UP FRONT

Greetings, gang!

As we promised, this week there are more TWT's! Beginning today 50% more magazines are being printed to accommodate the growing readership of Texas' oldest gay magazine. Also, this week we introduce our new logo — our new trademark.

This week, not only the eyes of Texas, but of Oklahoma, are focused on the UT/OU game in Dallas, which will include the wildest, biggest, gayest weekend of the year in the Metroplex. It's the game, the Texas State Fair, and the Mr. Texas Pageant Sunday at 4p.m. at the OP-Dallas. The Pageant will benefit the Texas Human Rights Foundation which will use the funds to fight the Texas homosexual conduct statute, (Penal Code section 21.06) in the courts.

Next week another important fundraiser is planned throughout the state.

Former USAF Sgt. Leonard Matlovich, football star Dave Kopay, lesbian/feminist author Del Martin and UFMCC founder the Rev. Elder Troy Perry will tour five major cities Oct. 11-15 to raise funds to fight the Briggs Initiative in California. Prop. 6, if passed, will force schools there to fire all teachers that are gay or that make any non-negative comments about homosexuality.

The tour will visit San Antonio the 11th, Austin the 12th, Dallas and Lubbock the 13th and Houston the 14-15th. Dinners, socials and press conferences are planned for each city. For further information contact the Dallas GPC (214) 528 - 4233, Houston GPC (713) 526 - 2668, or the TGTF (512) 655 - 3724.

Here's number 184.
Dig in and enjoy!

COMMENT

LESBIANS & GAY MEN UNITE?

Dear TWT:

During the formation of Town Meeting I, 90 men of the GPC attended a lesbian group meeting as a hand extended out for communication and goodwill. The communication was beautiful, the majority feeling very positive. Subsequently, the women were invited to attend the next GPC meeting as a group. Only two women showed up. From my observations I feel that the men are much more willing to extend themselves and that the women need to take a second look at that wall.

The opportunity in the GPC for women is there — it's what we make of that opportunity. The GPC will be what we offer it.

It's important, first, to make the decision to get involved, and then make an effort to communicate with the gay men, their hand already having been extended. The GPC is made up of many beautiful people and personalities — people who are willing to work and sweat for what they believe in. Are you women willing to do the same?

We shall all overcome (with united efforts) — gay men for being gay, gay black or brown men for being gay and black or brown, gay white women for being gay and women, gay black or brown women for being gay and black or brown. What's it like to be gay and physically handicapped and a woman and black or brown?

We all have a common unity — discrimination for what we are. It's tough to be who we are. After all, we are uniting to be who we are for victory to love who we love — ourselves and others.

Carol Melton
Houston

Dear TWT:

In a recent issue of your magazine, (Volume 4, Number 26) there is an article of great interest concerning "unity" between the men and women of our gay community.

The article, written by Bill Lake, is the most positive editorial statement I have ever read concerning the gay movement.

The idea of a transformation from a "gay rights movement" into a "sexual rights movement" involving not only gay men but also involving more gay women is so simple and easy that I personally feel embarrassed not to have been more involved in the situations and problems we have with our struggle for equal rights.

I sincerely hope that Mr. Lake's article has touched a great many of your readers in the same way that it touched me. If not, maybe someday in the very near future, something will come about which will make everyone realize that togetherness or "unity" is really the only thing that is going to get us through our long hard climb for equality.

My appreciation and deepest thanks go out to Mr. Lake for opening my mind, as well as my heart, to realize the importance and real meaning of the word "unity."

Thank you.

James R. Cates

ENTERTAINMENT

TELEVISION

Last Sunday I was sitting in my living room with the eight-year-old daughter of a friend. The spaceship Galactica was launching shuttles piloted by willing, but inexperienced female pilots, willing to sacrifice even their lives for the good of their ship, the last repository of human life. While the "pilotteses" were learning how to operate their guidance systems, the mother ship was plummeting through magnetic fields and dodging the destructive laser rays of an evil humanoid bent on the destruction of this final oasis of humanity.

As a commercial flashed upon the screen, my young friend turned to me and asked, "Do we have to watch any more of this? It's really silly."

ABC's latest comic book feature is an attempt to cash in on the popularity of Star Wars and rekindles the enthusiasm which tv fans had for "Star Trek." However, "Battlestar Galactica" will be lucky to outlive "My Mother The Car."

The dialogue is as flat as West Texas and the suspense generated by Lorne Green scowling at his underlings is about as engrossing as reruns of "F-Troop." Now, you may say that I want a serious statement about travel in outer space. Not so. I just like to be entertained. Nothing is quite so boring as actors making tongue in cheek comments about how cute and cleverly they are performing.

Hopefully, Battlestar Galactica will be destroyed by that ruthless force, the Neilson ratings, and disappear forever into that great time warp in the sky.

In contrast to the "human cartoons" which are being foisted upon us by ABC, CBS may just pull a winner out of its bag of old tricks. It has just bought the option to a full-length Warner Brothers' film entitled "The Great Bugs Bunny-Roadrunner Chase." The film will be a "That's Entertainment" of the old Warner Brothers' greatest animations, and will probably air sometime this spring.

If television can't be enlightening, it can at least be entertaining. BEEP! BEEP!

MOVIES

The latest in an ever-growing series of disaster movies has just been released. "Avalanche," starring Rock Hudson and Mia Farrow, is the story of a man who tries to buck that age-old dictum, "Don't ---with Mother Nature." Hudson, who plays this silly person, decides to build a ski lodge under a ledge of snow. He cuts down all of the trees and presto — an avalanche. Mia Farrow portrays his ex-wife who turns up for the opening of the lodge and goes to bed with a naturalist, Robert Forster, who has warned Hudson not to build his lodge under that snow bank. Naturally, Hudson does not listen to him. Olympic ski champion Rick Moses hops from bed to bed breaking the hearts of the snow bunnies and skis some. A few people are killed and a few are saved. Hudson, Farrow and Moses fall into the latter category.

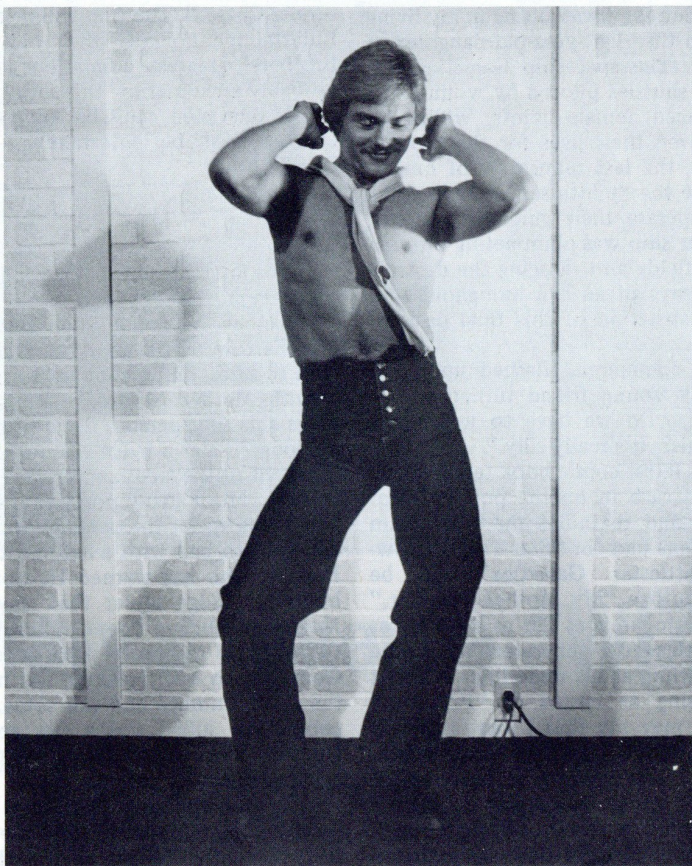

If your appetite for natural and unnatural calamities has not yet been satisfied, this movie might be just the thing you're looking for.

If you thought "Heaven Can Wait" was a great film, you're not alone. The film has grossed over $ 50,000,000 in its first 61 days of release. This movie, coupled with Paramount's other two smashes, "Grease" and "Saturday Night Fever," has grossed the studio over $ 150,000,000 this year.

AN ADVENTURE IN TIME

LIFE WITH VERA

Sporting the sluggish energy and the polyester sheen usually restricted to inhabitants of used car lots, Mr. Cole bounded into the Waiting room to greet Vera. Brandishing a flashing smile that appeared to have been concocted at U-Frame-It, Cole extended his hand toward our Lady in Waiting through the giant billows of smoke cascading upward from his cigar.

"Welcome to Sphincter! The Studio that runs rings around the others!"

"Well, honey," Vera gushed, extending his hand daintily through a smoke ring to clasp Cole's, "I am just pleased as punch to be here!"

"I have complete faith that we are entering today into a monumental partnership," Cole bragged. "A Studio and a Star! I have no doubt, no doubt whatsoever — Sphincter can make an opening for you!"

"Hallelujah!" Vera squealed. "Keep those sweet sounds comin'! Gives me so many goosebumps I'll have to go home for a heavier wrap!"

"I must admit, however," Cole said, becoming more somber, more stern, more business-like, "I cannot say that the fact that you are an hour late has gone unnoticed."

Realizing that Cole was getting down to business, Vera realized he had better get down to business, too. The business of charming the socks off this sucker. Vera had philosophically adjusted to the fact that the South, as a whole, would never rise again. This, however, did not preclude the permissibility of an occasional popping-up of Scarlett now and then. O'Hara to the rescue!

"Oh, sugah," Vera syruped, "I assuah you that Ah did make eveah possible effort to be heah on time. Ah did, sugah, Ah did. But the silliest li'l ole thang happened on the way, Ah...eh... Ah... Ah... well, it's not even worth mentionin'. But, Lordy, Ah am pleased... pleased as punch to be here!"

"Well, I don't see how a person can 'be pleased as punch' and be an hour late!" Cole huffed.

"You've never tried HER punch!" Phoebe blurted, making a rather dramatic debut into the conversation. A debut not especially appreciated by the resident Lady in Waiting.

"Why, my, my, aren't you the clever one!" Vera screeched, feigning a cackle and tossing back his head in a manner reminiscent of Rita Hayworth seeking sun. "You clever, clever boy!" Vera continued, slapping Phoebe on the knee in jest while simultaneously burying an entire right-hand set of plastic Nutra-Nails in Phoebe's thigh.

Unaccustomed to excruciating pain, Phoebe began a self-induced hurl around the room, weeping and wailing and all that. "Eeeeeeehhhhhhhhh," he weeped and wailed.

"What's wrong with him?" Cole fearfully asked.

"Don't pay any attention to him, hon," Vera explained. "Poor child just can't seem to take a compliment gracefully. Which was really quite a surprise for his family. You see, they had sent him to all the finer schools, but, . . . nothing . . ."

"Is all this really necessary?" Cole sternly interrupted.

"That's exactly what his parents began to ask," Vera contined. "On one hand they couldn't tolerate a child that broke out in banshees every time someone had a kind word for him. But, on the other hand, the tuition at all the finer finishing schools was sky high. Sky high! Depending, of course, on exactly what sort of finish you have in mind. I once knew a woman who . . ."

"Can we cut out the small talk!" Cole yelled.

"Whateveah you say," Vera noted, curtsying, then sitting, then thinking aloud. "'Course, for the life of me, I never understood why people are so hell bent on cutting the small talk. It's already little. You can cut big talk down to the size of small talk — and still come

TEXAS TELETYPE: Jugs and TJ's of Dallas will meet in a women's softball game Oct. 29. . . Burgandy Woods' Libra birthday party will be this Sunday afternoon at the Midnite Sun. . . the new Montrose Activity Center at 1423 Holman at LaBranch should be open in early November. . . the Women's October Run Fest starts this Saturday at 9am in Dickinson and ends in Texas City. . . it's the end of the rainbow this Sunday at the Venture-N for the White Light Party. . . a new bookstore will open soon in Austin across from Doby Mall on the strip. . . and Carl Jones is the new worship leader at the new Holy Trinity Church in Austin with Sunday services at 1pm at 408 West 23rd.

MR. TEXAS will be held this Sunday afternoon at 4 pm in Dallas at the OP. Contestants will compete for $1,000 prize money plus trophies. The annual TWT pageant is a DAIR benefit this year for the Texas Human Rights Foundation.

THE FRATERNITY HOUSE in Dallas will be the scene of a gala registration and cocktail party the night before the pageant from 7 to 9 pm at which time you may come by to fill out a registration form, pay your $50 tax deductible entry fee and enter the Mr. TEXAS pageant. The Cruise Camera was at the Fraternity House recently to photograph bartender Mike in front of the fireplace. Mike is 29 and a Libra who collects antiques.

OU/TEXAS WEEKEND: The Longhorns meet the Sooners in the Cotton Bowl this Saturday at 2 pm smack dab in the middle of the Texas State Fair which runs Oct. 6 - 22. Most bars and other clubs are planning post-game parties, hangover parties, beer busts and buffets. A hot time in the metroplex — the biggest weekend of the year!

THE OP-DALLAS is where the Cruise Camera found Debbie (left) and Gene Klump (right). Debbie is the only female bartender (a real Suzie) in a man's disco in Dallas and Gene is the assistant manager. She's a 19-year-old Sagittarian and he's a 25-year-old Virgo. You'll meet them when you go to the OP-D for the Mr. Texas Pageant Sunday, Oct. 8.

SNOOPING AROUND: Charlie of the Midnite Sun is the new Miss Appollo with Donna Day of the OP first runnerup . . . the contest was held in Lafayette. . . A new bar opens this weekend in Fort Worth called The Split Image on East Seminary Drive with 10pm showtime. . . a new Montrose bar will open soon in Houston called The Fancy Dancer. . . The Sundance Kid in Dallas has a hot new reel-to-reel sound system. . . a style show will be brought to Austin by Hair Express at Stars on Oct. 19 with a 5-7pm cocktail hour. . . Josie's birthday party last weekend has left Dirty Sally's as high as all those balloons in the ceiling. . . the trapeze artist at Numbers proves Numbers is a swingin' (pun) place. . . And Oct. 6 marks the tenth anniversary of the founding of the Universal Fellowship of Metropolitan Churches by the Rev. Elder Troy Perry. the MCC now has 120 churches in six countries.

MR. AUSTIN is Eric Blanchette (photo above, middle) who was crowned last Sunday in the annual muscle pageant at Austin Country. Eric is an Aquarius. First runnerup (right) was blonde Ed Renner and second runnerup (left) was hunky Sammy Loehr. Highlight of the competition was when emcee Miss Riki poured water over the underwear competition revealing parts unknown. Congratulations to the winners.

TALENT FINALS at the Midnite Sun are over and Gena Marc is the winner (photo below with show director Jerry Bird). Gena and her four "Wiz" kids danced their way into first place, only points ahead of first runnerup Roberta Carey and second runnerup Sabrina in a closely judged contest. It is from the talent finals that tomorrow's new stars are born. Congratulations from TWT!

out with a matched set. But, you cut the small talk, and you'll be stuck with a big talk and a bunch of mis-matched, itty-bitty talks you couldn't scoop up with a broom or a cocktail party!"

Cole was becoming exhausted in his efforts to follow the conversation, unaware that the following of Vera's conversation was a task whose occasional futility was rivalled only by attempts to double cock size.

"I'm beginning to think," Cole muttered, "that your coming here was a mistake."

"Well, baby, I've got to admit," Vera said, "getting here was no bed of roses. But it seemed the least I could do since you are going to make me a star. Now I know, I could have gotten real snooty and real tacky, right off the bat. But, no, no, not me. I said to myself, 'Vera, don't you go getting the big head just because you're a star. You go on to the studio like a good girl. It wouldn't be polite to insist that they bring the studio to you.' That's what I told myself."

"I've only got one thing to say!" Cole shouted.

"Say all you want, honey. I know from experience how sweet are the sounds of your words!" Vera squealed, slapping his hands together in soul-sister style.

"You're fired!" Cole coldly commented.

"Maybe I haven't had quite as much experience as I thought," Vera noted. "Run that by again, sugah. Somewhere between your lips and my ears, I think a tragedy befell your end of the conversation. What was it you said?"

"I said, 'You're Fired!'"

"Oh my God!" Vera winced. "There it goes again! Must be static on the line. Maybe we'd better go to pads and pencils?"

"You're fired, that's all there is to it." Cole reinforced.

"No, you can't mean it," Vera wept melodramatically. "Tell me it's a joke. A play on words, a holiday on ice, a watch on the Rhine!" ➔

"I'm sorry," Cole softened, "but I just have this gut feeling that things aren't going to work out."

"Please, Mr. Cole, please. Don't throw me out. I've come so far. Ask your gut for a second opinion. Lookin' at it from here, I wouldn't put all that much trust in it. Have mercy! I'll do anything. I've got to be a star. I've waited so long!"

"She's waited longer than you could even begin to imagine." Phoebe noted, moved by the emotion of the moment into making another cameo appearance into the conversation. And, fortunately for Phoebe, he had been sufficiently "moved" to now be beyond the grasp of the Killer Nutras.

"Please, Mr. Cole, please," Vera continued. "You know how much this means to me."

"No, I'm sorry." Cole repeated. "It just wouldn't work out."

"Would you deny a lion her roar?" Vera asked, in a manner that verged on begging.

"I'm sorry," Cole repeated.

"Would you deny a bird her song?" Vera asked, definitely begging.

"I'm sorry," Cole repeated again. "Would you deny a Looney her Tune?" Phoebe asked, getting into the swing of things.

"Ah, cruel fate!" Vera wailed. "How can this be happening to me? I've waited so long. So long."

"So long, so long," Phoebe woefully repeated.

"I've tried so hard, so hard," Vera continued.

"So hard, so hard," Phoebe woefully repeated.

"How can life treat me so?" Vera concluded.

"So-so, so-so," Phoebe followed.

"SHUT-UP!" Vera screamed.

"Please, please, let's get control of ourselves," Cole suggested. "Especially you!" he added, pointing all ten fingers as Vera.

"But you don't know how much this means to me!" Vera wailed. "I've got to be in a film. I've just got to. I'll do anything! Anything!"

"Okay, okay," Cole winced. "I'll see what I can do."

"Bless you, bless you," Vera sighed, falling onto the floor and grasping Cole's calves in his arms.

"And you'll do anything, huh?" Cole asked.

"Yes, yes! Anything!" Vera dramatically performed, as though setting off for a hazardous Bond tour during WW II, the Big One.

"Okay, let me go make some phone calls, I'll be back. Wait here."

"Thank you, thank you," Vera continued gushing, "Thank you, thank you, thank you!"
