Cowboys cheerleaders— no lesbians here

chat

One of the high points of the otherwise dreary Dr. T and the Women — besides its delicious send-up of high-haired, high-society Dallas, complete with Farrah Fawcett losing her marbles and frolicking nude in a fountain at NorthPark mall — is the funk the good doctor (Richard Gere) goes into upon learning that his very own Dallas debutante daughter has lesbian leanings. Not A Good Thing among the Dallas gentry.

But according to Kate Hudson, left, the actress who plays the gynecologist's wayward offspring, the real story goes a little deeper than that. Hudson plays a sexually adventurous cheerleader who's on the way to the high-society altar with maid of honor and bedmate Liv Tyler in tow.

Hudson was originally to have worn a Dallas Cowboy Cheerleader uniform in the film. But the rah-rah ladies for America's Team pitched a fit when they discovered Hudson was portraying a lesbian. Suddenly, an icy chill swept down from Valley Ranch, and the Cowboys Cheerleaders snatched back permission for producers to use their name or display their products.

Hudson was livid, she says in the interview in the November edition of Out. "It was unbelievable — the first time I was ever so offended. I was getting fitted for my costume and explaining to them who my character was. I said, 'My maid of honor is not just my maid of honor but my lover.' When they found out, they wouldn't let me wear it!"

Hudson says it's time for the cheerleaders to enter the new millennium and realize that some of their own through the years just might have munched a little carpet on the side. "I was so shocked, I couldn't believe it," our Kate recalls.

Proving their full citizenship in the Lesbian Nation? Now that Melissa Etheridge and Julie Cypher, above, have split, they can't seem to get enough of each other. Just nine days after announcing through Etheridge's publicity machine that the two were no longer a couple, Etheridge-Cypher showed up hand-in-hand at a tribute to singer David Crosby — the sperm donor-father of the women's 3-year-old daughter, Bailey, and 2-year-old son, Beckett. Etheridge was quick to explain that the hand-holding was not a sign of reconciliation but happened because Cypher was nervous.

Still, it caused consternation among the other stars gathered for a concert honoring the work of Crosby and wife Jan on behalf of the Dream Foundation. "Priscilla [Presley] waved me over and whispered, 'Are you two together?'" Etheridge said.

The tongues were wagging again a little more than a week after that, when Etheridge and Cypher showed up at a fab house party thrown by Kirstie Alley. The lesbian rocker helped entertain the 300 assembled when she belted out "Muskrat Love" with Dan Finnerty and his Dan Band. According to Etheridge, she and Cypher are living in side-by-side houses that share a common yard. It's working out well for the kiddies, she added.

By the way, one extremely-out-of-touch London tabloid recently conceived the all-time dumbest reason for the high-profile lesbian breakups stateside: According to the Fleet Street tab, Etheridge and Ellen DeGeneres are an item. What a laugh. Reminds us of a lot of gay male couples we know, where both men are bottoms and they can't figure out why it isn't working.

Children has a strong record in portraying gay characters. But Children will go a step farther this season, when Bianca (Eden Riegel), who plays the daughter of madwoman diva Erika Kane (Susan Lucci) comes out. Since Erika has spent the better part of her life pursuing penises (can't fault her for that), she'll be in quite a funk when she discovers that her own flesh and blood has taken another road.

Too little, too late. That's the response of activist organizations to dear Dr. Laura Schlessinger's apology to gay people, which the sharp-tongued advice maven offered on Yom Kippur. The Jewish holy day is a time for repentance and atonement, and Dr. Laura, who's an Orthodox Jew, thought it would be the perfect time to make amends — or firm up those sagging ratings, or whatever.

It's hard not to notice, of course, that Dr. Laura's apology came only after a quadrillion advertisers pulled back from her show, it got cancelled on Canadian TV — and since its debut in September, reviewers from coast to coast have blasted the hour-long syndicated program as one of the new season's smelliest.

'Course, Dr. Laura has a lot to atone for. She regularly savages working mothers (last we checked, she was one). She doesn't approve of mixed marriages (like the one she's in, with an Episcopalian husband). She detests the low moral values of most people (like the ones she displayed when she was photographed nude from the waist up — pictures which, by the way, can be viewed by anyone with an Internet connection and a search engine at their disposal).

After viewing aforementioned pix, we can toss one compliment her way — nice tits, Doc!

Former homosexual John Paulk shows his best side as he flees after being discovered Sept. 18 in a Washington, D.C. gay bar.

Another favorite right-winger of ours hit the airwaves last week. John Paulk, who with wife Anne have become the poster children of the ex-gay movement, went on Focus on the Family's radio program to explain that it really wasn't a hot dick he was after when he was caught living it up in a Washington gay bar a few weeks ago.

But we're not sure what it is that he was seeking in that trip to Mr. P's. First John said he just needed to pee. But then he admitted that was all a big lie, and that he was really after the easy camaraderie found in places like that. (Easy camaraderie? In a cruise bar?)

John finally got to the nuts and bolts of the case — the devil made him do it. And now the Holy Spirit is pounding on him. (Sounds like he was hoping for something a little more solid than a spirit to pound on him, but we digress.)

But the real sad sack in this whole sordid affair is John's faithful wife, the former lesbian. When her panicked husband called from D.C. to tell her what was going down, her response was, "Come on home, honey, and I'll take care of everything." Wonder if she had a pair of scissors in her hand when she said that!

Anyway, Focus on the Family's lovely leader, Dr. James Dobson, says the group is standing by their (gay) man. Only he won't be allowed to travel by himself anymore. Even to the bathroom.

You pee, girl.

Quick bits: Singer Mariah Carey may be inked to star as lesbian icon Wonder Woman in the upcoming film, although Sandra Bullock is also in the running. It would be Carey's second major film role. Her first, in All That Glitters, the story of a troubled young singer who overcomes her past to ascend to stardom, will wrap soon . . . Bisexual actor Andy Dick and gay icon Elvira team up for another one of those button-pushing anti-meat ads by People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals. In the ad, Dick visually portrays the horrors of dead meat as the vampiress helps him bed down in a coffin in one of Hollywood's Gothic funeral parlors . . . Latin heartthrob Ricky Martin has decided his ass is too flat and he's turned to professional help. Trainers reportedly have him doing everything from rock climbing to special exercises to fill out that famous dereierre . . . Thrilling the glitter set at a recent Hollywood house party: former Pointer Sister June Pointer, who belted out "Jump" and "I'm So Excited" to 300 or so assembled guests. Ah, the days.

Quotables

"Mary's cunt of a mother (I'm sorry, was that indelicately put?), noted archconservative Lynne Cheney, went postal on ABC News' Cokie Roberts when ol' Coke raised the subject of Mary's lesbianism, which scared the mainstream media off the story. . . . The mainstream media continue to give Bush-Cheney a pass they wouldn't if it were any other issue."

— Author and sex columnist Dan Savage, in Out

"As long as there are no families around and as long as you're not outraging anyone, I've always liked the danger element of doing it in public. There's nothing better than getting fucked under the stars. Or under the sun."

— Jimmy Somerville, to Instinct

"It was really funny and uncomfortable to have Richard Gere looking between your legs all day long . . . because he really didn't know what he was doing."

— Liv Tyler on her Dr. T and the Women co-star

"I've never attempted to figure that out, but if you want me to take a wild guess, I'll say 5,000."

— Charlie Sheen on the number of people he's had sex with

"I was pretty innocent and confused. I was like Marie Osmond, only with bigger eyelashes."

— Boy George on the early '80s

"No more of those grungy-ass clothes. I'm going to get two new pairs of jeans, a pair of Dockers and some phat T-shirts."

— Big Brother's Eddie on how he'll spend some of his winnings

"When I was a kid I was picked on as early as second grade — you know, called a fag because I did theater instead of playing soccer. It's like I always had a connection. I always understood more than the average straight guy."

— Eric McCormack, who plays Will on Will & Grace, to US Weekly

"Marty Ritt [the director of Norma Rae] always used to say that being a movie star has a lot to do with your fuckability quotient. I think it is just a fact of life in the business."

— Sally Field, to US Weekly

"I don't generally use profanity just for the sake of it. If I do it, I'm generally being sardonic, or it's the legitimate or only way to express an angry thought. If every other word is 'fuck,' then what's the barometer of fuckness?"

— Marilyn Manson, to Talk

"It looked like the lobby of the Enchanted Tiki Room at Disneyland. And here was some guy pulling names out of a coconut or something, and I said, 'This is the thing that has made the American mass media stop in their tracks? This cheese fest?'"

— Tom Hanks on the Survivor phenomenon, to Talk

"Paramount, or any other syndicated operation, will put on whatever they think will sell . . . So if there are people, and I'm sure there are, who find Dr. Laura Schlessinger's show vile — and as it's described, I think it is — they should turn her off. If enough people turn her off, she'll be gone."

— Former New York Mayor Ed Koch, to Detour

"You know, I'm 75 years old, so my response to that was, anybody who's interested in my sexual orientation at 75, that's a great compliment to me."

— Koch, on Andrew Sullivan's insistence that the former mayor and other unmarried political figures declare whether or not they're gay

DATELINE AUSTIN. Promoters of Grand Masquerade, a weekend-long circuit event in Austin getting underway Friday, Oct. 20 and running through Sunday night, say the party is on — despite inaccurate information given out by one of the event's minor investors. The investor told a representative of Qtexas that organizers were unable to confirm appearances by the two main DJs and by headliner Martha Wash. But Andy of Red Mars Productions assures us that's not the case. At the main event on Saturday night at the Austin Music Hall, dance music diva extraordinaire Martha Wash is scheduled to perform a one-hour set. DJ Chris Cox (Thunderpuss 2000) will open the party prior to Martha's appearance. Then after Wash's set, DJ Abel (Salvation, South Beach) will take over, presiding for the remaining 3-4 hours. The weekend includes a Friday welcoming party, Mystique, at Oilcan Harry's, with resident DJ Bang and DJ Sylvain Girard, fresh off the Black and Blue Party in Montreal. Then there's a Gospel Brunch on Sunday, 11 a.m. at the Caucus Club, with Girard sharing the spinning duties with Austin DJs Filthy Rich and Chris Specht, and a Closing Party and Benefit on Sunday night beginning at 9 p.m. at Boyz Cellar. The benefit features the Austin Baptist Women, and 10 percent of the proceeds go to Lesbian Gay Rights Lobby of Texas, HIV Wellness and Project Transition.

Also hopping in Austin this weekend: The Bunny Hop — Lady Bunny, that is, the outrageous New York City drag queen fresh from her duties presiding over the Big Apple's fabulous Wigstock outdoor drag festival. Lady Bunny hosts the Mr. Forum and King of the Damned contests on Saturday, Oct. 21 at The Forum.

DATELINE DALLAS: Owners of the town's big gay dance halls are breathing a sigh of relief. It appears that there's a reprieve in the controversy that threatened to end late-night dance afterhours. Representatives of the Dallas Police Department were initially scheduled to attend a City Council briefing on Wednesday, Oct. 18 to recommend that dancing after 2 a.m. be forbidden. But the issue has been delayed, report City Council members Veletta Forsythe Lill and John Loza, in whose districts most of the gay and gay-popular dance halls are located.

DATELINE HALLOWEEN: Austin has Splash. In San Antonio it's Fiesta. But in Gay Dallas, there's nothing like the Halloween Street Party that fills the gay district with costumed revelers for a night of nothing-else-like-it partying. It all started several years ago as an impromptu event, with no planning, no organizing. It just happened. But over the years, the event's gotten so large that everyone from nightclubs to City Hall gets in on the act. The streets are blockaded and Cedar Springs Road becomes a parade of costumed fashion. This year's event is planned for Saturday, Oct. 28. Don't miss it.

Fashion forward

Fashion writer and critic Lloyd Boston was on hand last Friday at the American Airlines Center in Fort Worth to preview the latest in business and business casual attire from Tommy Hilfiger. According to Lloyd, black is back in a big way (if, indeed, it ever left). All-black is the trendy business casual look this season — and it doesn't hurt to throw in a touch of something shiny, like leather.

Industrial-strength music videos from Ministry

beat

by jimmy smith

Native Texan
Jimmy Smith writes about club music
news and trends.
He may be reached by e-mail at
qbeatstx@aol.com

Texas has always been a great market for industrial music. There were industrial records that were big in Texas, often long before they were big in other parts of the nation.

If I were to name the quintessential industrial band, I would have to say that Ministry would certainly be at the top. That said, I'm sure that you'll want to grab either the VHS or the DVD entitled Tapes of Wrath, a 13-song retrospective compilation of video hits from the group.

Tapes of Wrath features ten Ministry videos, from 1985's "Over The Shoulder" through 1999's "Bad Blood" (from their latest album, Dark Side of the Spoon), as well as the live "The Land Of Rape and Honey" and two videos from Ministry's less serious alter ego, the Revolting Cocks. For fans of industrial music, the genre that Ministry spawned, Tapes of Wrath is a visual feast of intense, sinister, hardcore rock.

Another record way off the dance music path that I've been totally into for a few weeks now is the new Barenaked Ladies album, Maroon. The album was produced by Don Was, who has also worked with artists like The Rolling Stones, B-52's, Bonnie Raitt, Iggy Pop and Paul Westerberg.

The band enters the 21st century in a decidedly more introspective mood. But they deliver something quite hummable that you can dance to as well. It's deeper and darker than you in the London dance scene and composer of the international hit "Unbelievable") and remixer Lucas Barton (aka Mount Rushmore), with whom she began writing original material. The three, along with keyboardist and programmer Sacha Skarbek, formed a songwriting and performing partnership that would eventually earn them the support of such luminaries as Boy George and Elton John, both early champions of Amanda's musical cause.

"It seems like one minute I was sitting in my bedroom writing these songs on a guitar," Amanda confesses, "and the next I'm in New York or L.A. performing them onstage and trying to make them feel how I felt when I wrote the song. That's the biggest buzz in the world."

This album, Ghost Stories, starts off with a dance beat and progresses to a full orchestral vibe. Coming from London, Amanda was initially drawn to the dance scene. Noticing that it was being technologically driven, but that there were no real songs being written, she decided to incorporate the two. And if you listen closely, you will even hear elements of jazz and country. What an impressive first offering! Mmm — gottaluvit!

And that's the beats, this week.

Kasten answers questions from readers

fitness

by michael kasten

Michael Kasten is a personal trainer and fitness writer based in Fort Lauderdale. Michael's column appears weekly in QTexas. He also writes monthly columns for Exercise for Men Only and Men's Exercise. He may be reached by e-mail at mkworkout@aol.com

Editor's Note: Fitness writer Michael Kasten continues to dip into his mailbag this week, with questions from readers about nutrition, steroids and getting started on a fitness schedule. If you have questions for Michael, you may contact him by e-mail at the address listed at the bottom of this page.

From Skip: I have been working out now for 6 weeks with a trainer and all is going well. I have lost 18 pounds since I started and 5% body fat. My trainer tells me that I can only expect to add about 1-2 pounds of lean body mass per year, which I am having a hard time believing. Do you know anything about that?

You can expect to gain about 10 pounds of lean body mass over the course of a year only if you eat the right amount of foods at the right time. You will probably need much more protein than you think. For example, an athlete (that's you) who weighs 180 pounds with 11% body fat, needs to consume 153 grams of protein per day. That's a tremendous amount and can only be done by supplementing. Whey protein shakes or bars are good choices. Unfortunately, your trainer appears to have little nutrition knowledge. At the health foods store, you can find information about proper protein intake for the athlete. A good pamphlet to pick up is "The Right Protein For Muscle Growth," by Dr. Michael Cogan.

From Jack: I have been taking Winstrol for over a year with good results (Winstrol, for those of you not in the know about anabolics, is a steroid not available legally here in the U.S.). I have not gotten huge, but have maintained muscle. Since I am HIV+ I want to keep what I have and not waste away. Any suggestions?

Jack, first, Winstrol is kind of a shitty anabolic. It has the lowest androgenic effects, meaning it is the least powerful at building muscle. Actually, bodybuilders use it as a "cutting up" steroid, not a body building one. It's primarily used for fat metabolism. The best combination (I am told) is testosterone and deca durabolin. If you'd like I can email you a 5-part series I did on anabolic steroids. Also, you could check out the website www.medibolics.com.

By the way, does your doctor know about your steroid use? If not, fill him in. It's important for anyone using steroids to be followed by a physician. Are your testosterone levels normal? It is unknown why so many HIV+ individuals have a lower-than-normal amount of testosterone circulating in their blood, but they do. Make sure you get tested at the doc's office and have him fractionate the test. Make sure he measures free and total testosterone. Then you'll know what's up before you start doing the hormone replacement therapy.

From Glenn: Am I just freaking out or do I have a real concern here? I eat nothing during the day, maybe a Slim Fast for lunch and then a large dinner. I'm Italian, so I live on pasta. Dinner is usually late and I find that I like carbs. I thought maybe you could help me out and suggest some foods to eat that are low in fat. How fucked-up is my diet?

It seems that you are consumed by consuming too many carbohydrates at the worst times of the day. Oh and yes, your diet is very fucked! You're kind of on a reverse Atkins thing. Hold your horses and stop eating that crap! Your day should start with a good healthy well-rounded breakfast. Egg whites, toast, juice, potatoes, even cereals with the egg whites are a good idea. Breakfast is the biggest meal you should eat during the day. Lunch can be smaller than breakfast, like salads with chicken, fish or meat. Even a sandwich is okay (without the cheese). Dinner, on the other hand, should be the smallest meal of the day. That's going to take some getting used to because you've been slamming yourself at night. Sorry, no pasta! Make your dinner meal protein and veggies, with no carbohydrates. Eat as early as possible, and then consume nothing — or, if you just can't make it until bedtime, consume something with no calories. Try this out, I'll bet it will work for you. You'll be able to gain lean muscle mass and keep the fat off.

From Chip: "I just can't get started on a fitness schedule. I get so off track when I try to start something. Can you tell me how to get with a program and stick with it? I'm stuck being stuck!"

Here you go Chip, my 10 best ways to get unstuck.

1. Do something that is possible and convenient in your lifestyle. If you're in the office every day for 10 hours, try finding a gym close to the office, or one that is on the way h o m e .

Traveling is a bitch. It's easily used as an excuse not to work out. If you work at home, then maybe a home aerobics program and some dumbbells would be a good idea. Whatever the case, make sure the particular program fits your lifestyle. Make it work for you.

2. Fit your program into your everyday schedule. Make it a set part of each weekly routine. If you give yourself a time to exercise, then other things won't crowd around it.

3. When planning a routine, make sure it has lots of variety. Running the same path around the same park, or riding the same bike at the gym, can become monotonous. Break that monotony and keep it interesting. If it is, you will look forward to working out every day!

4. A friend or workout partner is also a good idea. There is something to be said for making the work out time a social one. It can get you to keep going.

5. Learn about fitness. Hire a trainer (duh). Know what you're doing and how. This can only make your exercises more effective. You'll see results faster and you'll keep coming back for more.

6. It's important to set attainable goals. Give yourself something to achieve that won't be out of your grasp. Unrealistic goals inevitably lead to disappointments.

7. Keep a chart of your activities. This way you'll notice small improvements week to week. This is a great way to track your progress.

8. Reward your success. If you make an exercise goal, buy yourself (or have your boyfriend buy) something special. Having something to look forward to, like a brand spanking new Mercedes Benz 500, is a good thing!

9. Don't skimp. Do it right. You'll only be shortchanging yourself, no one else. An uncomfortable or painful exercise is a great disincentive to working out. Make it fun!

10. Don't try to do too much too quickly. There's a reason you joined a gym, which was to get into shape. Don't feel embarrassed. We all start somewhere. Every one of us had one thing, or many things, we didn't like about ourselves that we wanted to change. So remember, you are not alone. There are more people behind you that haven't made a commitment for good health, but you have. Just go for it!

My best wishes to everyone in their quest for the best for themselves.

Gay as hell

Brendan Fraser takes his luscious body on a wild ride with the Devil

film

by steven lindsey

Steven Lindsey, based in Dallas, writes about film and theater. He may be reached by e-mail at Qtexasman@aol.com

Every year as Halloween approaches, the country's megaplexes plunge deep into to the dark side, or so it appears. From The Exorcist and Lost Souls to the soon-to-be-released Blair Witch 2 (which is easily one of the five worst movies of all time), the Devil is the biggest box office draw these days. But never has the Dark One been sexier or sought a more delectable soul than in Bedazzled, a sinful little comedy that may just make you believe. In what, I don't know. It just sounded good.

By now, you've certainly seen one of the quadrillions of trailers they've been attacking us with for the last few months, but just in case, here's the lowdown. Much like the 1967 Dudley Moore original, the modern Bedazzled centers on a socially retarded loser named Elliot (Brendan Fraser) who makes a pact with the Devil (Elizabeth Hurley) in exchange for seven wishes. His ultimate goal is to be with Alison (Frances O'Connor), a beautiful co-worker and the woman of his dreams. The underlying moral soon becomes so obvious that it might as well be subtitled at the bottom of the screen: Be careful what you wish for.

As a result of his seven wishes, Elliot takes on new personas, different bodies and even a new sexual orientation. Some of the transformations are riotous and others are just plain duds. The filmmakers deliver the biggest laughs early on only to have them fizzle away toward the end. That's not to say that it isn't enjoyable enough from time to time to warrant a matinee visit.

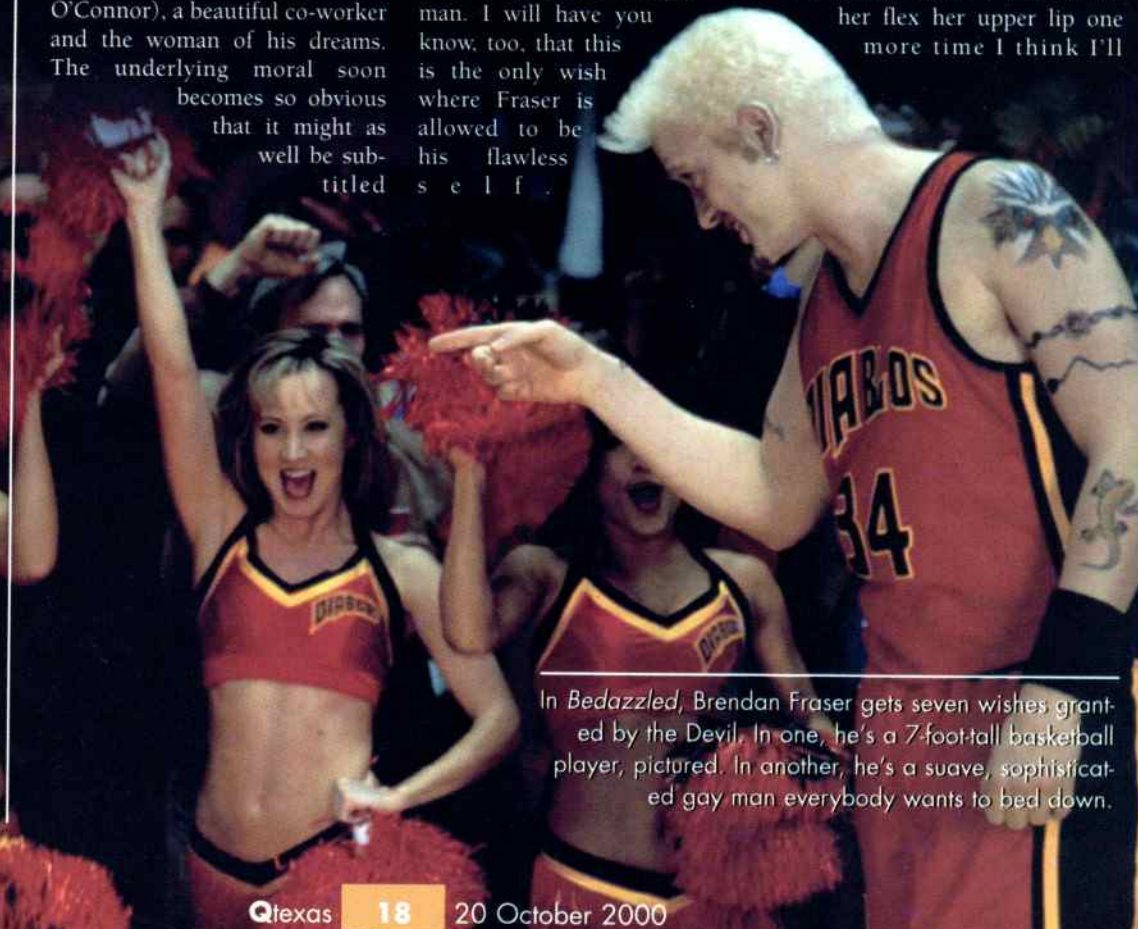

Elliot's embodiment of a Columbian drug lord is hilarious on many levels, but the biggest laughs come from a subsequent wish fulfillment making him a "sensitive guy." In this scene Fraser is so anti-hunky it's scary. I won't give away the details, but let's just say red is not his color.

The strangest scene, however, is one where not only does Elliot's wish come true, but also a personal fantasy of mine. Yes, the darling George of my jungle is a tall, sleek, sophisticated gay man. I will have you know, too, that this is the only wish where Fraser is allowed to be his flawless self.

Everybody loves him. Everybody wants him. And everybody wants to do him. It's nice that Hollywood is finally brave enough to portray the tortured existence that gay men face everyday. Wit, education and impeccable fashion sense can be quite a burden, as you well know.

As for skin, I'm afraid you'll have to rent Gods and Monsters or School Ties because, sadly, there's nary a derriere in this one. Although, when he becomes the seven-foot-tall basketball player, he's barely hidden by a tiny towel. So put your imagination into overdrive and try to look past the hideous blond 'do he sports.

Another good thing about Bedazzled is the limitless supply of costume ideas it provides to anyone needing last-minute drag ideas for Halloween. Hurley truly has one of the most amazing bodies ever, and for a gay man like me to notice, it's got to be good. She does a great job as the Grand Seductress, but if I have to see her flex her upper lip one more time I think I'll

In Bedazzled, Brendan Fraser gets seven wishes granted by the Devil. In one, he's a 7-foot-tall basketball player, pictured. In another, he's a suave, sophisticated gay man everybody wants to bed down.

All in all, this film has the makings of a classic comedy, but it can't keep up the frantic pace of the first 45 minutes, so the bit grows tiresome and lame by the final wishes. To make matters worse, it wraps up with a sappy morality speech from the Devil herself as if she were sitting in a library making an after-school-special public service announcement.

But push that cheese aside and you've still got nearly ninety minutes of closeups of Fraser's beautiful face, dreamy lips, sultry eyes and . . . excuse me while I log on to eBay. I'm ready to sell my soul for just one wish.

Bedazzled

Grade: B

Opens today in theaters everywhere

Studio: Twentieth

Director: Harold Ramis

Starring: Brendan Fraser,

Elizabeth Hurley, Frances

O'Connor, Gabriel

Casseus, Orlando Jones,

Rudolf Martin

Rating: PG-13

Running Time:

93 minutes

Now Playing

The following gay-interest films are now in theaters around the state:

Urbania

This daring film that weaves urban legends into its plot rises above a few flaws, emerging as a surprisingly powerful experience. It is by far one of the darkest — visually and contextually — gay films to surface in years. No show tunes. No men in heels. And not a single Streisand reference. Stereotypes are shattering now.

Grade: B+

Starring: Dan Futterman and Alan Cumming

Rated: R

Now Playing in Austin, Dallas and Houston

Dr. T and the Women

Lots of over-the-top rich women, a lesbian subplot, a Dallas locale, and the man whom many consider the poster child for closeted Hollywood hunks, Richard Gere. But just because you have all the ingredients doesn't mean you're going to get a delicious cake. In fact, to carry the food analogy further, Dr. T is the film equivalent of a Chinese buffet. Lots of variety and a $7 price tag, but you'll still end up with an empty feeling an hour later.

Grade: C-

Starring: Richard Gere, Helen Hunt, Farrah Fawcett

Rated: R

Now Playing Everywhere

Best in Show

Christopher Guest, the genius behind Waiting for Guffman, brings the world of obsessive pet owners to the forefront in this latest mockumentary. There are bitches aplenty in the cut-throat world of dog shows and it couldn't make for funnier content. The canines are the true stars, but there are also plenty of hilarious HOMO-sapiens to inject further hilarity. There's Michael McKean and John Michael Higgins as a gay couple with an unhealthy attachment to their dogs, plus a lesbian dog trainer and her unhealthy attachment to her student's owner. One of the best films of the year.

Grade: A

Starring: Eugene Levy, Catherine O'Hara, Parker Posey, Fred Willard

A Greek adventure

Out of Athens, Parts 1&2, pulls out all the stops

splat

by matt brady

Falcon Studios has delivered another two-part foreign adventure on a scale that's got to be seen to be believed. On the heels of the acclaimed two-part Aussie holiday, Absolute Arid and Absolute Aqua, the studio has followed up, perhaps on even a grander scale, with Out of Athens, Parts 1 and 2, filmed with a cast of thousands in sun-splashed locales on the Aegean Sea.

There are plenty of Adonises in this Greek adventure (and plenty of greek action, too). The story focuses on newcomer Johnny Brosnan (one look will tell you where he gets his stage name — he bears a greater resemblance to a young Pierce Brosnan than pornstar Tommy Cruise bears to old what's-his-name). Joining Johnny are 29 other studs taking in the Mediterranean delights of Out of Athens.

The action begins stateside with Johnny attending a fraternity party, unsure of whether he'll fit in. His fears are confirmed and he leaves. A hazing orgy ensues, with nine young studs getting in on the action. Cameron Fox, Tristan Paris, Billy Kinkaid and Nick Young are the standouts.

Bereft, Johnny sets sail for Greece when he spies sexy Harvard crew alumnus Travis Wade. Johnny works his wiles and beds down Travis in one of the two-part set's most memorable encounters. Johnny and Travis work each other over orally until Travis takes charge, drilling the handsome bottom boy for all he's worth. They collapse into slumber. But in a derivative plot turn, Johnny decides to steal not only Travis' wallet and money, but also his identity.

Johnny meets up with Roland

Dane and the two tour Athens together, visiting the Parthenon and other famous sites. They wind up in a secluded villa where their budding romance gets physical. Johnny has to leave, but promises Roland he'll get back with him later.

Johnny is sunning himself on the beach when studly Dean Phoenix approaches. But Johnny, fresh from his new love, rejects the humpy stud's advances and takes a hike up the rocks lining the beach. He stumbles upon a three-way featuring Jose Ganatti, Thomas Williams and Jeffrey Dickinson. This scene demonstrates something seen over and over again in the two-parter: the wonderful outdoor settings director John Rutherford has located. This one is perhaps the best, with the incredible blue of the Aegean and the tiny cottages on the craggy opposite shore as a backdrop for the heated encounter.

Back in the village, Johnny bumps into Dean Phoenix once again and gets invited back to Dean's summer home. But Johnny again declines, and Dean goes off with Eric Leneau and Franco Corsini for a little playtime.

Part 1 ends as a very upset Travis Wade spots Johnny wandering the sidewalks. Travis chases him through the streets, determined to catch the thief who left him penniless.

Part 2 opens with Johnny arriving at the home of Roland's cousin, George Vidanov. After a short nap, he wanders outside into the brilliant sunlight. Rounding a corner of the villa, he catches George and Joe Calderon leaning against a wall, going at each other. Overtaken with lust but wary of discovery, Johnny whacks off unseen while the two studs continue their encounter.

Later, Johnny's out sightseeing when he sees Colby Taylor. Colby remembers Johnny, who had bumped into him when he was running away from Travis. Colby tells Johnny the story of his hot encounter with Eric Hart, which we see acted out onscreen.

Later, Johnny is exploring the island of Syros, where he comes upon Marc Pierrot and Fernando Lizalde. Ever the voyeur, he follows them into an alley, watching their lust-filled encounter.

Johnny finally arrives at the Harvard Alumni Party, still using Travis Wade's identity. But his fraud is discovered as Travis exposes him to his former mates. To teach him a lesson, the assembled studs force Johnny into a gang-bang. The studs line up and bend over as Johnny is forced to go down the line, kissing and tonguing their hot asses. Then Johnny's thrown on his back and each man takes his turn fucking the wayward boy.

Totally used and exhausted, Johnny is abandoned by the side of the road, where he is rescued by Roland. They make passionate love, and Johnny finally realizes he has found what he's looking for — or has he?

The real star of Out of Athens is, of course, Greece, the home of homosexuality. The videography is superb and, as mentioned earlier, the locations are unbelievable, from the splendors of the seaside rocks to the quaintness of a crumbling village alleyway.

After spending so much on a project like this, it's natural that Falcon would turn to tried-and-true director Rutherford. And he delivers magnificently, although the sexual fare is totally standard. Some of the group scenes are out of the ordinary — and all are beautifully filmed.

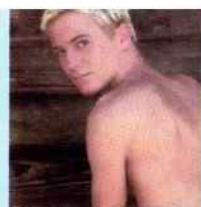

The Gods on Mount Olympus probably got hard-ons watching this one in production.

Stardate

Libra (September 23-October 22) Please resist the urge to take on another part time job, Libra. You can barely handle the hours you have now. Cash flow looks okay and most of the plastic has been paid off. Give yourself a break, okay? Don't try to find a new love interest now, when you're not completely over the old one quite yet.

Scorpio (October 23-November 21) The sun transits to your sign this week, where it has a 30-day run. Being in your own element is always more comfortable, and things in general should go more smoothly. Make sure to stick with that workout routine. You're getting great results. This is a good time to expand your financial power base.

Sagittarius (November 22-December 21) Venus (the planet of love) zipping through your sign until Nov. 12th is likely causing you to do a lot of sampling in the romantic arena. That's no problem, but remember this isn't Howard Johnson's 28 flavors we're talking about. Use some discretion & common sense. Be sure catch up on your sleep.

Capricorn (December 22-January 19) If it seems as though you've been on a treadmill and not much has been happening, it won't be that way much longer. There's a wave of life changes heading your way, Cappy. So, wax up your board & get ready to ride that wave. Someone close by has a secret crush on you. Can you guess who?

Aquarius (January 19-February 18) That recent bug really did a number on you, and it's going to take some more time to get that energy level back in gear. Lay off the partying until this happens, or you could end up flat on your back (and not for fun). That mountain of paperwork needs to be tackled, so roll up your sleeves and just do it!

Pisces (February 19-March 20) The week is going to start out at a turtle's pace but should be up to full speed after a couple of days. Try to stay home Thursday night if possible to avoid the New Moon loonies on the road. Add some calcium-rich foods to your diet and don't use so much salt. That vehicle of yours needs a new paint job.

Aries (March 20-April 19) Your physical energy level is likely to be unpredictable for much of this week, so it's best not push yourself too hard. Be sure not to forget that important "anniversary," Aries, or you'll surely end up in the dog house. You should find a new and better way to advertise your business. How about getting a Web site?

Taurus (April 20-May 20) That New Moon in Scorpio on the 26th is liable to have you super energized and in need of a serious good time. If that's the case, be sure to give the car keys to a friend, so you can party worry free. Isn't it time for you to get a new haircut, dude? You've been in a rut for too long a time frame. Shake it off!

Gemini (May 21-June 21) That recent financial rough spot that threatened to do you in is finally showing signs of ending — and just in time, too. You still need to watch that spending though, because you're not out of the woods yet. Your poor back may require the services of a chiropractor due to stress and an old injury.

Cancer (June 22-July 22) Don't be tempted to sign any financial documents until the 23rd or after. Energies will be much more cooperative by then. If you've been wanting to take some classes this winter, now is the time to sign up. Don't let that problem involving a old landlord just fade away. You must fight this, because you're in the right.

Leo (July 23-August 22) It would be best to give your sweetie a wide berth for the next few days and just concentrate on career matters. Try not to be so thin-skinned where well-intentioned criticism is concerned (you're sure good at giving it). Make sure to confirm travel plans for that getaway next month just to be on the safe side.

Virgo (August 23-September 22) If that real estate investment looks just too good to be true, then it probably is. But have it checked out by a professional just in case. That new business partner should really be an asset to your company and can be completely trusted, Virgo. Quit worrying so much about what people think about you.
