PAGANINI'S COFFIN Or, the Author's Manhattan Years

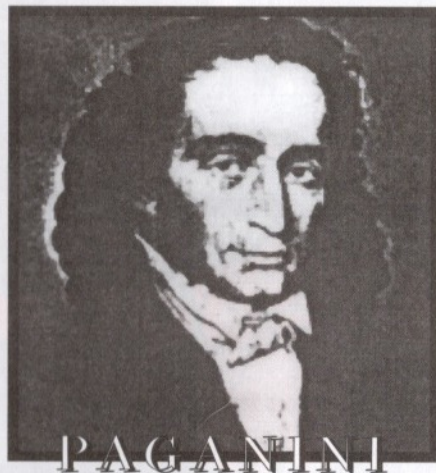

PART II: "NICCOLÒ THE BASTARD"

He claimed to be the illegitimate son of Niccolò Paganini, the legendary violinist whose astonishing virtuosity made him a popular idol. Wild enthusiasm greeted the original's every appearance all over Europe. The public became so intoxicated with his music that shops labeled hats, dresses, shawls, boots, perfumes and gloves "à la Paganini" to boost sales. So great was this fever of admiration that a superstition arose that he was in league with the Devil. "Women," it was whispered, "fall into a trance upon hearing his music and helplessly gave themselves to him." Because of this rumor, his burial in consecrated ground was delayed until five years after his death from a diseased larynx. It is known that he left one illegitimate son. But were there Paganini bastards all over Europe?

Carnegie Hall's Niccolò Paganini was, instead, a pianist. But he bore an uncanny resemblance to the man he claimed as his father. There was the same bony face; deep-set eyes; long, narrow nose; and prominent chin. He spoke in a harsh whisper, claiming to be suffering from an infected throat. The resemblance extended to his music, which seemed to hold magical powers that somehow caused dancers to leap higher and linger in the air longer, to do more pirouettes and faster footwork. As if under a hypnotic spell, the dancers never tired but instead felt exhilarated. "My heart hears his music, my feet dance," we said. World-famous teachers demanded that the virtuoso play for their classes.

BY PHIL JOHNSON
Dallas Gay and Lesbian Historic Archives

Advanced students and professional dancers insisted on being admitted.

Yet, teachers and students alike were spooked by this gentle youth, who was always dressed in black as if in perpetual mourning. Some said that when he walked into the studio there was a faint smell of decay about him, that his appearance was almost like that of an exhumed body. A heavy coat draped his thin, bony shoulders, the fur collar pulled up to frame a lifeless face.

Asked how he knew what composers or what melodies to play without being told, Niccolò raspily whispered, "I'm in tune with the teacher's subconscious." Nor did he have need for musical notation; he was in tune with composers long dead. While some pooh-poohed his credibility and thought his appearance a Halloween contrivance, none doubted his musicality or his sincerity.

If his face seemed lifeless, his music was anything but. He played, not just with his claw-like hands but with his whole body, moving up and down and sometimes leaning way over the keyboard. The rhapsodic music overflowed the grand piano, poured out the studio's doors and swept down the hall — such big music from such a frail body! A Russian ballerina made the sign of the cross as she gasped, "Dear Got, he ees danse macabre!"

The Gentle Friend

Once during a break, Niccolò asked me, a mediocre pianist at best, to play four-hands with him. Strangely, I never played better. Carried away, I accidentally touched the thin hand of death and tried not to shiver. Overcoming this, our duets became a nightly ritual. A love of music bound us together. Until then, I had thought of him as a phenomenal musician/weirdo for whom I had great respect. Gradually I began to think of him as a human being, a friend.

Does a danse macabre weep, does he hurt? Niccolò confided that no one ever invited him to join the rest of gang at the Automat after classes. It never occurred to me that he, a phenomenon, wanted to. Again I was blunt (I always do the wrong thing): "Man! No one invites anyone, you just join the crowd. Everyone's welcome!" But no, he was too shy to invite himself, so I made a formal point of saying, "Niccolò, would you care to join us for a sandwich and a cup of coffee?" It didn't work out too well. When he sat down at a table crowded with jabbering dancers, all fell uncomfortably silent. What do you say to a phenomenon?

The Tomb

One cold, wet October night Niccolò played The Mephisto Waltz, a devilishly difficult tour de force, but one so appropriate for the moment. The studio windows steamed up as the hot dancers gave their all, sending sweat flying. At the same time, as if Mephistopheles himself were choreographing a pas de deux, lightning danced across the New York skyline and rain fell furiously in tempo with the dancers' movements, all under the spell of Franz Liszt's masterful music. The pas de deux built in intensity until, unable to hold back any longer, it rushed to a climactic end.

The totally spent, sweat-drenched dancers filed out of the studio and headed for the showers at the rear of the building. But Niccolò pulled me aside and invited me to his apartment for dinner. I really didn't want to go; I wanted to join the dancers in the showers and then hurry home to the big dinner that I knew my roommates would have waiting for me. But how could I disappoint a friend who feared loneliness? "All right, but I can't stay long."

In front of Carnegie Hall, concert-goers in evening wear were having a hard time flagging down taxis in the cold drizzle. But wouldn't you know it? A taxi stopped to pick us up, while those who'd been waiting longer fumed. We were driven to a dark street somewhere on the lower East Side.

Up the steps into a pitch-dark hallway we went. My host turned a key and we entered a totally dark room. By matchlight I saw that it was empty, except for Paganini's coffin. After I angrily declined his invitation to spend the night in it and stormed for the door, he pleaded, "Don't go. You don't have to spend the night, just have dinner with me. Oh, please, you're my only friend." Dropping his head, he added, "No one likes me."

Trying to be helpful (I always do the wrong thing), I lectured: "Well, Niccolò, look at the way you dress, and just look at this dreary apartment! Why?" "I don't know why. It's just me, the way I am."

His kitchen was a little better, but still candlelit. Worse was his idea of dinner: Sardines, crackers and wine may be fine for a specter, but not for a healthy Texan. A few minutes of that and I had to leave. All the way to the door I heard him sobbing.

The rain had stopped and out on the dark sidewalk it felt good to breathe the lightning-charged air. Fortunately there are subways all over New York, and I was soon in the bright warmth of the apartment house on Verdi Square, relieved to have escaped from Paganini's tomb but sad that I had left a friend in tears.

Lamento

God knows I tried hard, but I never made it. I wasn't good enough to get into a ballet company, nor cute enough to make it into the chorus line of a smash Broadway musical. So one bright day I admitted defeat, packed my cardboard suitcase, walked down Broadway and got on the bus bound for Texas. I never saw nor heard from my friend again.

Years passed and in 1994 I returned to Manhattan to take part in Gay Games IV. My hotel was located across the street from Carnegie Hall, so I made a return visit to the sixth-eighth floor, a scene from my youth. After 45 years, what would I find?

I was stunned. Where once there had been great studios, dancers, teachers and an eccentric pianist, now there were ordinary, ho-hum business offices and nine-to-five workers. I was angry. How could they tear out those sacrosanct studios? How dared they lay carpet over floors soaked with the sweat of thousands of dancers over many decades? I wanted to scream, "You idiots! Do you have any idea what you've done?"

These people — from Brooklyn, perhaps — dressed in strange clothes without holes, sweat or safety pins, were engaging in a strange ritual they called a "coffee break." I inquired, but none were aware, nor did they seem to care, that many of the world's greatest dancers had once trained on this sixth-eighth floor. And none had ever heard of Niccolò Paganini the Second or of his legendary music.

Leaving the building I thought, "Nothing lasts forever, there's no permanence. Well, maybe...If Niccolò is still alive, I know that somewhere he's playing for ballet classes, causing dancers to leap higher and linger in the air longer. I know that he still sleeps in a coffin. And I know that he must be at least 160 years old; his father, Paganini the virtuoso violinist, died in 1840."

Fascinating thought!

Human Spirit
Triumphs Over
Genetic Tyranny
in the Bloodless

GATTACA

Do you feel noble when you go to the movies? Do you believe that independent productions are the only intelligent voices in film? Would you prefer to doze off reading subtitles rather than to cheer as Sigourney Weaver and Winona Ryder kick extraterrestrial butt in Alien 4? Well, leave your Prozac at home and head out to your local Tinseltown 32. The new Uma Thurman/Ethan Hawke pic Gattaca has just opened, and despite all its good intentions, high motives and provoking concepts, it could render the hyperactive comatose.

This is a movie about genetic engineering, genetic testing, genetic hoaxes and... oh, yes, genetics. There's a murder thrown in to spice things up, but mostly it's about...well, you get it. Thank God for the O.J. Simpson trial, or I wouldn't have had all the useless information necessary to follow the plot of this movie.

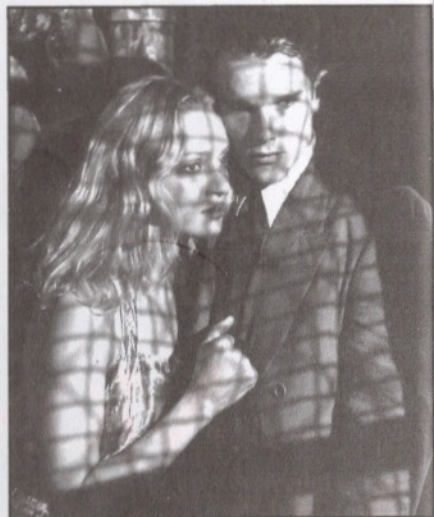

Gattaca is an elegantly detached study of a future society in which genetic manipulation has run amok. The ability to alter a child's DNA determines his or her entire life potential. I didn't dislike this movie; I just couldn't figure out how it ever got made. Stealing much of its mood from Blade Runner, Gattaca tells the story of Vincent Freeman (played by a newly bathed Ethan Hawke), a young man whose genes haven't been altered and who is left behind as part of a new underclass that knows no race. They're janitors and house painters simply because they have crooked teeth or are overweight. Vincent dreams of piloting a spacecraft to one of the moons of Saturn. However, his DNA isn't even up to the level that would allow him to walk into the lobby of the Gattaca Corporation, which is in charge of spaceflight.

Vincent makes a pact with Jerome, a "valid" (genetically refined man) who was crippled in a car accident. They devise an elaborate ruse that lets Vincent pass himself off as Jerome, and he excels. A murder at Gattaca is supposed to provide the plot-line, and the closing of the launch window to Saturn is meant to create the tension. But everyone in this movie is so emotionless that it just sleepwalks forward. Gattaca seems to be more about images and ideas than about emotions and action. As we used to say back in high school, "beautiful house...nobody home."

Irene [Uma Thurman] and Vincent [Ethan Hawke] find themselves endangered by a murder at the highest levels of the Gattaca Corporation in the futuristic thriller Gattaca.

Real, hard-hitting issues — like the potential for extinguishing a "gay" gene, for example — aren't even acknowledged here; the genetic outlaws are limited to 12-fingered piano players and the like. One idea comes through clearly, though. In a world in which our potential, our entire lives, were predetermined, we would know exactly what we could be and no more. The notion of excellence would be nonexistent; to excel, after all, is to go beyond anticipated parameters. The engineered human beings in Gattaca achieve only what they're told they can; Vincent's refusal to accept his lot in life, on the other hand, allows his humanity to guide him. He beats genetics by using his own spirit.

Now if only the super-slacker

Jerome [Jude Law, l] and the genetically imperfect Vincent come up with a scheme to switch identities, allowing Vincent to escape his lot in life.

Hawke could express emotion, we might believe he hadn't been engineered either. I could swear I saw the strings guiding his puppet-like performance in some scenes. Uma Thurman (whose beauty might allow one to forgive just about anything) does a nice job of playing off Hawke's stony presence. Portraying a "valid," she nevertheless has a small genetic flaw in her heart muscle. Getting to know Vincent leads her to realize that she can become more than just the sum of her genetic code.

The real star of this film is the production design. The cool Frank Lloyd Wright buildings, the sleek '50s suits everybody wears and the electric cars that look like Tuckers and Citroëns serve to create a timeless feel. It's a world in which everyone has a label, including frauds like Vincent. He is a borrowed ladder, climbing up through society on someone else's DNA. Even the imagery in Gattaca is great; there's a spiral staircase in Vincent's apartment that suggests the double-helix structure of DNA. And the word "Gattaca" is constructed out of the symbols for DNA coding.

All in all, Gattaca shows lots of potential, but poor follow-through. It carries all the emotional impact of an overproduced A&E cable special. Great accents, pretty locations and interesting ideas, but you spend most of your time trying to figure out just how they got the actors to perform without a drop of blood flowing through their veins.

DOUBLE YOU'S WILLIAM NARAIN TALKS ABOUT DANCE MUSIC, EARLY SUCCESS AND WHAT'S REALLY IMPORTANT

Double You's story started in 1985, when William Naraine, Franco Amato and Andrea De Antoni began their artistic collaboration. In 1991, the boys met with producer Roberto Zanetti, and their success was instant. In December of the same year, "Please Don't Go" was recorded; the song was released in January of '92 and became an instant hit, selling over 3,000,000 copies worldwide. What followed was a virtual "Double-mania," propelled by a string of hits that included "We All Need Love," "Because I'm Loving You," "Run to Me"; hundreds of sold-out shows all over the world; and the platinum and gold albums We All Need Love and Forever. After two years at rest, spending time creating songs for their next album, Double You has just popped out with a smashing new single, "Somebody," the first track from their forthcoming new collection. We had the chance to spend some time with Double You's front man, William Naraine, recently.

TWT: So, tell us about the early days.

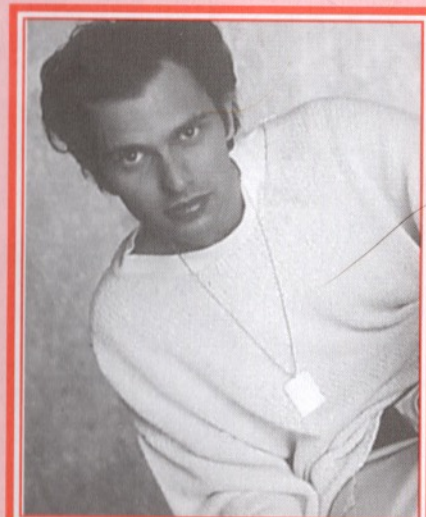

WN: I grew up in London and left when I was 15 and moved to Italy, so I went to school in both England and Italy, of course. And then I just started working, you know, doing other things; like working in boutiques and stuff like that. Eventually I started working with Franco in, I guess it was like '88 or '89. We started doing our first demos and productions and began to have a go at this music business. It took a while, because at the beginning it really wasn't that serious; it was just like a hobby, a once-in-a-while thing. But obviously in '91 it became really serious and in '92 we had our first big hit around the world, which was obviously "Please Don't Go."

Was that your first try?

Whenever "Please Don't Go" came out, that was actually my third attempt — well, my third serious attempt, anyway. We were very lucky because there are bands and people who go for years...and then we had a smash on the third try.

Did you have any icons?

Of course, I mean, like Sting — even though now I don't like him as much I used to when he was in The Police. I really think he's a great artist. I guess there was sort of like a spark there that made me want to get into the whole thing. I grew up with the Beatles; being English, that was like the first group, the first album I ever bought. But then I moved on from there, I listened to everything — George Michael, Terrence Trent D'Arby, tons of Motown stuff, Earth Wind and Fire, Toto; just really everything.

How about the creative process?

It's basically Franco and me writing together. It usually starts off with me, like by myself, at home with the recorder. I'll just work out my idea and put down the melody. And then in the studio we do the arranging and get the melody done and put down the chords, the harmony and everything. And then once we get it about 60% done, we take it to our producer and we rerecord everything there, and he sort of takes it over from there.

How does it feel to have such a huge gay following?

To be quite honest, when you're speaking about the public — I mean, when you're talking about dance music — what I sense is that everything starts from there, anyway. It really always has. Even in the UK, as well, they pick it up earlier.

Why, do you think?

I don't know. I think it has something to do with inside; just pure taste. I think that the gay audience probably does have more taste and they sense a hit before everyone else. I remember when "Please Don't Go" came out in the UK, it was a big gay record. Over there, many of the big hits that cross over will start out that way.

How does performing here in the States compare with performing in Europe?

Actually, between here and in Europe it's about the same. But where it's completely different is in Brazil, for example, where we have a massive following and sold well over 600,000 albums. When we perform there, it's a whole two-hour concert with a band and the whole lot.

Why do you feel that dance music is so much more a part of the pop culture in Europe?

Yes, but I think you've [Americans] just got so much. I notice when I come over here that Americans really want to listen to dance music, and in Europe they really want to listen to rap or Toni Braxton — typical American productions. And that's what I think is happening to the U.S. right now. I really think that [radio] would like to get into this whole dance thing and let it happen; let it really cross over — even though in Europe it's sort of going downhill because we've just had so much for so long.

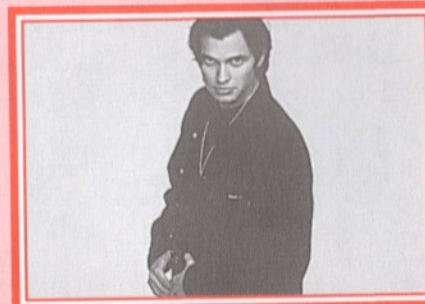

Tell us about the Dolphin label that you and Franco have started.

It's really difficult, because it's just me and Franco at the moment. And then on the other hand, our producer is like, "When are you guys going to get to work on the next [Double You] single?" So it's been really, really trying. Like a couple of years ago I thought that we couldn't combine the two things together — it was just too much. We're going to have a real bash of it for a year or so. I don't know...I don't want to say that Dolphin is going to take off and Double You is finished, because that would be horrible to think. Hopefully we can do both at the same time and well. We do have a single out on Dolphin now and it's actually an American guy rapping and an old friend of ours singing — they go as Funk Electra. They did a cover of the Heaven 17 song "Let Me Go." It's a song that I really liked in the original form and I have to say, I was truly pleased with the final result when we were done. I like how it sounds. Basically, though, at the moment we don't have the time to devote to allow the company to get very big. So the policy is to keep everything light, but later on, of course, we would like to have something really big.

And then on top of it all you manage to have a family; you have a son, right?

Yes, I have a 12-year-old. I was very happy to have a son when I was fairly young, so he's like a friend, actually.

How does he feel about having a pop star for a dad?

Well, he's very proud, obviously, especially with his friends, but I don't want that to get too important for him. I just ask him not to boast, like at school, about the whole thing. He's really a wonderful kid, so he keeps everything under control, you know, because really, it's not the most important thing.

What is?

Love is. We have to stop thinking about money, power, you know — all of that — because it's killing love. We just need to take the time to have love. That's why I wrote the new song, because we all need love, and "Somebody to Love." There's already enough bullsh.

Empowering Stone Soup

Dear TWT:

On behalf of AIDS Foundation Houston and our food assistance program, Stone Soup, I would like to extend a heartfelt thanks to the Greater Houston Gay & Lesbian Chamber of Commerce and Empower '97 for their generous support. Through Empower '97, AFH collected over 1,000 pounds of food for our clients.

I would also like to extend a special thanks to Debbie Phinney and Anita Renteria for the tremendous job they did in organizing Empower '97. They should be commended for all the hard work and dedication that went into making Empower '97 the success that it was.

Stone Soup has a very simple and clear mission: to provide supplemental food, household supplies and toiletries to low-income persons living with HIV/AIDS. Stone Soup served over 1,100 clients last year and expects to see a minimum of a 10% increase in that number for 1997. With organizations such as the Greater Houston Gay & Lesbian Chamber of Commerce providing tremendous support, AFH can continue to respond to the needs of people living with HIV/AIDS.

No 'Women' for Him?

Dear TWT:

Am I the only one who noticed that Bill McCartney, founder of Promise Keepers, can't bring himself to utter the word "woman" in public? Patricia Ireland would be amused to know that in Mr. McCartney's bizarre lexicon she is the President of the "National Organization for Ladies." The word "woman" is the linguistic and psychological equivalent for the word "man"; it denotes a female adult, the equal of an adult male. The fact that Bill McCartney avoids it like an obscenity speaks volumes about his mindset. Bill, your Freudian slip is showing!

And there is something a little pathetic about half a million sobbing men who have to make promises to an imaginary fundamentalist deity in order to do the right thing by their wives and families. Real men "love their neighbors as themselves" and "do unto others..." without having to lean on the broken crutch of religion. It is sad to see so many well-intentioned men sell their Godgiven birthright of liberty and personal responsibility for the sorry porridge of blind obedience to authority and dogma. May God, in infinite compassion, continue to gently show us the truth. And may we find the courage to embrace it, and one another, no matter where it may lead. Promise Keepers, wake up!

Put Hill on City Council

Dear TWT:

It has recently come to my attention that Ray Hill is running for a position on Houston City Council. I would like to express my support for Ray as I have known him for many years.

First, Ray Hill, in his many, many years of selfless work in the Houston community, has consistently and always stood up for the little guy, whether he be black, gay, Asian, Hispanic or straight. He has taken two cases all the way to the Supreme Court of the United States to affirm the rights of the average man in the street. Ray Hill has helped to get gays in the Houston Police Department. And the list goes on and on.

Ray Hill has established himself as consistent, which cannot be said for 99% of the politicians. And he has networked in the system for years to get things done. Citizens of Houston, put Ray Hill where he can do you the most good, on your City Council.

Theater LaB Houston ends its season of "Fascinating Women" with the Southwest premiere of the comedy/drama Cakewalk. Peter Feibleman's play is based on his own memoir, Lilly: Reminiscences of Lillian Hellman. Cakewalk recounts the laughter and passion that exist between any two people attracted to each other — especially if one of them is 20 years younger and the other is a famous femme fatale and playwright. Performances are Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m., with two Sunday evening shows (Dec. 7 and 14) at 6 p.m. All seats are $18; for tickets or further info, call the Theater LaB Houston box office at (713)868-7516.

New Heights Theatre, 339 W. 19th St. in Houston, presents the local premiere of Jefrey Hatcher's Scotland Road. Combining suspense, intrigue and psychodrama, it's set in this decade and centers on a beautiful young woman in turn-of-the-century clothing who's found floating on an iceberg in the middle of the north Atlantic. When rescued, she speaks only one word, "Titanic." Reported to be a survivor of the ill-fated liner, she's taken to an isolated coastal spot where she's interrogated by a Titanic expert intent on cracking her story and revealing her true identity. The action climaxes when a reclusive old woman, the last living survivor of the disaster, is brought in to confront the young woman and quiz her about Scotland Road, the ship's hidden passageway by which lower-class passengers could reach the first-class promenade deck undetected. Shows are Thursdays at 7:30 p.m. (tickets $10) and Fridays and Saturdays at 8 (tickets $15) through Dec. 6. For tickets or more info, call (713)869-8927.

OCTOBER 31 - NOVEMBER 6

ROSEANNE
NOVEMBER 3, 1952

Let's welcome November this week. That month sees a lot more planetary traffic plowing through the signs of Sagittarius and Capricorn, giving both an independent and conservative streak to our thoughts, hearts and actions. Put this energy to good work for the rainbow cause. Get out and vote, for goodness' sake, and make a loud, proud statement at the polls.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 - Nov. 22) All that glitters is not gold, or so you realize this November. It's time to review your value system to see if it's sync with where you're going in life. Yes, money is important, but money alone cannot buy you true happiness (cheap thrills, perhaps, but not true happiness...). It's a sad queer Scorp who only has cold cash to cling to in the lonely winter nights.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 - Dec. 22) There's tremendous planetary energy swirling around your sun sign this month. This means that you're the center of attention and the life of the party, at least in early November. Begin new projects immediately and get out there and meet new, fabulous folks. Gay Archers can also use a complete makeover. Yes, it is possible to improve on perfection; throw out those 1980s togs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 23 - Jan. 20) If your intuition is working overtime, chalk it up to all those planets in Sagittarius in early November. Queer Caps are much more effective than usual in any charitable enterprise, so be sure to give your all for any rainbow effort. Great personal transformations are possible if you approach life openly, honestly and proudly. Freedom feels rather good once you've given it a try.

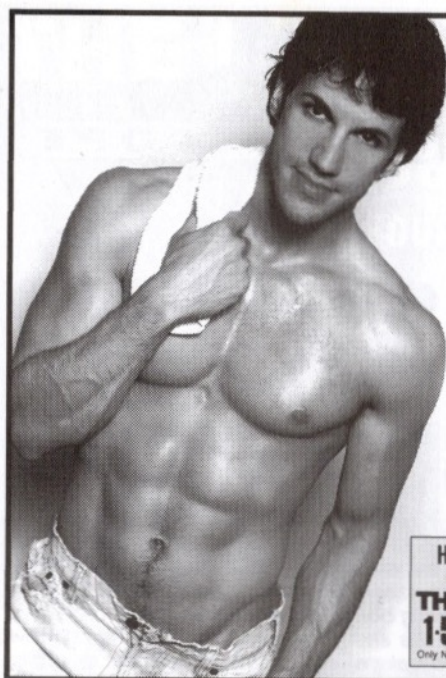

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 - Feb. 19) Aqueerians

are belles of the ball in November. Encircle yourself with good gay friends and you'll be guaranteed to have good gay times. Pal around while you can; by mid-month you'll be awash in all sorts of spiritual stuff and will be on too high a level to deal with zany antics. You'll have a mission, and Aqueerians are hell on wheels when it comes to missions.

PISCES (Feb. 20 - March 20) Proud Fish are ready to polish the nameplates on their offices and why not? You've worked hard to get where you are and now you should be able to enjoy the benefits. Before you know it, friends are in on the action and want to celebrate with you. Call the tune and watch the group dynamic dance along. Consider choosing disco.

ARIES (March 21 - April 20) Gay Rams undergo a complete change of philosophy as both Mercury and Pluto change the landscape this month. Travel widely and take good notes. Later you'll put all this mental energy to good use in your career. You're not a shy soul; get in your tank and plow through the professional battlelines. But take only gorgeous prisoners.

TAURUS (April 21 - May 21) Gay Bulls experience a sexual (re)awakening in November. Good thing, too; all these planets are carousing in zesty Sag, which gives you the energy of a horse (and maybe the package of one...). Try to gain a little personal insight before you ride off into the sunset to explore exotic and interesting locales. The light of self-knowledge will illuminate even the darkest corners.

GEMINI (May 22 - June 21) Naive, optimistic gay Twins may be yearning for the perfect relationship in November. If you haven't quite found it yet, maybe the problem is with you. Take a look at how you approach relationships; mutual respect, integrity and, yes, maybe a little bit of humdrum regularity should all be part of the package. Think about it.

CANCER (June 22 - July 23) Go with the job flow, dear, queer Crab; this is not the time to slack off and hope others will fill in the gap. Exercise is also part of the regime. Get that bod in shape for the holidays. Mercury and Pluto put your efforts to the test with some excellent results. Later this month, you can concentrate more on partnerships. Try a little mood music and the old red light bulb. Okay, make it pink.

LEO (July 24 - Aug. 23) November starts off with a bang of a good time, but as the month progresses you'll have to turn your attention to the job. Proud Lions should make the most of this carefree planetary energy since even pastimes can have monumental impact now. Who knows; the simple doodle you scribble today could be the beginning of a great gay masterpiece tomorrow.

VIRGO (Aug. 24 - Sept. 23) Proud Virgins must shout it out to family members, come what may. So what if the chickens come home to roost? Haul out the frying pan and serve fried chicken! You can no longer hide your life from family members, and why should you? Ultimately, do what you have to do and celebrate with or without them later this month. Make it pink champagne.

LIBRA (Sept. 24 - Oct. 23) The lines of communication are humming in early November. Gay Libras should shout it out from the tops of the mountains and watch the reaction. Maybe you should consider a little electioneering for pride-committed candidates. Your words have impact, and you also have the innate diplomacy to pull it off. Later this month, you'll be content to schlep around the house.

Center Site of Competition
For 14th Annual Event.*

HOUSTON — Cowboys and cowgirls from around the state converge on Houston next week when the Texas Gay Rodeo Association holds its annual rodeo, four days of competition and fun that will also benefit nonprofit organizations.

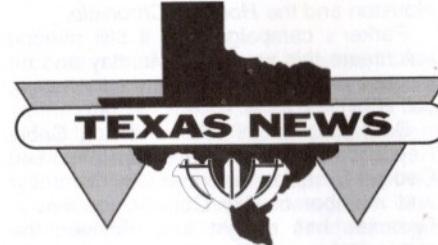

Contestants in the rodeo, a tradition that dates back to 1984, will compete in categories like calf roping, breakaway calf roping, team roping, bronc riding and bull riding. There are also three "camp" events, steer decorating, wild drag and goat dressing. Belt buckles will be awarded, and the top five placers will receive ribbons. Contests are also held to choose the Mr., Ms. and Miss TGRA titles.

The rodeo kicks off with royalty competition on Thursday, Nov. 6, at 7 p.m. at the Brazos River Bottom, 2400 Brazos. A dance will be held on Friday at the host hotel, the Renaissance Hotel at 6 Greenway Plaza, from 8 p.m.—midnight.

The rodeo itself starts at 9 a.m. on Saturday, with opening ceremonies at noon, at the Great Southwest Equestrian Center, 2501 S. Mason Rd. in west Houston. Dance finals will be held back at the Renaissance Hotel at 7 p.m. The rodeo resumes on Sunday at 9 a.m., and an award ceremony will be held at the Renaissance at 8 p.m. Entertainment runs 1-5 p.m. on both Saturday and Sunday at the Equestrian Center.

Dance workshops will be offered throughout the weekend at the host hotel. Individuals interested in participating should contact Helen P. Foshee at (512) 251-5329.

Founded in 1983, TGRA held its first annual Texas Gay Rodeo near Houston in November 1984. There are chapters in Austin, Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio, all of which have hosted the annual rodeo. In 1993, the state organization hosted the IGRA Finals Rodeo in Fort Worth, then just two weeks later staged the Tenth Annual Texas Gay Rodeo in San Antonio. Next year's event returns to that city.

TGRA, a volunteer, 501(c)(3) organization, has donated nearly $2 million to charities in Texas, most of them AIDS-related. Each chapter decides where to donate its allotted funds.

Tickets are $5 to the Friday night kickoff dance and to the Saturday night dance finals, and $15 each day for the Saturday and Sunday rodeo performances. Weekend ticket packages (available through Friday night, Nov. 7) cost $35. TGRA is also accepting financial contributions to donate tickets to people with AIDS. For tickets, send check or money order (payable to TGRA, Inc.) to Michael A. Gaitz; P.O. Box 710462; Houston, TX 77271-0462, or call (713)777-1444.

GAY CANDIDATES SPARK INTEREST IN HOUSTON ELECTIONS

*Log Cabin Decides Not to Endorse

HOUSTON — Three races with openly gay candidates and a contest that has seen gay baiting by the incumbent have stirred up interest in city elections, which climax with voting on Tuesday.

Annis Parker is running for at-Large Pos. 1 on Houston City Council, which is being vacated by Gracie Saenz, who is running for mayor. Although the seat she is seeking is a citywide office rather than one representing a district, Parker's campaign has had some advantages. There is no incumbent in the race, and none of the candidates have much name recognition with voters; Parker has been able to raise enough money to run television ads the last few weeks; and she has drawn the endorsements of a diverse group of individuals, organizations and media outlets, including U.S. Rep. Sheila Jackson Lee, the HGLPC PAC, Log Cabin Republicans-

Houston and the Houston Chronicle.

Parker's campaign said it still needed volunteers this weekend, Monday and on election day, Nov. 4. For more information, call (713)521-7338.

Both the caucus PAC and Log Cabin Republicans-Houston have also endorsed George Greanias, a former City Controller and member of City Council, for mayor. Greanias has sought and received the support of gay voters in city races going back to the early '80s.

Among candidates on the ballot for Houston City Council Tuesday are Annise Parker and Ray Hill, competing for at-large Pos. 1 and Dist. D, respectively

Recent polls have shown Greanias trailing former police chief Lee Brown, who also has support in the gay community, and Robert Mosbacher, Jr.

Also running for Houston City Council is activist and former HGLPC President Ray Hill, who is challenging District D incumbent Jew Don Boney. Boney won the support of the HGLPC PAC after a spirited discussion at the group's endorsement meeting, while Hill has the support of Log Cabin Republicans-Houston. Montrose is part of District D, which is about 75% African-American.

Terence O'Neill would be the first openly gay (and the second Hispanic) person to represent District 8 on the Houston Community College board of trustees if he wins. O'Neill has said that one of his priorities would be to see gay people included in HCC nondiscrimination policy. O'Neill filed too late to receive the endorsement of the HGLPC PAC, but asked the group for its support. He did win the endorsement of Log Cabin Republicans.

Controversy struck the race for City Controller when the incumbent, Lloyd Kelley, used gay-baiting tactics against one of his opponents, Sylvia Garcia (who has the support of the HGLPC PAC). Kelley was criticized for the tactic, and later apologized. Both Kelley and Garcia sent representatives to Monday's meeting of Log Cabin Republicans-Houston seeking the group's support, but Log Cabin voted not to make an endorsement in the race.

The Log Cabin Republicans voted at an earlier meeting to support the Houston Civil Rights Initiative, a ballot measure that would end the use of affirmative action for women and minorities in city employment and contracting.

NEW YEAR'S EVE GALA IN AUSTIN BENEFITS LOCAL AIDS AGENCIES

*Umbrella Foundation Sponsoring
Black-Tie Party at Four Seasons.*

AUSTIN — Over 850 are expected to attend the Umbrella Foundation's Third Annual New Year's Eve Gala, which will be held at the Four Seasons Hotel and which benefits AIDS Services of Austin and ALLGO/Informe-SIDA.

The local New Year's tradition began in 1995 as a joint effort between organizers Bruce Salzer and Don Mass as a major fund-raising event for Christopher House, a facility that provided health care for AIDS patients. Salzer and Mass decided that a black-tie New Year's Eve event would be perfect for raising both funds and awareness while giving people a change to celebrate. Last year's party drew more than 800 guests who contributed over $26,000.

Because of increased home health care, Christopher House was forced to close its doors last spring. The Umbrella Foundation, a 501(c)3 nonprofit organization, was set up to continue the fund-raising and awareness efforts in the gay and lesbian community.

Committee co-chairs for this year's celebration are Kevin Cline and Armando Zambrano. In addition to food, drinks and a deejay, organizers have planned a silent auction featuring the work of local artists and designers. Tickets are $75 per person. Anyone interested in purchasing a sponsorship of the gala may contact ASA at (512)451-2273, Informe-SIDA at (512) 472-2001, Cline at (512)320-5600 or Zambrano at (512)404-4589. Corporate sponsorships are available at four levels, each with various bonuses: Blacktie & Top Hat, $750; Sequins & Diamonds, $1,500; Fireworks & Champagne, $2,500; and Underwriter, $5,000.

AIDS Services of Austin has for ten years provided services directly to people with HIV and their loved ones, as well as timely AIDS prevention information to the public. Informe-SIDA is a bilingual, multi-cultural HIV prevention education and service agency established in 1988 as a project of the Austin Latino/a Lesbian and Gay Organization.

HOUSTON PRIDE TAKES PART IN 16TH INT'L CONFERENCE IN NEW YORK

Julie Siska Elected Co-President, Guy Burns Region Three Director.

NEW YORK, NY — The International Association of Lesbian and Gay Pride Coordinators held its 16th annual conference, Interpride 1997, Oct. 16-19 in New York City. The event was hosted by Heritage of Pride, the organization that plans local pride celebrations, under the banner of "Keep the Torch Burning: Passing on the Skills and Visions of Pride."

The conference was attended by 73 pride organizations representing cities across the U.S. as well as Canada, Argentina, Australia, Austria, England, France, Germany, Israel, Italy, Mexico, Northern Ireland, Scotland, Sweden and Zimbabwe. U.S. delegations included the Pride Committee of Houston.

Conference activities included numerous workshops, caucuses and meetings, and the association elected a board of directors for 1998. New officers are Co-Presidents Teddy Witherington (of San Francisco) and Julie Siska (Houston); Vice Presidents, Glen Paul Freedman (Atlanta) and Perin Hurewitz (New York City); Secretary, Davace Chin (San Francisco); Treasurer, Kurtis Andree (San Diego); and Executive Administrator, Cathy Reno (Cape Cod, Massachusetts). Guy Burns of Houston was elected to represent Region Three as Regional Director.

The IALGPC meeting also saw the selection of an international theme for the upcoming pride season, "Unity Through Diversity." Local chapters are free to choose different slogans, however, and Houston has settled on "Unified, Diversified, Electrified," which reflects both the international theme and the fact that Houston will be holding its second nighttime pride parade next summer.

In addition to Siska and Burns, the Pride Committee of Houston's delegation of 11 included Susan Guerrero, Fred Reninger, Pete Contreras, Tina Travis, Jim Shumsky, Joel Lutringer, Gary Masse, Jack Valinsky and Nick Brines.

For more information about 1998 Houston pride celebrations, call the Pride Line at (713)529-7969, or attend the group's monthly general meeting, held the third Tuesday of each month at 7 p.m. at the Metropolitan Multi-Service Center, 1475 W. Gray.

SAN ANTONIO TEA — This Halloween weekend promises to be the definitive party weekend in River City. All the local haunts will go all out beginning tonight and continuing through Sunday....

Be sure to stop by the Annex and the Eagle Mountain Saloon and catch hot dancers like Danny [right]. The gang over at the Eagle Mountain Saloon have all the preparations in place for a fabulous Halloween weekend. You won't want to miss the special "Hot Male Dancers Revue" or the costume contest to be held at the stroke of midnight tonight. There'll be cash prizes for the most original, most humorous and best overall costumes. On Saturday night, again at the stroke of midnight, there'll be a contest for the best-looking cowboy in San Antonio, and again there'll be a cash prize to the winner. On Sunday, the EMS will round out the weekend with their traditional "Sudz for Studz" beer specials, blockbuster well drink prices and football. Don't miss out on all the fun....

The Annex just keeps packing in the good-looking men, and they've added something new for Sundays — great well drink prices to add to all the fun and cruisin' that has become the club's tradition. You have a choice of either looking at the hunks or watching Sunday afternoon football — or both. The Annex will be featuring a Halloween costume contest this evening at the stroke of midnight, with cash prizes for the most original costume. On Saturday night, the festivities continue with a cash prize awarded to the best-looking leather/levi/cowboy type. So, wear your best-looking outfit and strut your stuff....

Encore Video and Zebra'z, San Antonio's finest retailers for gay apparel, magazines, videos and much more, continue their sale, with 75% off of the items that made them famous. Stop by and grab some goodies to surprise those trick-or-treaters....

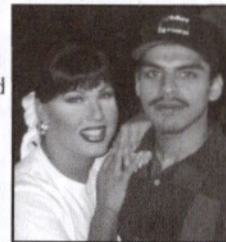

Be sure to visit the new Captain's Crew downtown, the brother club to Sparks. Sparks favorite Peter can be found slinging cocktails behind the bar while male dancers shake it up in the Crew's dancer cage. The Captain's Crew is just one block off the River Walk, which boasts a spectacular light show and Haunted River rides just for the occasion...enjoy both while you're downtown....

Our CRUISE CAMERA caught Saint diva Shady Lady, George and Rose [above, l-r] hanging out last Sunday night. You can catch Shady this weekend during the Saint's blowout Saints and Sinners Ball. Tonight, Shady will kick off the party with San Antonio's hottest male dancers, super low drink specials and after hours with deejay Junior Hernandez. Lucky ticketholders will win fabulous door prizes including TVs and VCRs. Join them again Saturday for hot male dancers and after hours, and on Sunday, enjoy a special edition of the Super Sunday Show featuring Shady Lady, Pauletta Leigh, Erica Andrews and special guests Niesha Dupree from Atlanta and Miss Gay Alamo City USofA Talissa Michaels....

The Bonham Exchange invites you to come as your favorite "other-sex" alter ego and join in the Halloween hysteria during the Bonham costume contest. Winners will receive over $500 in cash and prizes. Fridays are Martini Madness Night at the Bonham and tonight is no exception, with special prices on the cocktail that made James Bond a legend. Saturday, the Bonham hosts the Day of the Dead Party with all their regular drink specials and no adult cover till 10 p.m. While you're there, look for local partiers Vanessa and Vincent [right, l-r], known to hang out at the downtown landmark. For more event info, call (210)271-03811.

AUSTINTEACIOUS — Happy Halloween everybody! Are all of you ghouls, ghosts, gals and goblins ready to hit the town? With a plethora of costume contests and theme parties to attend, tonight promises to be a festive and wicked occasion. Just remember to put a change of clothes in your car, or you may find yourself leaving someone else's house in your costume the next morning! And goodness knows a six-foot guy in a tutu isn't pretty at 10:30 a.m.!...

Charlie's had quite the week this week. The dynamic Whitney Paige was the special guest at the Super Sunday Show, and truly showed the crowd why she continues to win award after award. Talent, talent, talent! Mondays are festive, too! Hostess Heather Thomas started her comedy contest this week, and all the "girls" were just lovely. With a $100 prize for the winner, many boys will put on a dress and strut their stuff. Jame Perry tells us that her amateur strip show on Tuesdays brings out so many cute guys that she's started holding the final judging at her house. I guess she's added a "one-on-one interview" category to the contest. Don't forget the costume contest at midnight

If you're looking for a neighborhood bar to call home, go see the good folks at 'Bout Time. It's a festive place on the north side with fun friends and a good time waiting to happen. This past weekend was the club's first annual Halloween Carnival, with tents all over the volleyball courts out

The Edge is always a fun place to see and be seen, especially for Leather Night on Sundays. The Back Door Buy is getting more popular by the week — put on a little leather and come be a back-door boy with these guys (left). The fabulous Rob is still belting out songs for Karaoke Night along with the best crooners in town. This festive bunch of folks has been known to put on spontaneous production numbers. Speaking of festive, Li'l Debi continues to spin the hottest tunes in town. Come cha-cha to his magical music....

Across downtown, the Blue Flamingo is always rockin'. Cute bartender Jerry (right) is always smiling and usually shirtless. This is always a winner in my book. The newest thing at this hot spot is the new jazz band called Streetwise that performs on Sundays — a super duo singing R&B, jazz, rock and pop tunes. They put so much personality into their shows that even a grumpy gus would start tapping his toes! If you know the name of a song, chances are they'll know it, too, and requests are welcome. It's nice to have live music in a gay bar in the live music capital of the world. Come on down, the boys are waiting for you....

Rainbow Cattle Company is a cowboy's paradise, with cold beer served by friendly bartenders like Larry (left), tight jeans and good music — three things that'll make a man want to hold on for more than eight seconds. All dance lessons are now on Tuesdays starting at 8 p.m., right after tacos at 6.

If you like live music, Thursdays are your big night. If you want to run with the NFL, come watch football and cheerleaders with other sports-minded gals. If you like to chase women — and we know you do — come out to Austin's only lesbian bar. Tonight's Halloween festivities will feature the chilling and electric Ursula's Curse, a regular headliner at such hard-edged venues as The Backroom. Fronted by the intense Miss Ursula herself, Melissa Marciano, this band is eerily appropriate for a dark Oct. 31st. Of course there's a costume contest at midnight and prizes all night long....

Last Sunday's Tenth Annual AIDS Walk Austin was a huge success, with an estimated 50,000 people turning out to support this worthy cause. AIDS Services of Austin tells us that $20,000 was raised in one day for the event. They wish to thank all the kind citizens of Austin and elsewhere for their support and contributions. Together we can make a difference.
