Oslin says new album is her last being at the top of the charts is nothing new for K.T. Oslin. But the Dance Charts? Well, you've no doubt heard the revved-up Rosemary Clooney staple, "Come On-a My House" in the danceterias this summer. The single turned into a powerhouse club anthem with remixes at the hands of Motiv8, Mind Trap and Michael T. Diamond. The single is from her new album, Live Close By — Visit Often.

Produced by Raul Malo, acclaimed frontman for the Mavericks, Live Close By is country music to get dressed up to — bridging the dancehall cool of Malo's own band with the country-politan elegance of Miss Patsy Cline. Fittingly, the album was initially conceived as an album of standards. But Oslin quickly decided against that after the millennium came and went.

She muses, "Raul and I got to talking one day and I just came to the realization that if we do standards, we would never get any radio play — and if we did, the only people who were gonna make any money were the lawyers of the dead artists. So we went in and started writing some new things for the album."

In 1987, Oslin released her major-label debut, 80s Ladies. A little bit country, a little bit rock & soul, the album made an instant star out of K.T., debuting at No. 15 on the country chart, which was the highest-charting debut from a female artist since Loretta Lynn back in 1964.

But K.T. never really intended to be a country star, she admits.

"Somehow I got pegged into the whole country thing," she says. "If you were to ask me which section in the record store you would put my new album in ... it could just about go anywhere. It's all about variety for me. It's no fun just to crank out the same thing over and over again. And I don't like to make albums that concentrate on just three singles and the rest of it's just bullshit. I want you to listen to the whole album."

K.T.'s first brush with music-making was in the '60s, when she formed a folk trio with none other than Guy Clark. After several unsuccessful attempts at sparking a career, she fell back on her drama skills, appearing in musicals such as Hello, Dolly!, a show that eventually brought her to the Big Apple.

Once there, Oslin barely made ends meet with bit parts in musicals and singing commercial jingles as well as session work. It may have been New York in the swinging '70s, but K.T. was living in a different light.

"I never got to go to Studio 54 or all the discos," she admits, adding, "I didn't have any money."

Although Oslin released a greatest-hits package and a covers album in the early '90s, coyly titled My Roots Are Showing, the hits dried up as she watched the music industry change in ways that could no longer accommodate her.

"It became a place where artists were becoming famous faster, selling more records sooner and burning out quicker," she recalls. "It wasn't about developing artists anymore."

Making matters worse, while Oslin was giving some thought to dropping out of the commercial music scene completely, she was diagnosed with heart problems, which eventually required surgery.

Listening to Live Close By, it's clear that this woman is ready to roll again. But when asked what she thinks she can offer today's pop scene, K.T. is typically modest and a little self-deprecating.

"I don't know," she says. "If you're tired of looking at young girls who're barely dressed in music videos and you want to listen to somebody who knows a little more about life and love, then you'll probably like this record."

And she adds provocatively: "This is going to be my last album. I really don't need any money. I've got enough for the rest of my life. The business has just gotten too mean, and I don't like to do mean things."

Getting his vengeance

by matt brady

Spurned lover turns to Russian mob to give cheating boyfriend the full treatment

For Lucas Entertainment's tenth entry into the XXX gay video market, Michael Lucas has put out one bad-assed film with Vengeance. The flick features an all-out, no-holds-barred star turn by former top-turned-superbottom, Carlos Morales, as a cheating boyfriend whose lover goes to the Russian Mafia for revenge. Lucas plays the mob boss, with an imposing team of enforcers: Tony Acosta, Erik Martins, and monster-dicked Chad Hunt. When Carlos finally gets his comeuppance, the result is one of the hottest scenes captured on video this year.

The story begins with spurned lover Anthony Ferrat pleading with Russian mob leader Michael Lucas to help him get back at his backstabbing boyfriend. Lucas, looking every bit the role in his designer suit, agrees — for a price. To let Anthony know a little more about the mob's methods, Lucas and his cronies tell Anthony about the time they sent Latino hunk Tony Acosta to teach pretty little Michel Mattel a lesson about loyalty. In a flashback, we watch Tony begin with kisses as Michel readily gets into the action with this hard-chiseled stud. Michel helps Anthony out of his clothing and then gulps his cock, getting rough treatment from this

Then Anthony turns his attention to Michel's perky white ass, giving it the royal treatment with a fabulous rim-job before Michel goes after Anthony's cock again. But that doesn't last long, as Anthony climbs atop his victim and proceeds to give him an incredible pounding in a variety of positions. Before leaving, Anthony warns Michel to pay the money he owes — or else.

Then it's time for Lucas to prove that his minions get their skills from the boss himself. Anthony enters as the boss sits at a desk smoking a cigar. But it's not long before Michael feeds his long pipe into his man. Anthony gives a spirited performance as the boss-man commandingly orders him on, then turns and bends over for Anthony to pay some special attention to his butt. Finally, the boss slides into Anthony and lets him have it in a variety of positions, including standing on the bed. Time for Anthony to pay the piper and to play on Lucas's long, uncut pipe. Lucas makes gets full value from his arrangement, really putting Anthony through the paces. Anthony's smooth, tight body writhes with pleasure as Lucas repeatedly slams into him.

Meantime, beautiful Carlos Morales is holing up with his new lover, ripped blond bombshell Richie Fine. Carlos has one of the best asses in porn, and Richie goes to town on him. Hungry Carlos can barely contain his lust. While getting slammed by Richie from behind, he can't stop himself from cumming on the spot. Ever the trooper, he flips right back around so that Richie can keep banging him and finish the scene. Then, Erik Martins bangs on the doors, pushes Richie aside, and kidnaps Carlos to bring to Lucas.

Carlos is brought before Lucas and Anthony, where he learns what's going on. Anthony watches from the sidelines as Carlos is forced to submit — albeit eagerly — to Lucas' bodyguards, mega-hung Chad Hunt and bald daddy Erik Martins. Chad and Erik strip Carlos down and Carlos engulfs first Chad, a real pipe-cleaner, and then Erik, who's no slouch in the size department either. All three guys do a lot of spitting, and the blowjobs seem to go on forever. But the action's just getting started.

Carlos is positioned over Erik's cock and takes it for a while, but is anxious for the real prize. Superhung Chad is careful with his insertion, but once accomplished, he shows Carlos no mercy. Then Erik has another turn at Carlos, but Chad has a surprise for Erik and slides into him from behind in one glorious three-way fuck-fest.

This is the end of the rental-version video, but for those who purchase the mail-order version, the action's still not over. The two bodyguards take Carlos to the shower where Chad gives Carlos a thorough golden shower. Then Carlos as an array of ever-larger dildos to take before both Erik and Chad finish him off with gloved hands, each sliding into his victim and giving him a thorough hand-balling.

Whew! Carlos is clearly the star of this video. Not only does he take a good screwing from two incredible-sized cocks in two consecutive scenes, in the mail-order version he then takes the dildos and fists — and this from a guy who used to be known as an exclusive topman! In the end, Carlos is left alone to finish himself off, and Lucas smiles at a job well done.

Vengeance is one of those rare films that combines all the elements very well — fantastic, over-the-top action, great sets and camerawork and a nice but never intrusive background soundtrack.

Virgo (August 23-September 22) You're going to be able to tie up a great many loose ends and clear away a lot of deadwood over the next 10 days. This should guarantee a clearer path, especially where career is concerned. Don't try to hurry along a pet project. It needs to move at a natural and safe pace in order to succeed.

Libra (September 23-October 22) Although next month looks better, you've still got the rest of August to get through. Try not to get too caught up in partying, Libra. A few issues need to be dealt with ASAP. Don't let a parental figure push your buttons so easily. Thursday night looks really incredible for a special romantic rendezvous.

Scorpio (October 23-November 21) You'll likely require 29 hours in each day to get everything taken care of this week, Scorp. But, that's okay, since you tend to thrive on challenging situations. Try not to totally ignore the social scene, though. A close encounter of the best kind is heading your way. Most likely it'll occur on Tuesday night.

Sagittarius (November 22-December 21) When the Sun is in Virgo it usually spurs you on to make new goals — and work those nerves a bit. That restless feeling never really goes away, does it, Sag? Saturday and Sunday look fine for a weekend getaway. Since there's extra cash laying around, how about paying some of those bills early?

Capricorn (December 22-January 19) The week begins in a state of semi-chaos with lightning bolts all around, but ends with a beautiful rainbow type of vibrational pattern. Don't make any demands or borrow money before Tuesday. Diplomacy will bring about far better results than bullying. Change that workout routine a little.

Aquarius (January 19-February 18) Although the general money situation looks fairly strong and your love life seems to be back on track, career aspects aren't in such a terrific state. All indications point toward a change in jobs, but not as soon as you'd like. Hang in there for a while longer and the right door will open for you.

Pisces (February 19-March 20) You seem to be truly inspired by life lately. Maybe it's because you've finally counted all of the blessings and realized that things are going pretty well. However, it's perfectly natural to want more of everything. You're headed in the right direction, Pisces. Saturday brings you a stimulating surprise.

Aries (March 20-April 19) Financial conditions are really beginning to look up for you, Aries, and isn't it about time? Don't succumb to the charms of an extremely sexy but puzzling new acquaintance. You'll likely be on the road for most of Monday, so let off plenty of steam this weekend. Stop trying to hide your true feelings all the time.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Planetary aspects for the week look solid and stable (and a little boring as well). Don't go looking for excitement on Saturday night, Taurus. Let it come to you for a change. Your self-esteem gets a real shot in the arm from a compliment by the boss. Spontaneous plans for Sunday turn out to be a lot of fun.

Gemini (May 21-June 21) Fasten both of those seat belts and get ready for one hell of a roller coaster ride, Gemmy. Not that it's going to be all bad — in fact, some of it looks quite lovely, particularly on Friday night. But it's generally going to be far from smooth. Grab whatever sleep you can. Don't do any driving on Monday evening.

Cancer (June 22-July 22) Thankfully, your rough ride on Sunday will only last for a single day, Cancer. The rest of this week looks to be pretty much business as usual. Treat that significant other to a night on the town this week. (It's been way too long.) Good financial news on Wednesday should put a big smile on that face.

Leo (July 23-August 22) The career lull you're experiencing at this time will only last for a short time, so quit worrying about it, Leo. You're still way ahead of the game. Resist the urge to fly off the handle on Thursday. Somebody new and very special seems to have captured your attention. Isn't it time to do something about it?
