HOUSTON'S BIGGEST PORNOGRAPHY RAID

HOUSTON — In what many are calling "the biggest raid on pornography in this city" occurred May 13, when Houston police, vice and special operation officers arrested 48 employees of 55 adult bookstores and video arcades.

In a six and one-half hour time span between 9:30am and 4:00pm, officers worked in teams of four. Most of those arrested were clerks who had sold allegedly obscene material in magazines, films and video cassettes to undercover vice officers during the previous two weeks, Vice Sergeant Bill Brown said.

The manager of one adult bookstore where an arrest occurred told TWT NEWS that the film for which his clerk is charged is not "legally obscene" (Vice Sgt. Brown's words as reported without clarification by the Houston Chronicle). Any magazine, film or video-tape involved in a pornography crackdown must be judged obscene or not obscene on its own merits by a jury who must consider such material in the same way that the audience for which the material was intended would view the material.

TWT NEWS notes also that the vice squad's propaganda about a 98% conviction rate in these cases is also erroneous. Many of these convictions are the result of "plea bargains." Several cases which have gone to jury trials have resulted in acquittals or hung juries. And those cases in which the juries have found the material obscene have been placed on appeal, with these convictions ultimately overturned. And to this day, no bookstore owner or employee has spent more than 48 hours in jail as a result of this harassment of bookstores by HPD's vice department.

"It's an exercise in futility," police told KHOU-TV, adding that all they can do is make the arrests. The State law is not strong enough to close down the bookstores. "All we can do is harass them."

The open admission of harassment on television news comes as no surprise to attorneys who have continually defended employees on the charges of the sale of obscene material. Those arrested were again held in City Jail under routine bonds of $800 on a class A misdemeanor.

No customers were arrested in the massive city-wide raids, TWT NEWS learned. The target has been the employees of the bookstores and theaters.

Under Texas law it is left up to the community standards as to what material is obscene. Vice Lieutenant Jack Collins said, "Such material includes anything that depicts child pornography, deviant animal behavior, oral or anal sex."

Collins acknowledged to the Houston Chronicle that the definition of obscenity is a hazy legal issue which involves a constitutional question of the First Amendment.

DALLAS POLICE MEET AGAIN WITH GAYS

DALLAS — Next Thursday morning at 10:00am, police and gays will meet with Assistant City Manager Levi H. Davis to discuss recent police harassment in Oak Lawn. The May 27 meeting will be held in the Detail Room of the Central Division Headquarters on Canton Street.

"Although the first meeting will be for the purpose of identifying the procedures and scope for further meetings," Davis told TWT NEWS, "I personally plan to attend and look forward to an improved relationship with the gay community."

At an earlier meeting on May 7, several guidelines were hammered out between the police department and the Dallas Gay Alliance (DGA). As a result, Davis had written to DGA president Don Baker of an initial three-point game plan.

"Although there are those within your organization who may doubt the City's commitment to delivering its services equitably," the communique stated, "the Dallas Police Department has taken a number of steps to assure the gays of their rights. On May 6, 1982, our department initiated a meeting with members from the gay community to identify specific problems. This meeting was held in addition to the meeting held by the police chief and the City Manager's office. I also toured [with Councilmember Medrano] a number of the locations [Round-Up, Village Station, Wooden Nickel, JR's and TMC] mentioned by your delegation on Friday evening, May 6, 1982, to familiarize myself firsthand with the issues raised by the Alliance in our Friday meeting.

"Additionally, as agreed upon . . . the Police Department will:

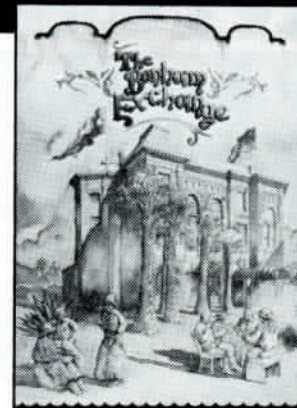

"1) Limit the use of the paddy wagon for transporting public inebriates identified as a result of police actions in gay establishments.

"2) Establish an on-going dialogue with representatives from the Dallas Gay Alliance through feedback sessions with supervisors assigned to Central Patrol who are responsible for law enforcement in the Oak Lawn area. The purpose of the meetings will be to identify and address some of the problems associated with law enforcement within the gay community and to familiarize police department personnel with issues within the gay community.

"3) That the entire department will be informed of the City's commitment to equal law enforcement throughout the community and recognition of the gay community as a segment of the greater Dallas community, which is entitled to equal treatment under the law, through a memorandum from the City Manager's office.

"This office is confident that through the dialogue sessions, many of the concerns mentioned at our recent meeting can be addressed and eventually resolved," Levi concluded. ➤

WILL NON-GAY CLERGY ACCEPT GAY MCC

NASHVILLE — The governing board of the National Council of Churches meeting in the city have placed on the agenda a committee recommendation that the 172 congregations of the Metropolitan churches across America be considered eligible for official membership.

Will non-gay Christians move toward accepting the gay churches? MCC leaders are hopeful but cautious, TWT NEWS observed.

The council is a voluntary association of thirty-two Protestant denominations and has no authority to make policy decision for member churches.

If two-thirds of the 260 board members were to agree that the MCC structure—not theology—meets the council's guidelines, the MCC could then be recommended for full membership, it was explained to TWT NEWS.

"This vote is raising tremendous problems," said a National Council of Churches official. "It could be tabled because of pressure from conservatives."

At the heart of acceptance, in addition to the conservative moral climate of the council, is the interpretation of the Bible. For instance, the Bible says, "Jesus died so that whosoever believes in him will have eternal life."

"The Bible says 'whosoever,' not just heterosexuals," stated Jim Norwood, worship leader of Ft. Worth's Agape MCC.

FORT WORTH CENTER FOR COMMUNITY

FT. WORTH — The Center for the Community is just six weeks old and already is serving the Ft. Worth area through a unique program of education, counseling, entertainment and social opportunities, TWT NEWS has been told.

"We have psychologists, social workers, ministers, medical doctors, lawyers and others who have or will be speaking during our Thursday night seminars," a spokesperson explained. "We have a phone line and are answering calls from persons in distress or needing information and referral."

The Center is a non-profit Christian service organization with a professional staff committed to serving the community. There is no organization in the metroplex which has a similar program, it was emphasized to TWT NEWS.

Some of the services that are now being offered are a telephone counseling and information service, Gayline Fort Worth, individual and group counseling, educational and entertainment and recreational programs.

For further information, contact the Ft. Worth Organizations/Hotline (817) 926-3521, or write to 2412 Lipscomb, Ft. Worth 76110, coordinator Jim Henley said.

TEA FOR 2000 DONATES $6,000

HOUSTON — The official accounting of receipts from the recent High-Tex party sponsored by the Tea for Two Thousand collective totalled $6,226.85, TWT NEWS has been informed in an earnings statement. Of that total amount, $6,000 was donated to the Montrose Counseling Center, "enabling the Center to obtain a $40,000 grant," it was stated.

The name of the group is to be filed with the Secretary of State as TFT, Inc. Dues are $10 annually.

Officers of TFT, Inc., are Warren Wellik, president; Debra Danburg, vice-president; Gene Oliver, secretary; and Joe Taylor, treasurer.

COUNSELING CENTER RECEIVES GRANT

HOUSTON — The Professional and Executive Council (PEC) has approved a grant to the Montrose Counseling Center to provide financial assistance to those who are unable to pay the Center's counseling fees. The funds given by PEC are to be pro-rated to benefit the counseling center's visitors who are in the most need of assistance. The Montrose Counseling Center will determine which gay visitors they feel will receive the most benefit of the monies provided by the PEC grant.

PEC board chair, Bert Hollister, told TWT NEWS, "This is the first of a planned series of grants to be directed to helping our community. PEC feels it is our responsibility and our good fortune to be able to help our fellow man. It has been less than a year since we organized, and we feel we are making very stable progress.

"Our growth has been slow and controlled because we feel it is our purpose to be strong in order to help others to help themselves. We hope all the members of the community will support future fund raising events sponsored by PEC, because it will definitely be supporting the community directly, and 100%," Hollister added.

LESBIANISM LEADS TO MILITARY HEARING

SAN ANTONIO — Once again the military's anti-homosexual dogma is being challenged. Sylvia Pedraza, a Texan, is challenging the military's ban on homosexuals after her ejection from the Army over a lesbian encounter.

Nine weeks after Pedraza had been in basic training, she was "caught making love to another trainee in the all-woman unit," the military report stated.

Ms. Pedraza allegedly told an Army private that she, as a woman, could make love to her better than a man could. Pedraza also had affectionately complimented the private on her figure.

At the motions hearing, Houston gay activist, Ray Hill, testified that the military has long been a good career for gays. "Many homosexuals," Hill said, "like the ordered, disciplined life the military provides."

In testimony, Brig. Gen. Donald Connelly, director of the Army's Personnel Management Office, conceded under cross examination that a gay can perform duties in the military as well as any heterosexual soldier.

A Navy study in the 1970 concluded, "It seems quite likely that there are many more homosexuals serving out their enlistments and receiving honorable discharges than are being caught."

Each year, the military discharges about 1,600 soldiers and sailors on homosexual charges. That's less than half of one percent, said the State Department. If ten percent [Kinsey] of the two million in the Armed Forces is gay, then another 9 1/2 % are never caught.

The Pedraza case in San Antonio is one of at least a dozen suits now pending in federal civilian and military appeals courts, TWT NEWS learned.

THE RAPING OF YOUNG LESBIAN

CINCINNATI — Is it alright to rape a lesbian? Perhaps so. At least that's the conclusion of a jury in this Ohio city which has acquitted Ted Patrick and his two companions on charges of raping a 20-year-old lesbian, Stephanie Riethmiller.

Patrick told the jury he was trying to "deprogram the lesbian" after her parents had paid him $8,000 to dissuade her from her lesbian relationship.

William and Marita Riethmiller of Indian Hill, who were granted immunity from prosecution in exchange for their testimony, testified that they helped plan and carry out the abduction of their daughter.

The Riethmillers said they were concerned that their daughter was under the mind control of the roommate, who had forced her into a lesbian relationship.

The other two people involved in the caper were Naomi Goss and James Roe, both 25. Both were also found innocent of all charges except abduction.

Roe was found innocent of six counts of sexual battery. He had been charged with having sexual intercourse with Riethmiller during her deprogramming.

"Fisting" Film Controversy

Dear TWT:

Will Ray Hill and George Barnhart please step forward onto the carpet. Up to the line, please. Since your public statements have generated a circus of false, malicious gossip regarding my character, I ask you to step forward and be held accountable for your actions and remarks.

First, I find it incomprehensible that you uttered any public accusations about testimony I made in a court of law, in a room distant from your own hearing, without first calling me to ask for my version. You reacted when you should have reasoned. Something not uncommon for the two of you, I might add. Because of not extending that simple courtesy, you have caused much to do about nothing. And of all that I am going to say on the matter, it is only this that I would expect an apology on. The rest of this matter concerns a difference of opinion between us, which you will have to accept, like it or not. I respect the rights of others to have differing views from me on a whole host of matters. Not agreeing on everything is just as important as agreeing on everything. We need both. Consequently, you are entitled to your opinions and so am I.

Second, and before I address the real issue at hand, let me try to dispel many of the untruths generated by your Gang of 2+: I am not anti-gay; never have been. I am not out to interfere with the right of the French Quarter to exist; frankly, I don't have an opinion one way or the other. I have made no disparaging or spiteful remarks concerning the lack of gay support regarding my candidacy for public office. I did say, however, that no organized gay support came forward, which is the truth. George Barnhart made the foregoing accusations and, as usual, was way off base again.

Ray Hill, on the other hand, called me a prostitute because I stepped forward and gave testimony against what he calls "gay male porno flicks." Tell me, Ray, how you define the word "prostitute." Is it because you started a FALSE rumor (or unwittingly repeated to others) that I was supposedly guilty of some campaign violation (there are several versions of this) and was about to be indicted by some grand jury? Further, that I testified for the prosecution in exchange for them dropping an indictment against me? It would appear the only way to vindicate myself would be to be indicted for something. What nonsense, Ray. You should know better than that.

I have a hard time understanding why Ray Hill or George Barnhart decided to retaliate against my testimony with a PERSONAL attack on me; except that it appears based either out of ignorance or stupidity. In Ray Hill's case, I suspect ignorance.

Third, the issue: As always, there are two sides to an issue. To listen to both Hill and Barnhart, it was an anti-gay act to speak out against a film described by Hill as a "gay male porno flick." Further, they embrace the acts in this film as fitting the gay community's standards. It is here that I draw the line and disagree with the Gang of 2+. These may be their standards, but they are not the universally accepted standards of the remainder of the gay community.

For example, the film in question portrays fist fucking (fisting) as one of our gay "standards." I say it is not. Hill and Barnhart would have had me testify that it was. If I had perjured myself, presumably they would have been happy and content. Fisting is not the norm or standard of this community; whether they like it or not is not my concern. The issue before the court was whether or not this film represented gay lifestyles. I contend that fisting is not representative of gay lifestyles. Fisting, I believe, needs to be viewed under some other standard, but not gay. This was the only issue I addressed in court.

Personally, I believe that fisting belongs under sexual aberration rather than under any gay classification. Too often we raise the anti-gay defense on matters which are not. We are not exempt from all the rules of conduct which govern our society, even though we may like to think otherwise.

I respect the rights of all persons to do as they wish with themselves and/or with other consenting adults. But I oppose, object and reject a few people placing their personal preferences up for all to view, especially under oath in a court of law, as a standard lifestyle of our gay community. It just isn't so. In the court case before us, fisting was that example. I felt it was time someone spoke out on the issue and I did so. I was, frankly, unconcerned whether or not it was a popular thing to do. It was a statement I felt important to make.

I do not present my preferences as the standard for all of us, either, and I will not permit others to intimidate me into silence when I disagree with what they suggest our standards are. I reserve my right to differ on the standards of our community. Hill and Barnhart do not set my standards; I do!

I am no one's puppet. There are those in our community who have standards at a different level than those proposed by Hill and Barnhart. I am only one, but I believe there are many others, too.

Fourth, an observation: I find it strange that not a single person came forward to seek out my position on the matter before they started their personal attacks against me. Fortunately, our local publications are permitting me an opportunity to respond to these false accusations. My response would have been made earlier, but I was out of town for ten days. It was during my absence that the Gang of 2+ cranked up the rumor mill against me. Convenient.

Fifth, our image: It's about time we took a look at our community and the image we wish to present to the rest of society. Both or you, Ray and George, have stated publicly that to object to "porno flicks" is to be "anti-gay." I disagree.

Come forward and make your case, gentlemen. I like a good fight, so let's get on with it. But no more hitting below the belt; that's for little people... or big people with little minds.

Conclusion: Opinions are like assholes. Everybody is entitled to one.

T-Shirt Mess-up

Dear TWT:

Based on the Oak Lawn Transfer ad in TWT, a friend and I attended your Fantasy in Black party in Dallas, Friday evening, April 30, 1982. After paying the $7.50 cover charge each and entering the club, we were told that the t-shirt was for members only. If the ad was printed incorrectly, I'm sure you would like to have an apology published, especially for non-members who may have participated in the buffet.

Appropriate refund may also be considered for a reputable establishment in our community. . . .

Pete J. Dareos
Dallas, Texas

Dear TWT:

Well, we screwed up at our Fantasy in Black party. We gave away 400 t-shirts. They were supposed to go to the first 400 members who came that night. In our TWT ad, it was supposed to say that, but with all the preparations, we of Oak Lawn Transfer forgot to say that, and we're sorry.

We try, but believe it or not, we're human and we make mistakes. . . .

DPD to the Rescue!

Dear TWT:

Thank you, DPD! On Sunday, May 9, within just hours of the Police Harassment Protest Rally at the Village, a group of us were walking on Cedar Springs to see a show at the Wooden Nickel nightclub.

Our party consisted of five men and one woman. As we walked, two men passed us. As they passed, one of the men grabbed the woman by the arm. Her escort quickly pushed her ahead of us and we all began heading to the club.

The attacker then began hitting her escort and thrusting him to the wall. At the Wooden Nickel, management called the Dallas police. I myself was hit by this man at the front door of the club, doing some harm. The attacker was abandoned by his friend. He then went to the JR's club.

Quickly and thankfully, two officers arrived, consulted with our group's spokesman and arrested the attacker outside JR's. These two officers were polite, courteous and GREAT! DPD can be wonderful, sometimes!

Pride or Sleaze?

Dear TWT:

Once again, our community is gearing-up for Gay Pride Week in an effort to unite and make a positive statement about ourselves. Many hours will be devoted to organizing and planning our strategy for telling the world that we are responsible people with dignity, integrity and pride.

Regrettably, some of us will miss the point and use the events as our annual opportunity to publicly thumb our noses at the world. In past years, we have defeated our own purpose by turning Gay Pride Week into a public hoe-down complete with lewd dress, vulgar behavior and double-entendre slogans which lend an air of unrelenting sleaze. Then we bellyache all year because society rejects us.

Let's face it, we cannot expect the public's judgment of us to be any better than the information they have about us. They get that information from hearsay and from seeing us in action. What we show them during Gay Pride Week will significantly influence the message they get. We can depict ourselves as responsible human beings worthy of our civil rights, or we can make fools of ourselves and reinforce the stereo-typed beliefs that we are irresponsible misfits suffering from terminal degeneracy. Gay Pride Week 1982 gives us another chance to make our statement. Will we use it constructively, or will we waste it? It's up to us!

Fort Worth Crowning

Dear TWT:

Monday, April 26, was the Miss Gay Tarrant County pageant. . . . everyone was a winner for trying at the title, as in any contest.

. . . As the patrons of this contest walked into the Other Place in Fort Worth, they were handed a ticket with a number on it. The winning numbers were called, and the persons with those numbers were asked if they wanted to judge.

The reason this was unfair is that there are possibilities that some of the judges: 1) didn't know how to opinionize the clothes themselves but were judging the persons in them; 2) some of them may have not realized the importance of poise and presentation; 3) personal feelings—some of the judges could have positive or negative feelings for a certain contestant or contestants and didn't overlook those feelings; 4) and last but not least, intelligence and personality shown during question and answer.

This contest was sponsored by the Imperial Court of Ft. Worth, and they did a good job. So by no means is this putting down anyone in the court or any of the judges of Miss Tarrant County. It's just to prove a simple point—open judging is not fair.

Everyone did real well and congratulations to the winners.

Jay Eigermann
Fort Worth, Texas

TWT spoke with Other Place management who said "the bar had nothing to do with the pageant or judging. We simply provided the space." Perhaps the pageant owner, the Imperial Court, would wish to respond to the methodology used in selecting judges.

Houston Thanks Dallas

Editor—When the Dallas Gay Alliance decided to endorse John Hanna rather than Jim Mattox for Attorney General, Mattox was disappointed, upset, and as a result, showed his true colors on human rights in non-gay press releases as noted in the following COMMENT letter from Houston gay activist, Ray Hill.

Dear TWT:

Former Congressman Jim Mattox of Dallas has actively sought and received gay and lesbian support throughout his political career. However, the Dallas Gay Alliance, which is in the best position to know him, endorsed instead John Hanna for this year's Democratic nominee for Attorney General. The rest of gay Texas followed their example. We all owe the DGA our gratitude—since the endorsement of Hanna, Mattox has attacked our candidate in the press for having our support. His gay-baiting campaign tactics display his true colors: Mattox is a political demagogue riding the sleazy coattails of expediency in disregard of our struggle for equal rights.

John Hanna is, on the other hand, a highly qualified candidate committed to the principle of equal treatment for all Texans. I hope all TWT readers will help persuade their friends to take advantage of the short ballot in the Democratic primary run-off, June 5, and vote for John Hanna, our next Attorney General.

Part XI of a continuing series of narrative features on health and hygiene.

HEPATITIS FOOTNOTE

by Patrick Gibbons

Research in the medical field is constantly expanding our awareness of diseases, the nature of their causes and effects, and our consequent ability to combat them more effectively. Hepatitis is no exception, and in the past few years, new developments have dispelled many traditional notions, especially those connected with type B hepatitis. These recent developments have been brought to our attention in recent press coverage concerning new hepatitis vaccines and in responses from medical professionals to the first part of "About Hepatitis," in Vol. 8, No. 7 of TWT. These responses are appreciated. The following update has been prepared as a footnote to an even further betterment of our understanding of a disease which is not yet fully understood.

The major traditional notion, which many doctors still hold and which has been dispelled by recent research, is that type B hepatitis "cannot be transferred . . . except through IVs and blood transfusions." According to the Harvard Medical School Health Letter Book, type B hepatitis "is now known to be present in various body fluids (tears, saliva, semen, and so on) which accounts for the fact that spread is also possible via intimate contact, including sexual activity" (p. 341). Since the first part of "About Hepatitis" dismissed the type B strain because of its primary interest in the more contagious type A virus, it is now necessary to supplement more fully the dangers, nature and recent developments in research on the type B virus.

Unlike type A hepatitis, which the body eradicates by the time the yellowish skin and eye tone fades, type B hepatitis, according to the Health Letter Book (p. 341), "is not always eradicated; it can persist for years or even a lifetime." About 10% of type B victims do not rid themselves fully of the active virus and risk developing a chronic hepatitis condition. More importantly, they become unknowing carriers "who can transmit the disease to others even when they seem in good health." It is advised that those who have had hepatitis check with the physician who treated them to verify which type of hepatitis they had and perhaps, if they did suffer type B, visit their doctors for tests to see if they are carriers.

Many are already aware of the recent studies on type B hepatitis which have been conducted among gay men due to the demographic prevalence of the disease in the gay community. This research has led to the development of an FDA-approved vaccine for type B hepatitis. It must be emphasized that this vaccine does not prevent the contracting of type A hepatitis for which the only prevention is believed to be a gamma globulin shot.

Another aspect about hepatitis which is still in the realm of uncertainty is whether or not the body, after suffering type A or B hepatitis, develops an immunity to the disease. Even the professionals are not in agreement. Some sustain the belief that once having suffered the disease one becomes even more vulnerable to contracting it again; others contend that after full eradication of the virus, the likelihood of getting hepatitis again is very slight. Recent research has not yet addressed this problem conclusively except in the development of the vaccine against the type B strain, which vaccine supposedly ensures immunity against this virus.

The general consensus rests in the attitude that until the body has fully eradicated the virus, it is very susceptible to relapse due to the reexposure to the disease or due to not taking care of one's self according to aforementioned methods.

However, after the virus is totally overcome, it is highly unlikely that one will succumb to the disease again, even though reinfection can sometimes occur. Therefore, when a person says (s)he has "had hepatitis twice," (s)he should more appropriately say (s)he has "had a relapse," since it is believed that (s)he actually never fully recovered from the initial infection. W

The Men with the Pink Triangle, by Heinz Heger; 117pp.; glossary; Alyson Publications, Inc., P.O. Box 2783, Boston, Massachusetts 02208; softcover $4.95

Reviewed by David Fields

Those of you who saw the stage-play Bent when it was in Houston recently would better appreciate the experiences portrayed if you knew more of the background of the play. Those of you who missed the play might want to learn of the Nazi holocaust against gays and see from a personal perspective the inhumanities they performed. But whether you saw it or not, everyone can find out more of these events as described by Heinz Heger in The Men with the Pink Triangle. Heger survived the concentration camps where he was sent as a criminal for the sentiments he expressed to another man during the Nazi's rise to power. Due to the code of survival he was forced to adopt, and at the sacrifice of others' lives (which he readily acknowledges), he lived to write to the world what happened, so we would know and not forget. His first person accounts show the extremes of and potential for human barbarism. These things may be unpleasant to know of, but it is necessary so that such events never again occur.

Heger wrote this also because homosexuals received inhuman treatment from their fellow inmates, who considered them degenerates and sub-humans. Of all the different triangled groups besides the Jews (who usually went directly to death camps) imprisoned, the gypsies, the politicals, criminals, Jehovah Witnesses, anti-socials and the emigrants, the homosexuals with the pink triangle were the most expendable and the first to die when they reached a camp. Level 3 was the category all homosexuals were placed in, which meant they must be worked or beaten to death within a few months of their arrival.

Another reason this book is important is to show the world that the treatment they received should be recognized. The people who survived are persons equal to those in other categories, and should receive equal compensation. Europe at that time and often today refuses to acknowledge legitimacy of homosexuals and their place as respected citizens of the world. Their place in history is denied as well, which deprives us of who we are today.

The book is relatively short and quick reading. Heger's main narrative concerns his life in the barracks, the politics, the alliances and the torture by the officers, guards and trustees of the inmates. All values of decency and respect as a human being were quickly stripped away as the Nazis broke down the human solidarity of the prisoners. The struggle for individual survival was continuous. He describes the events in little episodes, revealing also the gestures of human compassion that stood out starkly against the backdrop of such cruelty.

Those who sit content today are unaware of the still-great hostility against homosexuals in America, and, of course, throughout the world. Though this hostility and ignorance is not politically motivated, and does not express itself in wholesale torture, the persecution of gays in many crucial areas, e.g., housing and employment, is widespread. This environment allowed homosexuals to be singled out and destroyed in Nazi Germany. This book should remind us of what we have and do not have. As Heger states, "True, our modern 'open' society accepts homosexuality in its own way, making plays and films about it, but at the same time homosexuals themselves are despised and persecuted . . . [only to] live in the shadows of society . . . and lead an existence that is not compatible with human dignity."

The Men with the Pink Triangle is one of a very few works that discusses the death of over 50,000 people simply for having homosexual feelings of love and caring. These deaths are recognized here as a memorial to them, and the book ends with these words—"May they never be forgotten, these multitudes of dead, our anonymous, immortal martyrs." W

"I know, Dino, but listen, it can't fail! Schwarzenegger is PERFECT as the latest vehicle for fantasy and sex-appeal!"

"Well, Ed, it may fit, but can he act?"

"No problem, Dino, with the gore and special effects, and all those muscles, who would notice?"

Well, folks, I noticed, the audience noticed, and even the girl at the popcorn stand noticed.

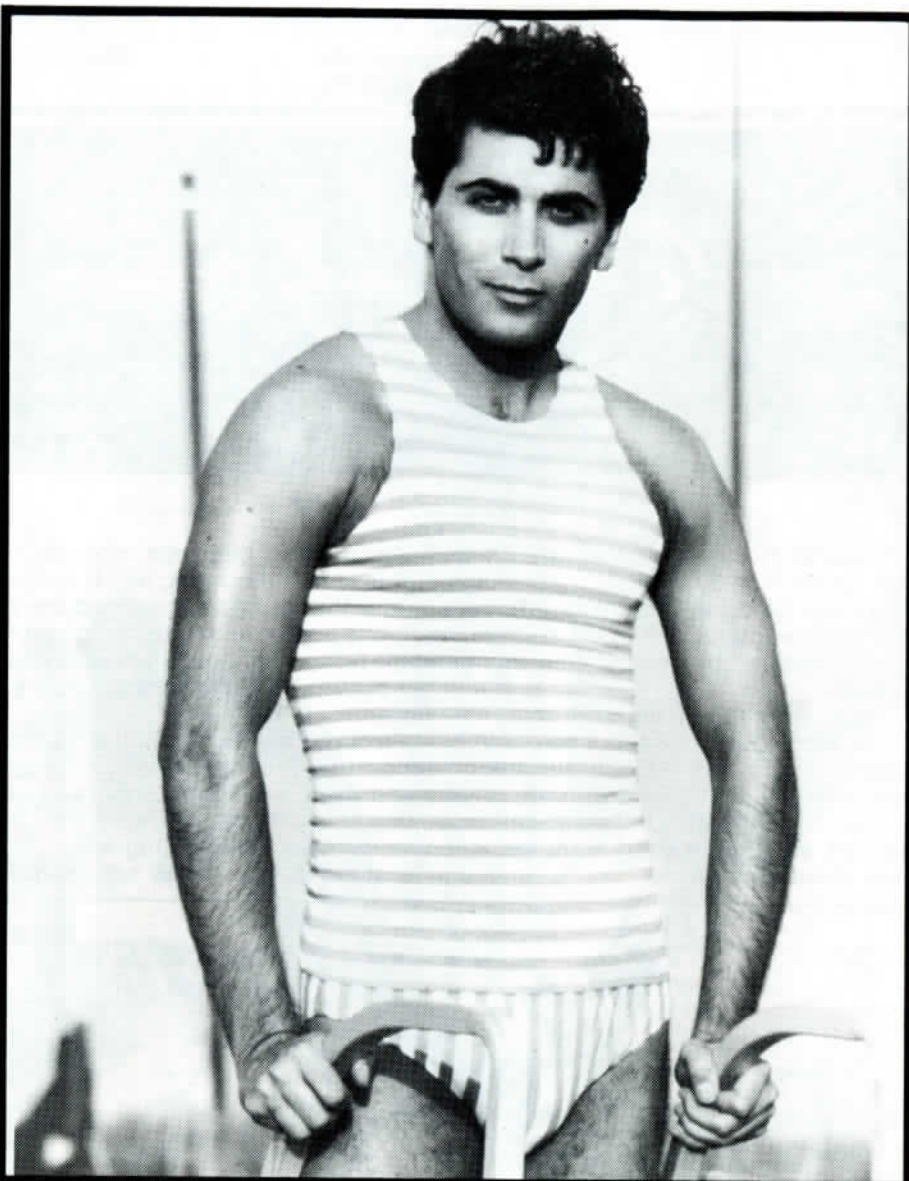

Conan The Barbarian opened in Dallas last Friday night, and from the lines at the box office, it seemed everyone was excited and full of anticipation at the prospect of Arnold Schwarzenegger playing the hunky fantasy hero of Conan.

Produced and framed by that hero of production, Dino De Laurentiis, Conan was an idea that seemed timely and exciting, considering the advances in special effects and photography.

Instead, De Laurentiis has spent a fortune on long, iconoclastic scenes that numb and bash the viewer into his/her seat. After the first five minutes, you start trying to find the best way to sit the most comfortably in your theater seat.

Conan is a young barbarian in the land of Yesterday, who sees Mommy and Daddy barbarian killed by the evil snake people. He survives, of course, to seek revenge. Raised as a slave by the snake people, he soon gains the muscles and strength of Hercules, and becomes a famous gladiator. He gains his freedom, and marches through barbarian wastes to find his enemy.

Seduced by a witch, who turns into a demon at the point of sexual climax, he is given his prophecy of victory. He finds his snake people, aided by a blonde bombshell barbarian and a suitably less muscular sidekick.

He conquers, after tons of blood and severed heads. Of course.

Conan is the greatest disappointment this viewer has seen in this entire movie season. Schwarzenegger was great in Pumping Iron, and even mildly likeable in The Jayne Mansfield Story, but as far as a lead role in an overly long production such as Conan, he founders and flexes his way to a sleepy time.

There are too many scenes of flexing and biceps.

There are too many scenes of pointless views of his face, staring out into the sky.

The action scenes are promising, but depend too much on swords parting arms and heads from bodies.

Perhaps the time I should have left was when Conan was crucified.

The parallels are too much for Hollywood, and not enough for reality.

The only saving grace to this sprawling disappointment is the photography of Duke Callaghan, done with loving grace and talent. The viewer is given sweeping scenes of rough and beautiful landscape—perfect scenery for a Conan movie.

Warning: be prepared for a sequel. The plot is left oozing Conan II.

So, if you wish to see Conan The Barbarian, stick to the book or the comic series.

If you wish to see Arnold Schwarzenegger and dozens of musclemen in barbarian drag, go see Conan The Barbarian.

Tab Hunter, Connie Stevens, Dody Goodman, Sid Caesar and Eve Arden in Grease 2.

GREASING UP — Lorna Luft has headlined in Vegas and in the top nightclubs across the country. She's played the Palace Theater, Carnegie Hall, Madison Square Garden and the London Palladium. She was in a musical version of Lolita that went nowhere, and David Merrick cast her in a Broadway production of Promises, Promises, for which she won the 1972 Rising Star of the Year Award. More recently she has appeared in a revival of Grease and she received acclaim in a national tour of They're Playing Our Song. Just for the record, Lorna's mother was none other than Judy Garland and her half-sister is Liza Minnelli. In spite of all this, major stardom has always seemed to elude her. Now, with her co-starring role in the soon to be released Grease 2, her rather considerable talents will be on display for the mass audience and her fortunes may change. In Grease 2 she plays Rydell High School's answer to Marilyn Monroe. The film is also predicted to make stars of Maxwell Caulfield and Michelle Pfeiffer in the lead roles. The supporting cast includes such stalwarts as Eve Arden, Sid Caesar and Dody Goodman, returning in roles they originated in the first Grease film, and they are joined by new cast members Tab Hunter and Connie Stevens. The film was directed and choreographed by Patricia Birch who choreographed the Broadway productions of Grease, Over Here, A Little Night Music and Candide.

ROCK STEADY DEPT — You've heard this all before, but one of Britain's hottest rock acts may be on the verge of exploding on the rock scene like nobody has since those halcyon hype days of the sixties. The group's name is Haircut One Hundred and their album Pelican West is getting a major promotion in this country by Arista Records who seem to think they are sitting on a gold mine. In the meantime, the group is negotiating in England for a TV series starring themselves and patterned after the old Monkees TV sitcom ... Paul McCartney's new Tug of War album is getting the kind of ecstatic raves that the Beatles used to get. The album contains still another duet with Stevie Wonder, titled "What's That You're Doing?" ... The Four Tops new hit single, "Back To School Again," is from the Grease 2 soundtrack. ... Over the years a number of people have made fools of themselves trying to remake Martha and the Vandellas' brilliant "Dancing In the Street," but Van Halen has succeeded with a funky new version, his follow-up to his revival of Roy Orbison's "Pretty Woman." ... Gold records were recently awarded to the Beach Boys for their Christmas album and also their single, "I Get Around." Both records were released in 1964 and took about 18 years to sell enough for gold status. By comparison, Joan Jett and the Blackhearts' "I Love Rock 'n' Roll" went gold in a matter of weeks; however, it took Gene Autry's "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer," which was first released in 1949, about 20 years to turn gold. Are you still there?

POMP AND SPLENDOR DEPT — With Abel Gance's long-forgotten 1927 film, Napoleon, becoming the surprise hit of the last few seasons, it might be interesting to see if the movie war-horse of them all, D.W. Griffith's epic Intolerance, can attract such a fanatic following. It looks like somebody already has that idea. The Griffith film, which was a commercial failure when it was first released in 1916, was recently restored to 166 minutes for a special exhibition as the opening film for the Cannes Film Festival. I believe the original print of the film was several hours long.

SHOWBIZ IN PERSPECTIVE DEPT — Master's and Johnson's controversial book, Homosexuality In Perspective is finally out in paperback, so, if you can afford $5.95, this may be your opportunity to find out what makes you tick. Of course, Homosexuality In Per- spective doesn't exactly fit under the banner of SHOWBIZ, but, since Hollywood is scrounging around for gay themes, I think the book could be adapted as a movie. I see it as a lavish musical in the Busby Berkeley style or, perhaps, a western.

musical version of La Cage Aux Folles, that he is producing. If you have ever seen Allan Carr on a TV talkshow, you know that he is never at a loss for words and that he seems to know everybody.

The bottom line, though, is that Allan Carr is one of the top producers in Hollywood.

TWT — Why did you decide to use two unknowns in the lead roles of Grease 2, instead of John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John, the stars of the original Grease?

Carr — We all mutually decided that we should leave the first one as their picture (John and Olivia's). They were perfectly willing to do a major musical sequence in Grease 2.

What about some of the other members of the cast?

Annette Funicello was originally scheduled to play the Connie Stevens role, but she had to do a Skippy peanut butter commercial when she was scheduled to shoot for us. I said to her, "Are you crazy? You're going to give up a movie to do a Skippy peanut butter commercial?" When she told me how much they were paying her for the commercial, I said, "You're right." I was flying to Las Vegas to spend the night with Roger Smith and Ann-Margret and sitting next to me on the plane was Connie Stevens. She looked so adorable and so cute . . . so I said would you like to do something in Grease, and she said, "I don't know, but if I don't my kids will kill me."

How many people did you audition for Grease 2?

We saw 300 people for the four principal parts and we screen tested sixteen people. We tested Rick Springfield; Shawn Cassidy, who was surprisingly good; KC of KC and the Sunshine Band, also surprisingly good; Tim Hutton wanted to do it, but Tim Hutton wouldn't test—Paramount said this is a neurotic kid from Ordinary People. I said, "No he isn't, he's a regular person." It was all in the open, so we started seeing people. I heard about this performance by this Maxwell Caulfield in an off-Broadway show and when Maxwell Caulfield and Michelle Pfeiffer were chosen from 300 people for two of the four leading roles in Allan Carr's production of Paramount Pictures' Grease 2.

I went there the audience was just swooning over him—women were just going crazy. So we tested him. He flew out on his day off from the play and when the test came out we went, "Oh, my God, that's a movie star." There was no contest with anybody else.

How many dancers did you use in the opening sequence of Grease 2?

In the opening scene there were 350; about thirty professional dancers, fifteen principals and the rest were extras.

How much did the movie cost to make?

Actually it cost about $11.5 million, a third of what Annie cost.

What is your next project?

We'll be filming a new version of Where the Boys Are in Ft. Lauderdale. It's about Easter vacation and what happens in that ten-day period. It's a comedy, but I want to use people like the Go-Go's and Tina Turner, different musical groups that would appear within the picture. I'm doing a musical for Goldie Hawn called Chicago.

How do you like Texas?

I love it. W

UP'TIGHT ON GAY NEWS

Reprinted from the Columbia Journalism Review, March/April, 1982. ©

BY RANDELL PIERSON

In Part II, Randsell Pierson cited numerous examples of distorted, or total lack of, coverage of gay-related stories reported in newspapers, especially The New York Times.

The San Francisco Chronicle is one mainstream daily that has begun to pursue news relating to the lives gays lead and the issues that concern them as it would any other story. The Chronicle's recent coverage of anti-gay violence is a clear case in point. Between September 15 and December 10, 1981, the paper ran at least six articles on the subject. Some were brief, such as GAY ACTIVIST NEARLY KILLED BY S.F. STABBINGS; a few were long, such as VIOLENCE AND GAYS—A TURN IN THE TIDE, a fifty-paragraph piece accompanied by five photos. This last article, pegged to the sentencing of a confessed killer of four gay men, concluded with a cogent quote that has some implications for editors. The murders, said Gwenn Craig, president of the Harvey Milk Gay Democratic Club, prove "the fundamental point we've been trying to make for years. We've been saying that hatred of gay people is an issue that our society has to deal with. It's real and it brings tragedies like this."

The author of these six pieces was Randy Shilts, who joined the Chronicle's staff last summer after the paper made it known that it was looking for an openly gay reporter. Shilts says his instructions are to do general reporting (most of his pieces are in this category) while keeping an eye on gay topics. Among other stories, he has written features on "the first acknowledged lesbian judge in the country" and "the city's first openly gay cop."

Shilts believes that his presence on the staff has had beneficial effects both on the way the paper is perceived by the city's gay community and on the quality of the paper's coverage of it. "The gay community doesn't feel as alienated" as it did previously, he says. "They know they have somebody they can call up who won't make queer jokes when they hang up the phone. And Randsell Pierson has worked at three newspapers—the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, where he was a general assignment reporter; the Columbia Missourian, where he covered city hall; and the Wilmington, North Carolina, Star-News, where he was a copy editor.

within the paper I think a lot of dumb things that are written because of ignorance, not malice, don't appear because [his colleagues] can come to me and feel like they're getting things in clearer perspective."

Asked if a gay reporter could objectively cover the city's gay community, city editor Jerry Burns replied that the question was comparable to asking "whether a black reporter can cover black stories or a Jewish person a Jewish story. You want to build a staff composed of people of a variety of backgrounds."

Hiring an openly gay reporter, as the Chronicle did, or keeping on and making the best use of a reporter who comes out to his editor and colleagues, as the New York Post has done, are obvious means of upgrading a paper's coverage of gays. But the prerequisite for improving coverage is an awareness that something is lacking in the existing news product. Gay activists have tried for years to raise the press's consciousness on this score, and here and there they can point to change. In Boston, for example, the Globe altered its style rule to allow the use of "gay" as a noun and ran a profile of a lesbian grandmother following meetings with a local group called Lesbian and Gay Media Advocates. In Minneapolis, Tribune assistant city editor John Addington says that meetings with "vocal gay leaders in the community," together with the presence of two openly gay reporters who have since moved on to other jobs, resulted in increased coverage of gay news.

Ron Gold, a former TV Guide editor and Variety reporter who served as media liaison for the National Gay Task Force until 1979, believes that activists must not only "consult with" editors but also "confront" them to end what he regards as "a literal conspiracy in the major media to suppress gay news." What Gold and others find particularly wrongheaded about present coverage of gays is its focus on the wilder fringes of gay life at the expense of the domesticity of the lives led by the majority of gay men and women and the development of professional caucuses and gay communities. James Saslow, New York editor of The Advocate, says in this connection: "Always what captures the public's mind are the sexual or sensational aspects, rather than the full picture of the lives we lead. Nothing else gets through. It's as if there's a filter on the city editor's brain."

Conceivably, the establishment this spring of a national gay wire service could alert attentive mainstream editors to a range of stories they would otherwise not pick up on. The wire service, which is being set up by the Gay Press Association, will be based in New York City. In the meantime, the paucity of nonsensational and nonpolitical pieces on gays suggests that the "filter on the city editor's brain" may, over the years, have become virtually impermeable. This reporter's survey of coverage indicated that, while papers frequently present gays in a crime or a drag-queen context and sporadically report on their political activities, they almost never treat the wider issues of how gays live, or the problems a gay child faces, or the psychological and social aspects of being gay. The Globe's February 2, 1981, profile of a lesbian grandmother; a June 21, 1981, Washington Post piece headlined GAY COUPLE LIVING TOGETHER FINDS OLD RULES DO NOT FIT; and Randy Shilts's San Francisco Chronicle pieces demonstrate that papers can present gays as, quite simply, people—but such pieces are rare.

In the January 21, 1982, Advocate, media columnist Randy Alfred observed: "If the gay angle is essentially irrelevant to the news story's news value, it will be mentioned only if the story is negative. An alleged arsonist who claims to be gay is a 'gay arsonist,' but a humanitarian doctor who's partly closeted is a 'bachelor.'"

The observation is apt, but it begs the question of how journalists can extricate themselves from this bind until more gays whom the public respects step out of the closet, thus making it possible for them to be defined as gay.

To do so, of course, requires guts. Not to do so, meanwhile, helps to perpetuate the present stasis, in which the press transmits to an intolerant and ill-informed society the kind of coverage that, being only marginally better informed, does little to educate that society out of its intolerance.

"The biggest enemies [faced by gay activists trying to effect change] are the totally closeted people who have real power," says the NBC news executive who describes himself as "openly gay but not for publication." His comment is echoed by many gays in the news media, who perceive promotion to power as a means by which institutions unwittingly force closeted gays to become, or appear, homophobic: the more they have to protect, the more careful they are to disguise themselves—some, by marrying and raising a family; some, by expressing their contempt for "faggots" in a variety of ways at the office.

Joan Cook, a metro desk reporter at

The New York Times and chairperson of The Newspaper Guild's unit at the paper, says: "I know it's a problem felt by homosexuals—the uncertainty of knowing what will happen if they become open. I don't know that there are any guarantees for anyone advancing the body social. Everybody takes risks. You decide whether you're going to be a risk-taker or not."

It would be unfair, however, to place the burden of change on the shoulders of gays. Surely, at the very least, editors have a responsibility to provide a newsroom climate in which reporters, straight or gay, can suggest that stories about gays be pursued without fearing that their motives will be questioned or their future at the paper imperiled. Surely, too, one might expect conscientious editors and reporters to review their past coverage of stories relating to gays and then to ask themselves one question: Have their attitudes toward homosexuality affected their ability to perceive and report reality? W

AUSTIN — A crowd of 15,000 (see photo above) attended the annual Eeyore's Birthday Party in Pease Park. 300 kegs of beer were consumed! Peace, love and harmony prevailed. Descending upon the crowd were Hell's Aliens (see photo at right). Costumes everywhere! No where else but Austin. The "Untold Story," boys and girls. It seems that Kelly wanted to lose weight before whirling across America in an 18-city tour, so she went to a fat farm in London where she had her jaws wired shut. Honest, folks, this IS a true story. Well, she became ill! "The tour will be rescheduled," said top brass.

IGBO IN DALLAS

DALLAS — The OLBA has informed TWT SPORTS that 22 cities from 18 states are geared up to compete in the gigantic Memorial weekend, May 28-31, IGBO paramountly prized tournament.

"Its the largest gay bowling tournament ever to be staged in America," proud OLBA announced. IGBO looks like a real nail-biter!

TENNIS TOURNAY

HOUSTON — On June 26, the MSA Tennis League and the Oak Lawn Tennis Association will pair off in the Dallas vs Houston Texas Challenge Cup. Rick DuPont is in charge of rules, Fred Lopez is MSA team captain, and Rich Corder is Tournament Director.

The Challenge ladder will be used to select the best seven players, TWT SPORTS was informed. Doubles matches will pair off in a round-robin tournament to select the best four doubles.

OLBA ROLL-OFFS

DALLAS — In Division A, Crews Inn Two is the winner, with Ross Howell's 235 winning high game and Robert Berdeau's 600 winning high series.

In Division B, Ballbusters has won, with Lonnie Martin winning both high game and series with scores of 220 and 592.

In Division C, Mr. Bill's Bunch has won, with Bill Herberger winning both high game and series with scores of 211 and 550.

Next week's roll-offs at Bronco Lanes for second and third place positions start at 8pm and include: Division A—Crews Inn Two vs Sundance and Tex's Ranch/Branding Iron #2 vs Stokers; Division B—Ballbusters vs Oh Daddy's and Picky Pecker Pickers vs Crisco Kids; and Division C—Mr. Bill's Bunch vs High Ballers and Leftovers vs Gutterettes.

WSL STANDINGS SHIFT

HOUSTON — The standings have juggled as a result of last weekend's Women's Softball League action. 1) Renegades remain in the lead and undefeated (3-0); 2) tied records (3-1) between Hell Raisers, who fell a notch, and Ducks, who move up; 3) Armadillo Graphic (2-1); and 4) Chuck's Angels and Kindred Spirits with tied records (2-2).

The scores that tilted the standings were Ducks over Armadillo Graphic 8-3, Chuck's Angels squeezed by Twins 7-6, Royal A's beat Special Blend 11-9, and Kindred Spirits dumped Hell Raisers 13-7.

WSL will hold a fundraising raffle of a Basket of Cheer consisting of $80 in assorted alcoholic beverages donated by Kindred Spirits. Tickets are available at next weekend's games or through WSL members for $2.

Meanwhile, Leslie Mullins, WSL's Ms. GPW representative, will sponsor a booth at the MSA/BWMT park rally on June 19, TWT SPORTS learned.

Division B: 1) Bushwackers; 2) Five Easy Pieces; and 3) Split Endz.

Division C: 1) Slow Hand; 2) Black and Blue Balls; and 3) The Hole.

Division D: 1) Gator-Aide; 2) Happy Trails; and 3) Side Kicks, reported Sam Immardino.

TENSE COMPETITION

HOUSTON — In the MSA Softball League's North Division, an idle Sally's lead of last week has narrowed as a result of the Mine's 17-11 victory over the Voice last Sunday. The Mine is now only two games out of first place.

In the South Division, the Galleon's lead holds after last Sunday's near shut-out over BRB, 12-1. Jim's Gym is only two games out of first place as a result of having beaten Mary's 8-6.

In Sunday's finale, a wild game between A&K and the Barn saw 34 runs scored on 27 hits, as the A&K outlasted with a 20-14 victory.

Next Sunday at 6pm at Levy Field, Jim's Gym vs Voice; 7pm, Mine vs BRB; 8pm, Mary's vs Sally's; and 9pm, A&K vs Patch.

The top five hitters through May 16 are Davidson of Sally's (.647 average), Summerall of BRB (.600), Marchena of Sally's (.591), Schmidt of Barn (.592), and Romero of Mine (.555).

DeSale, Johnston, Marchena and Schmidt lead the homerun standings, having each hit three so far this season. TWT

The Week of May 21 - 27

STARGAZER: Scientists fear a newly-discovered monster cloud of volcanic ash, drifting 13 miles above the planet, will cause droughts or heat waves on Earth. The two-mile thick monster cloud is composed of debris from the March 29 eruption of the Chinchonal volcano in southeast Mexico. The monster now stretches from Mexico across the Pacific and Indian oceans to Saudi Arabia. It is the largest ever, and is concentrated most heavily over Hawaii, where it is already blocking sunshine.

Debris clouds usually create spectacular sunrises and sunsets, but this one gives a washed-out appearance to the usually clear Hawaiian sky. Temperatures might dip because the cloud would filter or block the sunlight. On the other hand, temperatures might be raised because the cloud could prevent release of the Earth's heat. STARSCOPE notes that after the 1816 eruption of the Tambora volcano in Indonesia, there was significant localized cooling in New England and Western Europe. The cooling caused frost every few days throughout the summer of 1816, causing famine and food riots in Europe.

FOR ALL SIGNS: The monthly New Moon occurs this Saturday night, May 22, at 11:40pm, in Gemini, a very mental sign. Since New Moons are traditionally the best time to begin new projects, STARSCOPE examines your individual new beginning opportunity for May.

GEMINI: Your best time of the year is here, as both the Sun and Moon are now in your sign, in your first house of personality. Take advantage of this once-a-year Gemini New Moon to launch all personal projects. Theoretically, this is the "Gemini New Year," a perfect time for a second shot at a New Year's resolution.

GANGER: This weekend's Gemini New Moon transmits lunar energy
