THE FOSSE POSSE

Going into the theatre with no expectations can be a wonderful thing. I hadn't read about Fosse prior to opening night, so I mistakenly assumed that it was a musical about director/choreographer Bob Fosse himself. However, when it became clear that the show was a tribute to his remarkably original style of choreography, set to some of Broadway's most well known tunes, I was immediately drawn into a testament to a creativity that few ever witness, let alone possess.

Many fellow drama queens would be perfectly content to sit through this musical, simply to enjoy the wide variety of showtunes belted out by enormously talented singers and brought to life by beautifully sculpted dancers. Of course, you expect great choreography from anything surrounding the name Fosse, but this musical ups the stakes considerably with inspired, updated interpretations. In numbers like "From This Moment On", Fosse's choreography is taken intact for the first 45 seconds or so, but then it morphs into variations on the theme with grand effect. Other numbers borrow props, dance moves and other diverse elements from several songs, for a completely unique perspective on familiar songs.

This touring production's biggest asset is the ensemble of gifted singers and dancers, many of which get well deserved moments in the spotlight during the show's biggest numbers. Additional kudos go out to the director and producers for making a two-hour and twenty-minute performance feel like nearly half that, thanks to high-energy pacing and a nostalgic repertoire for Broadway musical fans of all ages. The finale, set to Benny Goodman's "Sing, Sing, Sing", is fittingly extravagant and could prove educational for some, as well. After all, many current generations only know Goodman's song as the "Chips Ahoy!" jingle. But I guess it's oddly appropriate, because Fosse is most definitely 1,000 chips delicious and there are a few dancers whom I wouldn't mind taking home to dunk in a little milk, either.

PREACHING TO THE CHOIR

Leslie Jordan is a comic genius-and I don't throw that compliment around much. In fact, I don't know that I've ever placed those two words together to describe anyone before, so today is somewhat historic. When you see Hysterical Blindness And Other Southern Tragedies that Have Plagued My Life Thus Far, Jordan's autobiographical journey from Tennessee to Hollywood, you will undoubtedly agree.

Jordan has a face that you recognize and trust to make you laugh. Numerous guest starring roles on some of TV's biggest hits solidify any feelings that you've seen this man somewhere before. Or you may remember the brief-but-deserved praise I awarded Jordan in a recent review about his portrayal of an institutionalized drag queen in another brilliant Southern comedy, Sordid Lives (due in theaters this summer). The point is, however, that whether it's a bit part on TV, a pivotal role in a movie, or the center of attention in a stage musical, Jordan is the embodiment of humor. He could read from the ingredient list of vegetarian sausage and leave you curled up on the floor laughing and believe me, there's nothing funny about vegan breakfast meats. (Yes, my diet is making me bitter and desperate. Why else would I have referenced cookies in my previous review?)

hysterical blindness
& Other Southern Tragedies That Have Plagued My Life
Thus Far

But enough about my quest for a pin-up body and Jordan, the Actor. You'll soon find that Hysterical Blindness is justifiably centered around him, so let's move on to Jordan, the Writer. In this laugh-out-loud production, he has created a one-man show with a Shakespearean-style chorus of actors who sing and sometimes interact directly with him as he spills the beans and combread about growing up gay in the deep south. At the center of his often tortuous existence as a flamer-with-a-baton, is his crazy mother and his family's strong connection to the Baptist church. As most of you know, nothing is as scary as a chapel full of zealots when you're young and gay. So, after failed attempts to be straightened out, Jordan announces that he's off to Tinseltown to be discovered. All hell breaks loose as his mother falls victim to the psychosomatic plagues that prey on mothers of homosexuals. Thousands of miles away, Jordan copes with humor and graceful wisdom.

Each song and every line is dizzyingly funny on the surface, but many of the jokes mask the more serious meaning behind the laughter. Jordan finds that organized religion is an easy target for his witty barbs, but even as he skewers the closed-mindedness and hypocrisy of the church, he still manages to show the tenderness and love that many people really do find in 'La Casa de God'.

In a nutshell, Hysterical Blindness is the kind of small production that allows community theaters to thrive, and such will be the case for Fort Worth's Circle Theatre, where the play is marking a return visit. With its friendly staff and cozy setting, the theater space is simply perfect. Add that to the divinely inspired talents of Jordan and his superb supporting cast, and you have this summer's first sure thing worthy of your gay entertainment dollar. Hallelujah, and see you at the potluck.

Grade: A+

BY CHARLENE LICHTENSTEIN

Romantic Venus and feisty Mars change signs this week, leading us into 28 days of new temptations.

This planetary conjunction sets off intensive and lusty quests for fulfillment. Where will you sugar your roll? Ready your sweet tooth and take a bite.

GEMINI (MAY 22 - JUNE 21)

Greedy gay Twins can be seduced by the smell of money when both Venus and Mars conjunct in Cancer. Financial security and the prospect of retirement become a magnificent obsession but are you prepared to sell your soul for the profits? What the heck! Mother always said it's as easy to fall in love with a billionaire as it is with a millionaire.... or something like that!

CANCER (JUNE 22 - JULY 23)

Sexy Venus and fiery Mars in your own sign demonstrates why rainbow Crabs are one of the most charismatic and disarming folks. But be careful during the Venus conjunction to Mars; The temptation may be to open that big yap of yours and settle an old score but you must know that revenge is one of the few dishes that is best eaten cold... and quietly. It's calorie free.

LEO (JULY 24 - AUGUST 23)

The overwhelming urge to do good may unnerve even the most composed proud Lions. Venus in Cancer conjunct Mars makes you the wild, gay doyenne of the charity circuit. You become a veritable tornado of good gay deeds. Use this prideful time to set the standard and get things done, but know when to pass the torch to the next young thing. Then rest on your lovely laurels.

VIRGO (AUGUST 24 - SEPTEMBER 23)

Show your pride this week as both charismatic Venus and aggressive Mars conjunct in Cancer. Queer Virgos are sucked into the social whirlwind, party after party, and can be driven to excess and fatigue. (Lucky thing!) Remember that pacing is everything, cousin; don't try to take on more than you can handle in two hands, but grab firmly and have a great gay time!

LIBRA (SEPTEMBER 24 - OCTOBER 23)

If greed is good, pink Libras are the greatest. Venus and Mars traipse into Cancer and shine a beneficial light on career opportunities but the conjunction can also make any effort to improve your professional standing an exercise in sharp, political maneuvering. Little fish can become hungry sharks under this transit. Heck, they can become piranha. Power breakfast anyone?

SCORPIO (OCTOBER 24 - NOVEMBER 22)

Proud Scorps are primed for adventure when Venus and Mars enter Cancer. It's time to look beyond your front door and travel far afield to some exotic and exciting place. Aggressive Mars can make you quite adventurous while Venus, the planet of love, may entice you into a steamy affair of the heart with a stranger. And if I know Scorpios, the stranger the better!

SAGITTARIUS (NOVEMBER 23 - DECEMBER 22)

Lusty queer Archers feel even more enthusiastic when Venus and Mars enter Cancer. Not only does lovely Venus stir up the embers of passion by conjuncting energetic and feisty Mars, but you can also gain a new perspective on life with every new liaison. I always say that it is good to experience life from a different angle, in this case ahem.... prone.

CAPRICORN (DECEMBER 23 - JANUARY 20)

Look no further than your own back yard for happiness, dear, queer Cap. Venus' foray into Cancer highlights partnerships and reinforces the need for commitment and sharing. The conjunction to Mars which is also moving into Cancer seems to heighten the need for one to one connection to a fevered pitch. Breathe in and breathe out cousin; take things one tiny step at a time.

AQUARIUS (JANUARY 21 - FEBRUARY 19)

Although it's tempting, try to keep your heart in check on the job. Over the desk romances sound interesting and wrought with possibility, but can wind up being rather uncomfortable (especially if you forget to put the sharpener in the drawer). Venus in Cancer encourages you to throw caution to the wind, and the Mars conjunction creates a tornado. Hold on tight!

PISCES (FEBRUARY 20 - MARCH 20)

The travels of Venus and Mars cause a party ruckus in your chart now. Eat, drink and be merry but beware of indigestion and hangovers while these planets conjunct. Happy pastimes become onerous full times as the drive to create and enjoy reaches a fevered, out of control pitch. Don't get carried away by an artistic dream. Dreamboat maybe, but not a dream.

ARIES (MARCH 21 - APRIL 20)

The home fires smolder and queer Rams stoke the flames. Venus and Mars in Cancer encourage you to either upend (through renovation, restoration or remodeling) your home environment or upend your relationship with relatives, especially parents. Whatever way this energy takes you, don't compromise! Use this time to set the course for a new lavender you.

TAURUS (APRIL 21 - MAY 21)

As diplomatic as you usually are, Venus and Mars in Cancer will tempt you to speak freely and rather carelessly. The fur flies! Words have a way of getting away from you and take on a life of their own. This may not be a bad thing if it's done in a sincere way. If you wear your heart on your sleeve, some caring stranger may scoop it up for safe keeping. Purrrr.

Houston

Tales Of The City

by phil johnson

Phil Johnson's recent series on Gay Texas History was so well received, that we asked him to delve a little more deeply into what made gay Texans begin pushing the envelope where freedom and human rights were concerned. In this three-part series, Johnson explores the growing pains of Houston's Gays and Lesbians during those glory days when we came into our own and began to test our wings as a powerful people with a strong voice.

The Klan Marches Through The Neighborhood

Houston's gay leaders pleaded for the community to ignore a scheduled march down Westheimer by the Ku Klux Klan on June 9, 1984. Charles W. Lee, grand dragon of the White Camelia Knights of the KKK said the march was to protest the growing acceptance of homosexuals. "What we are saying is we are tired of seeing them on our streets."

Spokespersons for the gay community, Lee Harrington and Linda Levell asked gays to be conspicuously absent. "The ideal would be for the parade route to resemble a ghost town." Several bars along the route offered free drinks to those who stayed inside. Most patrons did and the parade fizzled for lack of an audience.

Onward Christian Soldiers

It all started in the summer of 1984 when City Council member Anthony Hall proposed an ordinance to make official what was already going on - the hiring by some city departments of professed homosexual men and women. He never intended the issue to become explosive.

But on June 19, the council chamber was filled with an odd coalition of church groups, Ku Klux Klan members, and mothers with young children. The anti-gay group sang "America the Beautiful" and "Onward Christian Soldiers". Some carried signs, "Did the city of Sodom pass a similar ordinance?" Despite their shouts of, "vote no," a narrow council majority, that included Mayor Whitmire, enacted it. As police emptied the almost-violent chamber, some yelled, "It's not over yet. On election day we're going to get you all!"

"When people learn the details of the sex acts these homosexuals perform, there's no way they could support the lifestyle. It's so gross."

Said University of Houston law professor G. Sidney Buchanan, "If you consider that city positions have nothing to do with youth role models, I think perhaps the city had an obligation to pass such an ordinance to protect the constitutional rights of gay applicants."

Others disagreed. Within days council member John Goodner and Russ Mather, chairman of the Harris County Republican Party, gathered 61,000 signatures to force a referendum. As expected, opponents of gay rights lost no time in linking the ordinance to children, to Aids and to "special privileges." Said Goodner, "When people learn the details of the sex acts these homosexuals perform, there's no way they could support the lifestyle. It's so gross. What goes on behind those closed doors is very much all of our business. It could very well affect our children."

Brought in for the anti-gay campaign was controversial psychologist Paul Cameron, who urged the city council to quarantine gays until a cure for Aids could be found. "Homosexuals pose a grave threat to public health," he said. Cameron's visit had been sponsored by the Foundation for Traditional Morality in Austin.

Houston's Chamber of Commerce (Louie Welch, president) painted a picture of the city becoming another San Francisco and opposed the "proliferation of new, special-interest minority groups" and "granting special status to homosexuals."

At an anti-gay rally, the extremely slanted-against-gays CBS documentary Gay Power, Gay Politics was shown. Only when an attorney for CBS challenged its use did the Committee for Public Awareness agree to stop showing it.

Other outsiders brought in to help defeat the ordinance were long-time gay rights opponent Dr. Stephen Hotze of Austin and Judi Wilson, who had played an important part in overturning the gay rights ordinance in Dade County, Florida, that had initiated Anita Bryant's Save Our Children crusade.

The Gay Political Caucus hadn't wanted the fight. It had been thrust upon them. Unprepared and heavily outspent, gay leaders tried to campaign on the issue of human rights. The opposition campaigned on everything but human rights.

Furthermore, other than the efforts of the ACLU and Mary's Lounge, GPC leaders got little support from the gay community. On January 19, 1985 the ordinances went down to a crushing defeat, 4 to 1.

Steven Hotze crowed, the referendum, "signaled the demise of the GPC influence in city politics. The gays were revealed for what they are: a very small special interest group trying to gain special acceptance of a lifestyle that historically has been rejected by civilized societies."

The Holy War of Morality

Reveling in overturning Houston's recently enacted gay rights ordinance, 4 to 1, Dr. Steven Hotze organized the Straight Slate. Under the "Campaign For Houston" banner, its goal was to field a group of conservative candidates in the November 1985 election that would defeat Mayor Whitmire and the eight city council members who had voted in favor of the ordinance.

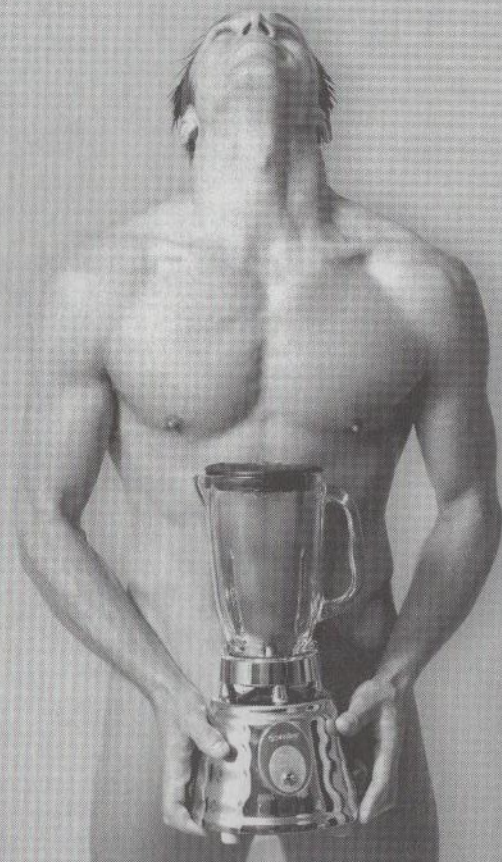

In addition, the Straight Slate would close gay bathhouses and sexually oriented businesses as well as prohibit people carrying the AIDS virus from working in schools and day-care centers; working as food-handlers; working in blood banks or in medical or dental jobs. Workers in those positions would be tested for AIDS and would be required to carry health cards, verifying that they were free of the disease.

According to Hotze, the Straight Slate would also rid Houston of the "riff-raff" - gay bathhouses, nude modeling studios, porn parlors - that was sapping the city's economic vitality and destroying its reputation as a haven for families.

Next week, we find out the results of the morality-charged election, in the third, and final installment of this special series.

DJ MONTY Q

If you have spent much time at all traveling around to circuit parties, then I am sure you know the name of MONTY Q. If you've ever heard Monty spin, then I'm sure you know that Monty is a DJ who never fails to set a crowd of its ears. I would surely call him a trailblazer, but he has a unique way of doing so without bombarding a room with hours upon hours of pan-rattling. In his own words, "I can be progressive as they come, but there's nothing that says you can't be guaranteed a good time on some familiar ground as well."

"I'm sort of twisted in all different directions when it comes to my musical tastes," exclaims DJ MONTY Q, whom we find at the turntables for the WINTER PARTY 2000 CD from Centaur as well as JOHN BLAIR PARTY-VOLUME 3 on Logic compilations. Resistant to classification as a certain type of DJ he continues, "it really comes through in my DJ sets too, because I don't like to stay in one place for too long. If I were out dancing, I wouldn't want to dance to the same beat over and over for 6 hours." As such, Monty has delivered a JOHN BLAIR installment boasting a highly diverse, yet brilliantly cohesive track listing.

Born Montgomery Eckart, "Monty" is a German citizen although he has lived in the US since the age of two. He began his music career in '84 as the Music Director for the progressive collage station in Miami, WVUM-FM. During that time he was also playing local special events, small bars, and eventually larger Spring Break parties. Eventually, Monty would find it quite lucrative to book himself as a mobile DJ, playing for (believe it or not) weddings and large corporate events. However, because of the diversity of people who would attend such events, he developed an astute sense of timing and how to please a crowd. "If you can get 200 people ranging from age 8-80 to dance in broad daylight on a Sunday afternoon...now that's a feat," Monty exclaims.

By the early 90's, Monty's reputation had preceded him to the degree that returning to the club setting became inevitable. Q moved back to Miami Beach, where he gathered a huge local following playing such venues as AMNESIA and the WAR-SAW BALLROOM. The buzz on Monty was so big that GLORIA ESTEFAN requested that he play for her star-studded 40th birthday bash at her home.

The past two years have found Monty touring rigorously, while maintaining residencies in Miami (Crowbar, Salvation), Los Angeles (Probe, Factory, Orbit), New York (Twilo, Limelight), Trax in both Denver and Washington DC, the Fire Island Pines' Pavilion and countless engagements in between. Monty's circuit credits include White Party Sunset T in Palm Springs, Pines 99, Winter Party 2000, Toronto Leather Ball, Latin Fever

fresh beats

Puerto Rico, Millennium March on Washington, and encore appearances in Australia.

Monty's association with John Blair began last year when John booked him for a guest appearance in New York. Always in tune with what his party-goers like, John immediately noticed that Monty made a strong connection with his crowd and the result is JOHN BLAIR PARTY VOLUME 3-DJ MONTY Q. Additionally, because of his huge impact as a circuit DJ he was chosen to do the WINTER PARTY CD along with TONY MORAN...a stunning 2-CD collection from one of the industry's fierce purveyors of dance music. Hey, guys. Just a quick note to let you know that I recently came across your website and am blown away with what I've seen. At last a great site for men interested in other men. I'm impressed.

I can't tell you the number of times I've tried to find a place on the Web where I know I won't be wasting my time or money. Until a friend told me about thenumber.com I was convinced that a decent gay website was as difficult to find as a top in Fort Lauderdale.

Admittedly my experience with the Internet has been pretty much limited to e-mail and AOL. But I was tired of doing searches on the words like "gay" and "sex" only to be sent to some online support group for lesbian single mothers in recovery, or a so-called "hot gay site" with photos guaranteed to kill an erection faster than you can say "Golden Girls Swimsuit Calendar." You know the drill: these sites promise you all sorts of study miracles only to frustrate you with screen after screen of cheesy ads and invitations to spend more and more money. And no matter how horny I am, my life is too short to wait an eternity for a page to open, or to pay a small fortune to see a choppy video of two crackheads in Germany trying to get it up while hiding their scabs from the camera.

Another source of frustration for me has been that most sites I've visited are too damn hard to use. Maybe it's because I'm a creature of habit, not to mention a computer dunce, but I don't have a clue what a Java script or chat client is (nor do care to find out). And what the hell is a message rule? The only rule in my life is "no losers."

So you can imagine how surprised I was to find that your site is quick to load, easy to use and looks better designed than anything I've seen. It goes without saying that I love the photos and footage of naked men and the fact that it's all FREE! I work for myself but it's the sort of site that I would not be embarrassed to have on my computer at work.

OK, so now I look at the articles but the first time I went straight to the Profiles area to see who was online and after doing a simple search was surprised to find that there were a lots of guys within cumming distance of where I live. I was bit nervous but figured it pays to advertise so I posted a profile of my own and then proceeded to the chat rooms. Because websites like AOL are allergic even to the word "gay," I've always found that the only decent chat rooms are buried where you would never think to look.

On TheNumber.com I managed to find what I was looking for within seconds and found it easy to strike up a conversations. The first couple of times I was content to just flirt online but I've since taken the plunge, swapped numbers, and have met up with a few cuties in my area. Hell, I've even managed to find a cute plumber in the Classifieds section. I'd go as far as to say that a visit to TheNumber.com has become a daily ritual for me.

From now on I'm going to be a real cyber queen and do all my cock-shopping online. Thank you for reminding me why I hate the bar scene: I'd rather be at home having sex.

Happy Little Camper,
Fort Lauderdale (FLA)

ALL ABOUT HEALTH & FITNESS

THE DIET FOR 'NO BODY' BY M. KASTEN

There has been a surge—about 1 in 5 Americans are now overweight to the point of being obese. New studies just published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, suggest that Americans are getting fatter and fat kills. The U.S. Centers for Disease Control show that the number of Americans that are 30 percent over their ideal body weight soared from about one in eight, in 1991, to nearly one in five this past year.

With all of these new fangled and old fangled diets floating around, its no wonder people are grasping at whatever they think will work to take off these unwanted pounds. Recently, the biggest hyped diets, and most popular, are the no or low carbohydrate, high protein, high fat diets. "The Zone Diet" and "The Adkins Diet" are the two most common and, although they are popular, they are not effective at keeping the weight off nor are they healthy alternatives to losing weight. However, it is true, you will lose weight.

Pork rinds, beef jerky, hot dogs, bacons and hamburgers (without the bun) sound more like junk-food junkie foods than that of someone trying to lose weight. These diets promise you can shed pounds while eating all the meat, cheese, eggs and fat you want. The trick is to lay off the carbohydrates and sugars. In the 1960's the high protein hype started as the "Adkins Diet". Then in the 1970's it was repackaged as the "Stillman Diet". In the 80's it was presented as the "Scarsdale Diet" and now it's back. The high-protein diet is based on the misconception that carbohydrates alone induce weight gain. All the best selling high protein diet books state that carbohydrates and insulin are the true villains in the battle of the bulge.

Adkins claims that eating carbohydrates triggers the secretion of insulin, which causes the carbohydrates to be taken to the cells and stored as fat instead of being used as energy. Unfortunately, these claims are not scientifically based. They are more anecdotal in nature. He also believes that his diet forces the body to take stored body fat and burn that instead, resulting in weight loss. The fuel the body needs can be burned off through "ketosis" (the process by which the body burns stored fat for energy). The truth? All calories from food are converted into glucose to be stored for energy. Glucose is stored as fat only when you have consumed excess calories, or more calories than you burn in the day. So it's really your overall calorie intake and not carbohydrates that cause fat to be stored. Remember that foods high in protein, like meats and cheeses are also high in saturated fats, which we now know will increase blood cholesterol levels. Also remember that all those foods that you are shoving down your gullet on the Adkins diet are probably high in sodium and other chemicals. Saturated fat and chemicals get clogged up in the colon and just sit there. They have been linked to cancer and other diseases of the intestines. Plus think of eating this stuff all the time. At first it sounds so alluring. You get the green light to eat all this "unhealthy" food you were told to stay away from. After a while though, it gets old. You get the hamburger, but no bun and no fries. You can eat a big steak but no baked potato and tossed salad.

Recently, I had a client, against my advice, start the Adkins diet. In a matter of two weeks he had lost 10 pounds. Now I know that sounds like a lot, however, was it fat or water weight? The other thing was that after day 8 on the diet he was exhausted 20 out of 24 hours during the day and had to cancel appointments with me due to fatigue and dizziness. Naturally, when the body is in a state of ketosis, and it's using protein and fat as fuel, it almost always creates fatigue. Sooner or later, my client went off the diet and gained back the weight he had lost.

You know it's interesting to note here that if you look at cultures that have generally good health and long life-spans, you'll find that their eating habits support the wisdom of a higher carbohydrate, moderate protein, low fat diet. The Japanese for example eat a diet abundant in rice and vegetables with only small amounts of protein. They have very low incidents of heart disease. Seventh Day Adventists are strict vegetarians who consume mainly grains, legumes, fruits and vegetables. They too have a lower rate of heart disease as compared to the general population. And of course, they do not smoke cigarettes and they exercise regularly.

If you want to manage your weight and your blood cholesterol levels, skip the fad diets and stick with a low fat diet. According to most of the government agencies, a heart healthy diet should have a total caloric intake that consists of 15 percent protein, 60 percent carbohydrates and 25 percent fat. Your diet should include plenty of whole grains, cereals, low fat and non-fat dairy products and at least 5 servings of fruit and vegetables every day. Protein should be limited to lean meat, poultry and fish. And exercise. That is the best way to get it off and keep it off. Exercise, exercise, exercise.

If a diet gets presented to you with the words: easy, effortless, guaranteed, miraculous, magical, breakthrough, exclusive and secret, be very skeptical. You can't lose 30 pounds in 30 days and expect that to be healthy. Nor can you expect to keep those 30 pounds off. It just won't happen. If you are interested in losing weight, contact a licensed nutritionist. You can see your certified trainer at the gym also. He/She can give you tips to lose weight safely and effectively and also help you stay healthy. Bets of luck to you in your quest for the best for yourself!

(Unless you happen to be standing under the 8 1/2 ft. disco ball.)

It's the premier pride event of the year in Texas and the most exciting gay and lesbian community event in the entire Southwest. Pride Parade 2000 is a celebration of our community's diversity and unity. A night when the city of Houston sparkles with joy and togetherness.

Last year, over 100,000 people gathered under the glow of an 8 1/2 ft. disco ball, raising their voices as one. This year, we invite you to become a friend of pride and share in the vitality of our community. Join us on lower Westheimer for the Pride Parade Saturday, June 24th, at 9:00 pm.

Obituaries

SHARON FAYE (CAMP) RUTLEDGE
December 28, 1965 - May 12, 2000

Sharon had a heart of gold and dearly loved everybody, including the gay and lesbian community. She leaves behind her husband of fourteen years, Robert, two sisters, Shawna of Waco and Sharla of Haltom City and her mother, Faye of Cleburne. She also leaves behind numerous aunts, uncles, cousins and friends. The uncle that best known in the community is Raphael Aleah
 (Teddy Bear.)

A brief memorial service was held on May 19, and graveside service was held on May 22. She will be missed, especially for her humor and the jokes she used to tell. The world has become a little less fun with her absence.
